Slashes in municipal expenditures, including the extinguishing of every other street light in the city, cut of 5 per cent in department expenses, and aggregating an estimated saving of $800,000 a year, were agreed upon yesterday in a conference between Mayor Curley and heads or representatives of the various municipal departments.

Every department of the city except the police department was represented, according to the Mayor, although Police Commissioner Hultman was sent a formal notice of the meeting and then was further informed of it by telephone.

The Mayor and the conference decided to extinguish half of the city's 5000 arc lights, beginning June 1, which will mean a saving of about $127,000 for the balance of the year.

An item of $24,000 wanted by police for the purchase of forty new automobiles was scratched, an item of $30,000 for granolithic sidewalks was eliminated, and three items of $25,000 each for upkeep of public buildings, for fuel, and for stationery, postage and supplies, and one of $50,000 that was to go into the reserve fund for accident claims and contingencies—all were crossed off.

In addition, the mayor issued warning to all city employees that a saving of five per cent in expenditures must be made in all departments, some way or other—which would mean a further saving of $435,000 on the basis of his $8,750,000 budget.

If this saving is not evident by next Dec. 10, every city employee will be forced to take a week's vacation without pay. Curley said.
POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

By JOHN D. MERRILL

No one knows what will happen to the financial program on which Gov. Ely and the Republican leaders, like Lt. Gov. Bacon, President Fish and Speaker Snouffer, have apparently agreed. It is a matter of common knowledge that, although the credit of the State is still first claims and the chief disturbing factor is the financial condition of the municipalities, the outlook for the Commonwealth itself is at least annoying.

There is no escape from one conclusion—several of the cities are likely to find themselves where Fall River is unless they have assistance from the State. No one knows how the cities should be aided by the State; others insist that the municipalities which have not yet met their affairs with economy and on sound principles should not be compelled, through the taxation, of other citizens, to contribute to those cities which have been extravagant, careless, and perhaps worse. The latter group of economists contend that one of the lessons to be learned from the existing depression will be lost on the ideas of the badly managed cities are to be practically taken over by the State. Here is disagreement on the fundamental issues.

Further, the means suggested, for raising money to meet the situation are no more palatable than the forms of taxation. A proposal which unites in a single measure several different kinds of taxation is certain to bring about a union of all the opposing forces, and the result, may be fatal to the whole scheme. Those who oppose the bill to increase the income tax might be put through without great difficulties, but when to that are added the taxation of the dividends received on the shares of Massachusetts corporations, a tax on women, a tax on other State tax, and the transfer of millions of dollars from the highway fund to the general funds of the State, the party in opposition is certain to be formidable.

It is interesting, as well as amusing, to observe how the opponents to the transfer of the highway fund are by no means exclusively those who pay the taxes. The numbers have been swelled by the representatives of some of the individuals and corporations engaged in road work, bridge, building and other enterprises connected with the construction of highways, which will be materially reduced if $10,000,000 or more is, taken from the Highway Department and used for other State purposes.

There is very vigorous opposition to the sales tax. Against it are not only many who think it will harm their own business and business in general, but also people who believe such a tax bears too heavily on the man of small means.

Consequently, it will not do to assume that the program will go through. On the other hand, it may be that parts of it, and perhaps the whole, will prove acceptable to the Legislature.

The Board of Tax Appeals

Senator Charles C. Warren of Arlington probably broke all the records of the Massachusetts Senate when he held the floor for at least 2½ hours last Wednesday and discussed the bill to increase from three Curley and Victoria Cup Battles on Soccer Schedules Tomorrow

By MARTIN TRAVERS

The Mayor James M. Curley and the Victoria cup semi-finals will be the big attractions for soccer fans this week-end. Dorchester Waverly and Clan MacGregor will meet in the second game of a two-game series in the Curley cup, and Swedish F. C. entertains Riverside of Lynn, at North Brighton.

WAVERLY HELD STATE CHAMPS TO TIE AT QUINCY

The game at Lincoln park is sure to attract another large gathering, as both teams are primed for the tilt. In the initial game at Quincy, Waverly held the State champs to a 1-1 tie, and many shrewd judges pick Waverly to knock the Kilties out of the competition. Both sides are well equipped in all departments, and both adopt the close passing game which is nice to watch from a spectator's point of view. The only fault with the close passing game is that the forwards like to walk the ball into the net instead of shooting at every opportunity.

Manager Bob Greer of the Quincy brigade is confident that the eleven which accounted for Riverside last Sunday in the State cup is good enough to come through with a win over Waverly. The MacGregors defeated their opponents twice in the league campaign and knocked them out of the State cup.

The Waverly management is just as optimistic as the Quincy aggregation, and feels confident that the boys sporting the Waverly colors will take the measure of the Kilties. Both elevens will be at full strength for the battle. The MacGregor eleven will be the same as last Sunday.

Waverly will have Mullen in goal, supported by McAllister and Dunlop at fullback. Logan, McDonough and Horsburgh will form the intermediate line. J. Russell will cavort the right touchline, with Fraser acting as his inside support. Doug Russell and McLachlan will be paired on the left wing, and young Brown will lead the attack. Extra time will be played if the teams are deadlocked at the end of the regular 90 minutes.

CURLEY URGES U. S. AID CITIES

Will Lead Drive for Laws To Release Funds to 1000 Municipalities

MAYOR BACK FROM PARLEY IN CAPITAL

Mayor Curley returned from Washington yesterday with a firm conviction that unless the federal government becomes the financial bulwark of American municipalities, upwards of 1000 cities, unable to meet their obligations, will cease to function.

MAYOR TO DISCUSS ADDITIONAL CUTS

Forced to keep the city's budget within the limit of $36,750,000 set by the Legislature, Mayor Curley will hold an economy conference with his cabinet of municipal department heads this morning at 11 o'clock at City Hall to order them to enforce further reductions in the public service.

As a result of the action of the Legislature, the Mayor will be obliged to make additional savings of at least $800,000 during the remainder of the year and at today's conference with the department heads he will seek ways and means of meeting this demand.

Must Cut Expenses or Take Payless Vacations, Says Curley

Mayor Warns Department Heads of Need of Additional Economies All Along the Line—Lists Curtailments

Mayor Curley told department heads that the various departments would either save 5 per cent. of their budgets by watching expenditures for material, equipment and supplies or every city employee will take an enforced vacation without pay next December.

The Legislature, in setting the appropriation limit for the city at $36,750,000 compiled the city to chop its expenditures by $800,000. He told the department heads that he had worked out a method to cut expenses, and expected the various departments to economize to the extent of 5 per cent.

He said that every other arc light in the city would be kept dark. That will save $127,000. Some $40,000 had been appropriated for new fire apparatus, and $24,000 had been appropriated for new police cars. Both items will be cancelled. Granolithic sidewalks, repairs on public buildings, a contribution to the reserve fund, have been cancelled. Those savings, together with a couple of other minor savings brings the total saving he arranged up to $366,000.

That left a balance of $435,000 yet to be saved, he explained. That amount, about 5 per cent. of the departmental expenditures, he said he had been urged to compel a vacation without pay, but explained he had been informed that 65 per cent. of the city workers were contributing to the support of families other than their own, and added that he believed if the issue was discussed squarely 100 cities would save the 5 per cent. and make it unnecessary for him to order payless vacations.

The city is expected to save for the coming year $440,000 by cutting expenses, $295,000 of which has been set aside by the department heads for the present fiscal year.
Traffic Light Order Calls for His Report

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry was accused in the City Council meeting yesterday of parading Peacock alley with a gilded cane in his hand.

Councillor James Hein of Allston started it by calling for an order that Conry inform the Council how many traffic lights had been installed since January, 1932.

Hein protested against what he called Conry’s failure to have a traffic light at Beacon st. and Audubon circle, Back Bay. Then he said the Commonwealth ave. traffic lights failed to work yesterday morning, a traffic tie-up resulted and he (Hein) could not locate Conry to tell him about it.

Mayor Curley yesterday accused Boston banking interests of forcing him to cut $750,000 more from the city budget, with the result that the police will not get their 24 new automobiles and the firemen will be deprived of $40,000 worth of new fire apparatus. Otherwise, he said, the bankers warned that they would not lend the city any money.

BUDGET CUT FORCED BY FINANCIERS

Boston Must Forego New Cars and Cut Lighting

Mayor Curley yesterday accused Boston banking interests of forcing him to cut $750,000 more from the city budget, with the result that the police will not get their 24 new automobiles and the firemen will be deprived of $40,000 worth of new fire apparatus. “Till you do,” shouted Councillor Albert L. Fish of Dorchester, “You'll find Conry parading Peacock Alley, with his little gilded cane in his hand almost any day.”

ULTIMATUM BY BANKERS

“I had a conference with the bankers of this city,” the Mayor broadcast from his City Hall radio, “and they informed me that unless we economize to the extent of $750,000 additional, it would be impossible for them to lend us money. “So, among other economies, we decided to do away with every other arc light in the city, do away with the construction of granolithic sidewalks, discontinue the purchase of new fire apparatus, and to discontinue the sale of the purchase of 24 cars for the police department, and numerous other economies, and have instructed every department head to inform every employee of the city that rigid economy must be exercised in order that we may reduce five per cent additional.

“If this is done we will experience no great difficulty in saving $35,000, which will be necessary in order to secure the guarantee of funds from the banks.

“There is every indication, regardless of the position taken by the bankers, we will be able to secure the funds from Washington.

The 18,000 city, county and school employees began their campaign of economy yesterday in order to save $95,000, for the treasury during the next eight months so that they will not be forced to take a week off without pay in December.

On orders from Superintendent of Public Buildings John P. Engert, the City Hall telephone operators refused to put through ont-going telephone calls unless they were absolutely necessary as well as official.

BASIN PLAYGROUND PROJECT APPROVED

The city council yesterday authorized the Commonwealth to proceed with the filling in of flats in the Charles river at the end of Nason street boulevard, as a preliminary to the conversion of the site into a small playground and bathing beach.

The project, in which Martin M. Lo- masney is keenly interested, is the contribution of the city to the development of the river basin from the dam to Cottage Farm bridge.

KELLY RESUMES WAR ON MAYOR

Councilman Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester, whose attacks on Mayor Curley have been constant for more than three years, established a precedent yesterday by unreservedly commending the mayor for reappointing Dr. George G. Sears to the board of trustees of the City Hospital.

To make certain that his transformation from a Curley foe to an insider was only temporary, Kelly resumed his private warfare later in the council meeting with a customary weekly denunciation of the mayor.
HARVARD LAMPOON BROADCASTS SKIT ON ITS ANNUAL PARODY

"Whiffle-Whiffle, of the Crimson," Figures in Amusing Program—"Scavenger Hunt" Announced

Some of the Participants in the Harvard Lampoon Broadcast

"News flash, ladies and gentlemen—Henry Eliot Clarke of the Harvard Crimson today referred to the supposed election of James Bryant Conant as President of Harvard as just another Lampoon stunt."

If you heard that last night on the radio, don't believe there is no truth to the election of Prof Conant. "Henry Eliot Clarke," you may recall, became famous when the Crimson announced he had been elected president of Harvard. The only hitch was there happened to be no Henry Eliot Clarke.

This takes us to the studio of WEEI where prominent young debutantes, among them Lydia Fuller, daughter of Ex-Gov Alvan T. Fuller; and Mary Elizabeth Sears, as well as several scores of Harvard undergraduates took part in a broadcast by the Harvard Lampoon staff.

"Lampy" has announced its famous parody number (this year it will be a take-off on the magazine Fortune) will be issued today.

A song—"Here's to Johnny Harvard"—sung by Francis Moore, Francis Johnson, Warren Sturgis and John Cert, introduced the program. Next followed a skit, a scene in a doctor's office. Miss Deborah Jackson, the only woman to take part in the lampoon program, acted the part of a nurse. The patient, one Whiffle-Whiffle, groaned that he was "editor of a Harvard College newspaper called the Crimson."

Either had no effect on him, but after a song about kissing the Blarney stone he was put to sleep and doctors pretended to find in him stolen proofs from the Lampoon's parody.

There was a talk by "Floyd Gibbons," who couldn't be heard because of the din in the studio, announced as a description of the battle between the Crimson and the Lampoon.

Another event was a "scavenger hunt" by those who wanted to be admitted to the Lampoon dance. Some of the things the hunters had to obtain were a white mouse, a ticket to Thunderbolt at Revere, the signature of Mayor Curley on a Lampoon, a live chicken, a live owl, an angry man, a dead codfish of certain size, a live fly, a model T Ford with a brass radiator (long extinct), etc.

Hardan T. Pierpont, business editor of the Lampoon, had charge of the broadcast.

Among those who took part in the "scavenger hunt" were Misses Elles Bottomley, Mary Elizabeth Sears, Leonora Kimball, Karolyn Samson, Elizabeth Babkommen, Polly Powers, Alice Means, Lydia Fuller, Constance Kimpston, Landsdale Watson, Hope Negus all debutantes of this or very recent years.

CURLEY SEES HOPE OF FEDERAL FUNDS

Gives Radio Talk on Needs of American Cities

Three States and more than 1000 municipalities in the Nation are in a condition bordering on absolute bankruptcy," Mayor James M. Curley said yesterday in a radio talk from station WNAC on the subject "Saving the Cities."

Mayor Curley, who is president of the United States Mayors Conference, said this condition has been revealed as a result of the investigation by the Mayors. The situation has developed since Nov 1, 1932, he said.

"Our investigation," the Mayor said, "further disclosed the fact that an average of about 1000 municipalities each month were destined to be in the same condition."

Mayor Curley told of the conference he and other Mayors had last week with President Roosevelt and said that he believes the country's Chief Executive is in accord with the recommendations made to make money available for cities to borrow in anticipation of taxes.

"We were interested not only in the cities that are solvent," the Mayor said, "but likewise in those cities that were insolvent and bordering on bankruptcy and requiring assistance, for after all, 1000 municipalities or more are now in a condition of bankruptcy and three States of the Union are in a similar condition."

He told of the Mayor's committee appearing before a committee of Congress to favor advancing Federal funds not only on tax delinquencies for 1932 but to aid the cities which are hopelessly insolvent.

The Mayor said another meeting is to be held in Washington May 23. The Mayor also told of difficulties Boston is encountering in obtaining loans and discussed the measures to top off another three-quarters of a million dollars on the budget. He said he has ordered the cuts made but added: "There is, however, every indication, regardless of the positions taken by the bankers, we will be able to secure the funds from Washington."

Mayor Curley praised the address of President Roosevelt on the radio Sunday night and asked all to pray for his "continued health and splendid leadership."
Boston Romances Blighted by Boy's Mail Box Looting

A 17-year-old boy, taken into custody yesterday by police, admitted he may be the indirect cause of many a blighted romance throughout the city.

Charged with stealing letters from mail boxes in homes, he revealed that whenever he came across love letters—and there were several—he would read the sentimental contents, smile, and then throw the letters away. He confessed ransacking 25 mail boxes.

The boy is James Torici, claiming to live with his brother at 82 Newton st. address. After stealing letters with bank checks he would call upon persons for whom the mail was intended, announcing that he was a messenger from the bank and that there was a service charge for delivery. Returning with $37 and $28 checks yesterday to Prosper Chapel, of 68 Waltham st., proved his undoing and he was taken in tow by Special Officers Coleman Morrison and John J. Sullivan of Station 4.

He also told police that on one occasion he stole a pocketbook at St. Mary's Church, afterwards felt that it was a mistake and never repeated this type of larceny.

Young Torici declared to the officers that both his parents died while he was barely more than a baby, and, in tears, said:

"If my father and mother were alive today this would never have happened."

Torici claimed that at Lyman School he was forced out to work from 3 a.m. to 7 p.m. for 90 cents a day and that if he was returned to the farm job he "would escape again."

H. will be arraigned in court tomorrow.

HEALTH FUND SLASH OPPOSED

Mayor Curley last night made public two communications protesting against the recent suggestion of the Boston Finance Commission that health activities be curtailed in this city and that a saving of 10 per cent in expenditures, amounting to about $40,000, be effected this year.

The protests were received from Dr. John W. Bartol, president of the Boston Health League, Inc., and from Dr. John O. Egan, prominent Dorchester dentist and president of the Guild of St. Apollonia, an organization of Catholic dentists of the Roman Catholic faith who care for the parochial school children of the archdiocese.

Dr. Egan wrote that the proposed closing of the dental branches of the George Robert White health units would be most unfair to the children of the city, and Dr. Bartol stated that money wisely expended for the prevention of disease results in a substantial saving in the funds that would be necessary if health program were curtailed.

AMERICAN MAYORS TO ATTEND WORLD'S FAIR

Mayor Curley said yesterday that the United States Conference of Mayors had received an invitation from Ex-Vice President Dawes to attend the Chicago Exposition. The Mayor replied that he, as head of the organization and the Mayors of the conference, would attend in a body in September.

CURLEY COURT HAS ANNUAL COMMUNION BREAKFAST

James M. Curley Jr Court, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, held its annual communion breakfast yesterday at the ballroom of the Copley-Plaza Hotel. More than 400 members attended a mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and received Holy Communion.

Rev. Neil J. Cronin, administrator of the Cathedral, celebrated the mass and preached the sermon.
MUST SAVE OR GIVE UP WEEK'S PAY
Warning by Mayor to Keep Within Limit of Budget

Under penalty of losing a week's pay in December through a forced vacation, Boston's 18,000 public employees must conserve the city's supplies and equipment during the next eight months for the purpose of saving $435,000 in the expense of the municipal government.

CLIPS $366,000

This was the ultimatum from Mayor Curley in his drive to clip $500,000 from the city budget this year, to bring it within the appropriation limit of $36,750,000, which was established last week by the Legislature.

The Mayor pruned $350,000 from the budget yesterday through various reductions in important items. But he warned that unless the employees cooperate by guarding the city's interests in every particular to effect a 5 per cent saving in expenses of their departments, the week's vacation without pay would start Dec. 10. "If they save this needed amount in the operation of city departments, the week off will not be necessary," the Mayor said.

Every second high-powered arc light in the city will be extinguished on the morning of June 1 and kept dark for the remainder of the year to save $127,000 in the city's light bill, the Mayor announced.

Cancels New Police Cars

He declared that there were about 500 of these lights on the main arteries of the city, and each costing $84 a year. Half of them will not be used during the remaining eight months. It was suggested that all the lights be turned on later in the night and turned off earlier in the morning, but Police Superintendent Crowley objected that such a plan might result in an increase in crime.

The Mayor also struck from the budget the appropriation of $40,000 for new fire apparatus this year, although this was the smallest amount reserved in the budget for this item in the past 3 years.

To make a saving of $24,000, he scratched out that appropriation for 40 new police cars, which had been requested by Commissioner Hultman.

Hits at Hultman

Commissioner Hultman did not attend the economy meeting of the department heads, drawing from the Mayor the sharp criticism that "the only department head who showed no desire to cooperate by being present was Commissioner Hultman," who was reported too busy.

Other reductions made by the Mayor included the appropriations of $35,000 for monumental sidewalks, $25,000 for the repair of public buildings, $25,000 from the reserve fund for accident claims and other contingencies, $25,000 from the item for stationery, postage and miscellaneous expenses.

Mayor Confident

"We could have effected a saving of $127,000 by enforcing a two weeks' vacation without pay for city employees," said the Mayor, "but my observation disclosed that 60 per cent of the employees are each contributing to the support of one or three families in addition to their own, such a cut would mean a great hardship."

"All working together, we can obviate the necessity for the single week's payless vacation by making the 5 per cent saving in the use of city supplies and equipment for the rest of the year," said the Mayor, adding "And I am confident that we can do it."

OPPOSE CUT IN HEALTH CLINICS

League Raps Demands of Finance Commission

Protesting against the Finance Commission's demands for the elimination of clinics at the city health units, the executive committee of the Boston Health League last night asserted that the units represented essential services and were economically conducted.

The statement was sent to the Finance Commission and was signed by Dr. George C. Shattuck, chairman; Dr. John W. Bartol, president, and Horace Morison.

Mayor Curley, refusing to adopt the reductions ordered by the Finance Commission, announced last night that his stand had been supported by Dr. John O. Egan, president of the Guild of St. Apollonia, representing 27 dentists.

CITY EXPENSES CUt $800,000

Half Boston Arc Lights to Be Shut Off
No New Fire Apparatus or Police Autos

The Police Department was the only one not represented at the conference between Mayor Curley and department representatives at City Hall yesterday.

The conference was called to cut $15,000,000 from the $36,750,000 budget over which the Mayor has control.

Of the budget total, $15,000,000 is for salaries; $5,000,000 for fixed charges and $8,750,000 for equipment and supplies.

As a result of the conference it is planned to save $170,000 by shutting off every second large arc light in the city. They cost $84 each. It is planned to leave 2500 dark. The budget contained an item of $40,000 for new fire apparatus, the lowest amount in years.

That was scratched entirely.

An item of $24,000 for 40 new police cars was also wiped off the slate.

The Mayor was asked if the Police Department had been consulted, and he said the department received all the notices of the other departments and a special telephone message was sent the police yesterday when it was discovered the department was not represented.

Other items dropped from the budget included: Granolithic sidewalks, $90,000; reduction on repairs of public buildings, $35,000; accident claims and contingencies, $50,000; fuel, $25,000; stationery, postage and supplies, $25,000.

All city employees will be notified that five percent must be saved by their economy, and if that is not done by Dec. 10, every city employee will be compelled to take a week off without pay.

If the entire plan goes through there will be a saving of about $85,000.

The Mayor announced that a saving of $75,000 could have been made by compelling all city employees to take a vacation of two weeks without pay, but he felt that would be too great a hardship in view of the fact that almost every city employee is supporting or contributing to the support of one to three families in addition to his own.
Lafayette Mulligan's Candidate for Harvard Presidency Announced Too Late

While the Harvard overseers were plunged into deliberation over what the new president must and must not be, a new nomination was added to the lists today by Lafayette Mulligan, one-time donor of a city key to the Prince of Wales and for many years an influential, albeit unobtrusive, personality in affairs of this character.

The Mulligan suggestion, made to virtually all parties, interested or not, and a fairish quantity of newspaper editors, was as follows: Mr. Mulligan being somewhat addicted to the "man-who" style of exposition it will be necessary for the reader to follow him to the very end of his discourse in order to get the faintest idea of who his nominee may be. However . . .

"In these times of political, social and economic turmoil and confusion," said Mr. Mulligan, "a character has developed in this city so dominating and supreme as to command the attention, respect and admiration of persons in all walks of life. A disciple and protagonist of the ideals of the great Jefferson, by his preachments he has restored faith, revived hope, and created opportunity in a time of crisis for the despairing men and women of his community. A man who has been tried in time of peace and in life and who has measured up to the highest attributes of American citizenship. His economic doctrines have been accepted by the outstanding and representative civic bodies of the city, such as the chamber of commerce, the banking interests and even our powerful Fourth Estate has been sympathetic to his spiritual and intellectual enlightenment. Recently two distinguished members of the Corporation of Harvard College, delegated to restore the financial integrity of the city, conferred with this eminent citizen and signified their implicit trust and confidence in his judgment.

"The highest Executive of this nation—a Harvard graduate—nominated him for an ambassadorship of great responsibility and trust. He refused it in order to better serve the citizens who had conferred so many honors upon him for the past generation and to save the city from financial disaster. We marvel at his audacious courage, his political astuteness, his sagacity and wisdom, and our amazement gives way to admiration most profound. He has marked an epoch in what seemed an apparently hopeless battle in the great work of restoration and reconstruction."

"Consider then his ability to guide our youth and the inspiration which his leadership could impart to an institution of learning such as Harvard College. His sound policies would bring serenity to the povery of Harvard men and he would sow the seeds of loyalty to the institution which he would preside. A scholar, a great and noble patriot, a shining and illustrious product of a race which has supplanted the mildewed descendants of the Pilgrims and Puritans, the Honorable James Michael Curley."

P. S. Mr. Mulligan's communication to the overseers apparently arrived too late for their consideration.

MAYOR CURLEY'S REMARK

At the City Hall conference Saturday, where all departments except the police were represented, Mayor Curley made a remark, perhaps casually, perhaps not, which should be brought immediately to the attention of every city employee. He was discussing the imperative need of additional economies. He mentioned the possibility of a two weeks' vacation for everybody, without pay. He did not like to go to that extreme, he said. But, he commented, if the necessary economies were not instituted, and a commission should take over the affairs of the city,—he looked down at his desk and remarked, "That wouldn't be so good, would it?"

Correct! Boston city employees who know what has taken place in a thousand other cities, large and small, and in private industry, should consider themselves fortunate in comparison. The policy which has been carried out in Fall River makes ours look like a return to prosperity.

STREET LIGHT ECONOMY ATTACKED BY COUNCIL

The city council officially frowned yesterday, but without authority to reverse the decision, on the judgment of Mayor Curley that cutting out every second street arc lamp in the city June 1 for the balance of the year will be economically wise.

George W. Roberts, chairman of the appropriations committee, whose resolution opposing such a move was unanimously adopted, approved "sensible economies," but balked at including the elimination of street lights in an economy program. "It is imperative," he said, "that we should have more rather than less street lights. This plan will convert numerous districts into breeding places of crime."

The council also asked the mayor to reconsider his decision to decrease by $50,000 the budget allowance of $100,000 for salamith sidewalks.

KELLY HALTS, RENEWS WARFARE IN MAYOR

Councilman Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester, whose attacks on Mayor Curley have been constant for more than three years, established a precedent yesterday by unreservedly commending the mayor for reappointing Dr. George G. Sears for many honors upon the City Hospital.

To make certain that his transformation from a Curley foe to an endorser was only temporary, Kelly resumed his private warfare later in the council meeting, with a customary weekly denunciation of the mayor.
CONRY ASSAILED
BY COUNCILORS

Details of Traffic Light Expense Demanded

Order Offered for Abrogating "L" Public Control Act

The refusal of Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry to install a traffic light at Beacon at and Audubon road, Back Bay, inspired an attack on the commissioner yesterday by Councillor James Hein. The City Council was startled by Councillor Hein's demand for detailed information about expenditures for traffic control equipment since Jan 1, 1932. The expense is not only for traffic lights, but for reflecting button signs and painting of streets.

Councillor Hein charged that Commissioner Conry was responsible for fatal accidents on Beacon st and said that Mr. Conry's hobby is "determination to get rid of Traffic Engineer Hurley." The traffic light system was termed "the greatest modern rocket ever brought to Boston." He said traffic officers had increased rather than decreased as promised.

"L" Levy "Two Millions"

Councillor Kelly of Dorchester said that Commissioner Conry, despite the refusal of the hospital authorities and Public Works Commissioner Rourke to close Albany st, did so to enable a contractor to build a tunnel connecting City Hospital buildings.

City Councilors listened with interest, while Councillor Francis Kelly of Dorchester praised Mayor James M. Curley. Kelly declared he really meant what he said, that the Mayor was entitled to commendation for reappointing Dr. George G. Sears to the board of trustees of the Boston City Hospital.

Councillor Dowd offered an order suggesting that Gov Ely recommend a decrease in the rates charged for supplying current to municipal buildings. In conference with officials of the company, he asked for reduced rates applicable to school buildings, and expressed the hope that it would be unnecessary for him to appeal to the public utilities department for a mandatory order. An answer is expected in a week.

CONRY SAYS HIS OBJECT WOULD HAVE REDUCED EXPENSES

The action of Mayor James M. Curley in ordering that one-half of the large arc lights in the city be left dark, as a measure of economy, was opposed yesterday by the Council. Councillor George W. Roberts, chairman of the appropriation committee, offered a resolution opposing the move and it was adopted. "It is imperative," said Roberts, "that we should have more rather than less.

Another angle of the Mayor's plan for savings, that of canceling all the granolith street lights, to the amount of $30,000, was also criticized. The budget calls for $100,000 worth of granolith street lights and the Mayor has ordered it cut to $50,000.

MAYOR ASKS EDISON TO CUT RATES TO CITY

More Detailed Investigation Of Recipients Necessary, Mayor Tells Overseers

A decrease in the costs of the public welfare department, believed by Mayor Curley to be possible of immediate attainment by a more strict supervision and investigation of the 32,000 recipients of public aid, was demanded of the overseers of public welfare yesterday. In a brief conference with them, the mayor stressed the benefits that he visualized as accruing from a more detailed investigation and supervision that had been made by the department.

The mayor's statement of the conference contained no indication that he had been critical of any laxity by the employees of the welfare department, but he emphasized his assertion that he had pointed out that costs ought to be reduced by "investigations of the fullest detail." The conference was a part of the economy program which the mayor has inaugurated to cut expenses in every department under his control. The overseers agreed that progress might be achieved and promised immediate check by the welfare department.

City Contractors Feel Economy Pinch

City contractors see a hard summer and fall ahead. The city of Boston's economy program, now under way, finds evidence of its effect in the bids at the mayor's door. Street and sewer work will be reduced to a minimum and city contracts will do a larger share of it than usual.

The plight of the contractors was well illustrated in the bids on the latest street work advertised, a small job on Porter street, East Boston, between Bennington and Cissell streets, where a widening is planned. A bidding is in progress for the benefit of vehicles which will use the new East Boston traffic tunnel.

Seventeen of the smaller contractors concerns submitted bids for this job of laying the water pipes. Ordinarily not more than half a dozen firms seek so insignificant a project. Special to the Transcript:

Washington, May 9—Among some Massachusetts boosters who have been in the capital the impression will not down that Mayor James M. Curley of Boston may yet get a Federal appointment. Postmaster General Farley has been out of the city for several days, with the result that there has been a slowing down in the dispensation of offices. Those who have been in the confidence of the Boston mayor say that he is still put out because of the failure of the Washington Administration to give him an appointment as ambassador to Rome, and that he has made known his dissatisfaction in language that is unmistakable and that hits the mark. The Administration patronage chiefs, it is assumed, are quite aware of Mr. Curley's feelings in the matter, and it is within the realm of possibility that, in order to make up their pace with the Boston man, they will offer him another post, presumably this time in Washington. There are still a good many jobs to be filled in the United States, even if most of the blue ribbon posts have been distributed.

Meanwhile, from Democratic senators and congressmen, there have been hints of dissatisfaction over the tendency of the Administration to go "over the heads" of senators and congressmen in making appointments. In several instances, it is said, the members from a State or district have not been consulted when men have been picked for various offices.

Later the Administration may face trouble in its own house hold unless it evidences a greater inclination to take senators and congressmen into its confidence than heretofore. For patronage, in normal periods, is one of the congressmen's most jealously guarded prerogatives.

Little to Say About "Brains Trust"

In practically every Government department, the Administration has placed an economic adviser, as a member of the "unofficial "brains trust." Most of these are college professors, or men with an academic background, rather than "political" in the ordinary sense of the word. Democrats in Congress as a whole have had little to say about the appointments of these members of the "brains trust." Provided the academicians do not take positions too far front on the stage, and provided they do not inject themselves too actively into the political controversies that are sure to develop sooner or later, the chances are that they will be accepted as part of the "New Deal."

Democrats in Congress, faced as they are with enormous patronage pressure, would be quite content to "pass the buck" to Farley, Howe and others if the office seekers in their districts in turn would not hold the congressmen responsible for the failure to secure political recognition. This, however, is hardly possible. Most of the Democrats have placed various political workers under obligation to them, and naturally wish a chance to advance the claims of their friends to those who do the appointing. Democrats in Congress as a whole have little to say about the appointments of these members of the "brains trust."
RID NORTH END OF OLD SLUMS

Eliot School Alumni Pass Resolution

On the motion of one of their most distinguished members, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, the "boys" of the famous old Eliot School alumni, passed a resolution at their annual banquet, last night, calling on city and State officials to recommend a loan to Boston from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the destruction of the North End slums and their replacement by modern, sanitary dwelling places.

The former Mayor stated that there are still places in the famous old section—where the Eliot School still stands—which are not fit for dwelling. He declared that other cities have received loans from the same source for similar purposes.

Speaking of the "spirit of the North End" and of the boys of the old school, the former Mayor said: "If the whole world would only get into the spirit of the old North End, it would be a far happier place to live in."

Sumner S. Shore was elected president of the Eliot School Alumni Association. He is a member of the class of '01, and succeeds John E. Badaracco.

McKNIGHT AND TWELVE ACQUITTED

All 13 defendants in the Industrial Bank & Trust Co. case were found not guilty by Judge Burns this afternoon. They were charged with conspiracy to violate banking laws. The defendants are Edwin T. McKnight, Dr. Albert J. McKnight, Roy A. Hovey, Andrew T. Tellstrom, J. Waldo Pond, Henry D. McRitchie, Harry L. Loftus, William J. H. Worthington, Charles B. Stratton, John E. Eton, John J. Curley, Frederic B. Walker and Robert G. Wilson, Jr.

Economy Affects Bunker Hill Day

Bunker Hill Day may lose much of its old-time attractiveness next month because of the decision at City Hall to allow only $2900 for the celebration, compared with $9243 last year. On the mayoral direction that public celebration money must be cut to the bone, Michael F. Curley, the former Mayor, is finding general dissatisfaction among the old beneficiaries. No complaint has come from Charles W. Laughlin, Chief Marshal Joseph F. Curley either O'Connell or Dolan. He has had several contacts with Farley or President Roosevelt in patronage discussions, preferring to wait until the approach of the current special session of the Congress.

It seems to be fairly definitely agreed that Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Massachusetts Democratic state committee will be made collector of the port, while Leo H. Leary, law associate of Judge Edward L. Logan, is Dolan's chief contender for collector of internal revenue.

Miss Mary H. Ward of Boston has considerable backing for appointment as immigration commissioner, but Senator Walsh has expressed the opinion that this position go to a representative of organized labor.

As far as Washington observers have discovered, Gov. Ely has remained completely aloof from the patronage distribution process, although he is a member of the national committee from his state. James Roosevelt, son of the President, has made a few minor recommendations.

Welfare Inquiry Is Ordered by Curley

Absence of the names of hundreds of welfare recipients from the police lists now being compiled, together with allegations made in the City Council that persons were collecting municipal aid under fictitious names, has caused Mayor Curley to order a re-checking of the lists. Chairman Simon E. Hecht of the Welfare Department and Secretary, Walter V. McCarthy, during the course of a lengthy interview here last night, insisted that nobody is allowed aid until his application is investigated. And in cases where names do not appear in the police lists each year for five consecutive years, the applicants are also checked by State investigators, the welfare officials stated.

Moreover, the officials contended that the police every year miss about 30,000 residents in making up the April listing, and thousands of voters are compelled to re-register with the election commission yearly because their names were dropped from the police lists.

For the past year or more the statistics department of the city has been compiling an index of all persons obtaining aid from the city and has been unable to locate hundreds of public aid recipients. The department officials explain that usually persons who apply for city aid move to lower-priced tenements first.

Mayor Asks State to Fight Skeeters

Mayor Curley today requested the State reclamation board to expend part of a $75,000 appropriation for mosquito control in Boston. If his request is granted, State workers will be assigned to duty along the marshlands bordering on the Neponset river in Mattapan and Hyde Park.
Mayor Orders Check and Recheck of the Lists

A special check-up of Boston's public welfare rolls was started last night at the direction of Mayor Curley to determine why the names and addresses of hundreds of persons receiving relief funds from the city treasury do not appear in the city directory or the annual police lists.

The revelation that the names and addresses did not show in the directory and police lists was made to the Mayor by Chairman James P. Belfe, of the City Statistics Department, whose official in the past year has been compiling an index of all persons obtaining aid of any kind from the city.

In a conference with the Mayor, last evening as a result, Chairman Simon E. Hecht and Secretary Walter V. McCarthy, of the Overseers of Public Welfare, explained that hundreds of applicants for relief moved to lower-priced tenements before appealing for city aid, and that for that reason the names and addresses given by them to the Welfare Department did not correspond with the directory or the police lists, which were compiled April 1, 1935.

Another Explanation

That the police every year miss about 30,000 residents in making up the April 1 listing, was another reason advanced by the overseers to explain the absence of the names of the welfare recipients from these annual lists. They pointed out that thousands of voters are obliged to re-register with the election commissioners every year because their names were dropped from the lists by the police.

Insist Adequate Check Made

The overseers insisted that the public welfare recipients were actual residents of the city because they had first been visited in their homes by city investigators before applications were granted. And in cases where names did not appear in the police lists each year for five consecutive years, the applicants were also checked by State investigators, the welfare officials contended.

Orders Recheck of Statistics

Aroused by intimations made by members of the City Council that alleged fakers were collecting under fictitious names, the Mayor ordered the welfare officials to make a re-check of the statistics collected by Chairman Belfe with the assistance of 120 welfare recipients.

Objectors were also recorded by the Mayor on the assignment of a public aid recipient to work at the charity administration building in the Public Welfare department at Hawkins and Chardon streets, West End. He ordered that all positions in the department be filled only by regular full-time employees, approved by civil service.

Check and Recheck

Not only has Assistant Corporation Counsel Hale Power and Special Officer Ernest Fanjoy of the Milk street station been conducting continual investigations of the department, but on special mission from the Mayor's office, Assistant Secretary Frank B. Howland has been assigned to check and re-check on complaints against the welfare cases.

Municipal economy threatens serious curtailment of Charlestown's annual observance of Bunker Hill Day on June 17.

Last year $9243 was expended but only $2900 is available this year, according to Michael F. Curley, director of public celebrations.

It was learned from Charlestown residents that the historic "Night Before" banquet may be eliminated, that there will be only a small fireworks display, and that the annual band concert the evening of June 16 may be omitted.

Director Curley said the city would be unable to pay for participation in the parade by troops of the Massachusetts National Guard and that if any outfits are in line it will be because officers and men decide to volunteer.

Last year troops of the 372nd and 182nd Infantry were in line, as were officers and enlisted men of the 56th Tank Company, 26th Sig Company, 101st Hospital Company, 101st Medical Service, 102nd Ambulance Co., and 131st Cavalry. This cost the city $1,018.

Many posts of the American Legion and of the Veterans of Foreign Wars that took part in last year's parade and received compensation will be asked to cooperate this year and to parade without cost to the city.

Director Curley, City Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown, and Joseph F. McLaughlin, chief marshal of the parade are to meet Friday evening for discussion of the situation.

Mayor Tells Incidents of His Visit to Rome

In the main ballroom at the Copley-Piazza—which was draped with Italian and American flags and a huge golden-lettered banner which read "Benvenuti!"—the Italian officers and men who have been visiting at the Charlestown Navy Yard were last night given a farewell banquet, attended by more than 300.

Mayor James M. Curley, representatives of Admiral Louis M. Nulton and Gen Fox Connor, and leading Italian residents of Boston attended, and speakers praised the Italian contributions to the world.

The dinner was of Italian dishes. The speeches for the most part were in Italian, much to the delight of the visiting officers of the Italian Royal Navy, who were honored by the chief guest of honor, Capitano Conte Valerio Della Campana.

Mayor Curley told of incidents during his visit to Italy two years ago.

"The King asked me if I might offer any suggestions for the improvement of the lot of the common people," said the Mayor. "With American trade in mind, I suggested that they might employ tractors instead of the white bulls I saw them using in the fields."

"The King turned to me with a smile. In simple, direct, profound yet simple words, he displayed an amazing group of economics. He said, "Each bull means that a man is employed. Besides the bulls do not eat gasoline, and when they are old they can provide a family with food."

"I was amazed, too, at the grasp the premier had of economics. I have attended gatherings of the leading professors in economics in our 22 colleges in Massachusetts, but the Premier displayed a greater knowledge of economics than did all the 22 leading professors combined. Only the people interest him."

Features of the entertainment program were a fencing match and some operatic numbers by Josephine Sabino, Giuseppe Gozzi, and Raffaele Martino. Following the speaking there was dancing.

Judge Frank Leveroni, toastmaster, did most of his speaking in Italian, Joseph A. Tomesello presided and headed the committee in charge.

The guests included Ermanno Armano, council general of Italy in Boston; Msgr Richard J. Haberlin, vicar general; Prof J. D. M. Ford, Capt Frank Zannenni, Commander Saverio R. Romano, Silvio Vitale, Vincent Brogna, Michael A. Fredo, Prof Bruno Rovelle, Giovanni Botaridi and Mario Renna.
Representatives of the leading governments of the civilized world are journeying to Italy today for enlightenment in all lines of thought, Mayor Curley declared last night in an address at the banquet and ball tendered the officers of the Italian submarine and patrol ships now at the navy yard.

Some 350 guests were present, including members and friends of the Italian Chamber of Commerce of Boston, the Italian Historical Society, the Sons of Italy in America, the Italian Legion of Boston, and the Banca Commerciale Italiana Trust Company. The Governor and the Mayor, with representatives of the commanders of the First Naval District and the First Corps Army Area, were invited to take a prominent part in extending the greetings of nation, State and city to the guests of honor.

At the request of Mayor Curley, the Traffic Commissioner held a conference this forenoon with the representatives of the North End Improvement Association, who have been requesting the installation of traffic signal lights on Keeney sq, Hanover and Parmenter sts, and opposite the North End Park.

The delegation comprised Ex-Representative Felix Marcelli, now a member of the Metropolitan District Commission; Gabriel Piemonte, vice president; Vincent Pennac, chairman of the board of directors; Joseph Nasoni, secretary, and Philip Puccia, financial secretary.

The record showed that 47 accidents had occurred at Keeney sq in the past five years, 73 on Hanover st, between Cross and Battery sts, and 33 at the North End Park.

The petitioners were insistent that the accident record in the North End, the most thickly congested residential section in Boston, warranted the establishment of traffic signal lights in advance of other localities which did not have such a heavy accident rate.

The traffic commissioner agreed to report to the Mayor the results of the conference and the accident records therein discussed.

SLASH IN CHARLESTOWN'S JUNE 17 APPROPRIATION

The June 17 celebration at Charlestown, this year promises to be very much of a "depression affair" in view of the fact that it looks as if the top appropriation of the city of Boston would be but $2900. Last year the appropriation was $9245.

It is understood that if more cash is not available from some source that the "night before celebration" will be canceled — that there will be no banquet in the armory — no National Guard, Legionnaires or Foreign War veterans in the parade, unless they march without recompense. Last year it cost $1018 for the Guardsmen.

On Friday night Michael F. Curley, director of public celebrations; Chief Marshal Joseph F. McLaughlin and City Councilor Thomas Green of Charlestown will confer on the matter.

MAYOR CURLEY ASKS MONEY FOR MOSQUITO CONTROL

Apparently there are a few mosquitoes and breeding places in Boston. Today Mayor Curley applied to the State Reclamation Board for a portion of the $75,000 appropriated for carrying out mosquito control projects.

MAYOR CURLEY ASKS MONEY FOR MOSQUITO CONTROL

A committee representing the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, headed by High Chief Ranger Mrs. Helen County Galvin, Ralph Smith Mayor, and Joseph Forrester HST, called upon Mayor James M. Curley today and extended him an invitation to attend the annual convention of the organization at the Hotel Statler, May 23-24-25 and address delegates representing more than 60,000 members in Massachusetts.
Mayor Curley has ordered another investigation of the public welfare lists. This one ought to remove the last of the remaining chiselers.

There are some 10,000 persons receiving public welfare aid whose names do not appear in the recent police list, the voting list or the city directory.

It is true, of course, that many people have changed their places of living because of the economic conditions, but it seems rather singular indeed that as many as 10,000 persons receiving public aid could escape the three lists that identify the residents of Boston.

They should be checked and double-checked.

Many thousands of dollars have been wasted in the good name of charity.

In the early days of the depression, when the times were very distressing, the city of Boston adopted the very humane policy of feeding and clothing the people first and of verifying their right to aid later.

But these times are behind us. Certainly there can be no reasonable excuse for spreading charity to professional panhandlers and interlopers who may have flocked into Boston because of this city's reputation for generosity.

Mayor Curley ordered city constables to check up public welfare rolls when he was informed by Chairman James P. Balf of the city statistics department that hundreds of names of aid recipients could not be found on other lists.

Chairman Simon E. Hecht of the overseers of public welfare pointed out to the mayor that the police miss nearly 30,000 persons when listing about April 1. He also explained that hundreds of aid recipients have moved to cheaper tenements since April 1.

Nevertheless, Mayor Curley, spurred by charges in the city council that fakers were collecting aid, insisted on the right to aid later.

Discrepancies in Addresses

An investigation to determine why the names of hundreds of recipients of municipal aid are missing from the directory, police lists and polling lists was under way today.

The appointment was expected momentarily. Although he denied knowing anything about it, Mayor Curley is said to have been consulted and expressed his willingness to take the post.

His resignation as Boston's mayor, according to the Washington gossip, may be expected momentarily.

Mayor Curley was the first nominee to an ambassadorship ever to decline the post. Since his return from his memorable "secret trip" to the White House just before Easter, when he expressed to President Roosevelt his desire to remain at Boston's helm rather than go abroad, there has been recurring reports that he would be offered a high federal position.

Such a position would bring his valued services into the fold of the administration and at the same time keep him in the United States, where, he believes, it is his duty to remain until economic conditions adjust themselves more nearly to a normal basis.

DISTRICT 2 PATCH PAVING CONTRACT IS AWARDED

Simpson Bros Corporation was today awarded by Mayor Curley the patch paving contract for district 2 of the city. The bid of $7,150 was the lowest, and was 21 percent lower than the cost of the work for the district last year.

It is the first contract the company received from the present administration. Recently the Finance Commission complained that the Simpson corporation was being discriminated against. The M. F. Gaddis Company had the contract for district 2 in 1932.

The contract for district 1, amounting to $4,438, went to the Central Construction Company.

City Gains by Settlement of Assessment of Taxes
From Which Boston Consolidated Appealed

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company is about to pay the city of Boston $1,000,000 in advance on the taxes of the company for 1933. It will be the first time in history that such a large amount has ever been paid in advance. Last year certain concerns took tax anticipation notes, thus aiding the city in its financing.

Not only will the gas company make the advance payment but the city will not pay any interest for the period between now and September, when the tax will be due.

This came about as a result of a settlement effected between the city and the gas company, on the latter's petition to the State Board of Tax Appeal to have abated the valuation placed on the company's personal property for 1931.

The assessment on the company for 1930 was $28,000,000. This the Board of Tax Appeal reduced to $21,000,000. For 1931 the Mayor directed the assessors to replace it at $26,022,000. The company again appealed and the settlement arrived at placed the assessment for 1931, 1932 and 1933 at $25,500,000. The company agreed, it is said, to pay $1,000,000 in advance on this year's taxes.

Statement by Mayor Curley

Mayor James M. Curley gave out the following statement today regarding the arrangement:

"Upon the recommendation and with the approval of Mayor Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman this day settled the case pending before the State Board of Tax Appeal of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, which appealed from the decision of the Board of Assessors upon the assessment of the personal property of 1931.

"The settlement was made upon the following basis: The assessment for the year 1931, which was placed at $26,000,000 by the Board of Assessors, was reduced to $24,500,000. The assessment for the year 1932, which was placed at the same figure of $26,000,000, was reduced to $24,500,000 and the Board of Tax Appeal further agreed to fix the assessment of the personal property of the company for the year 1933 at the same figure of $24,500,000.

"The Board of Tax Appeal in its wisdom fixed the valuation of the company's personal property for the year 1930 at $26,022,000. The company had made additions at the Charlestown plant in the interim, which the assessors valued at somewhat over $1,000,000. The settlement on the basis of $24,500,000 is an addition of approximately $2,000,000 over that determined by the Board of Tax Appeal for a period of three years. The gas company has agreed to place in the hands of the city treasurer, in anticipation of 1933 tax assessments, the sum of $1,000,000."

BOSTON ALONE NOT GETTING RELIEF AID

Only Large City Relying on Own Resources

During his recent visit to Washington as president of the United States Conference of Mayors, Mayor James M. Curley asked for certain information from Secretary Paul V. Betters of the organization.

Today Mayor Curley received a telegram from Mr. Betters which said that "preliminary shows that 25 largest cities in the United States, Boston apparently is only city attempting or forced to bear from local resources entire relief burden. In all cities, such as Detroit and Chicago, practically all funds during recent months have come from Federal funds. We are compiling detailed data."

The Mayor appeared to take considerable pride in giving the telegram to the press.

MAYOR INDORSES V. F. W. POPPY DRIVE

Hopes Contributions Are Generous on May 27

Mayor James M. Curley today endorsed the annual poppy drive on May 27 under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. In his letter of endorsement to Henry V. O'Day, chairman of the drive, the Mayor said:

"With each succeeding year both the responsibilities and the burden borne by the defenders of our Nation in the period of strife increases, and it is only natural with the passing of the years that the public becomes just a little more callous and a little more indifferent to the needs of the patriotic men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps whose infirmities are a result of service in behalf of their country. The number requiring hospitalization increases each passing year, and unless the public can be made to realize their duty the burden must be carried almost entirely by those who have already made their contribution of service and sacrifice for country—members of patriotic military organizations.

"I sincerely trust that, in the light of the new faith which animates America, each and every individual in recognition of the weight of the burden borne by the Veterans of Foreign Wars will contribute generously, and that Buddy Poppy Day drive for the year 1933 will equal the success of any previous year."

Now Exceeds Average of Nearby Cities

The city of Boston has lost an important advantage it formerly held in regard to its tax rate position in comparison to other cities of the metropolitan area, according to a bulletin issued by the Boston municipal research bureau today.

It is pointed out that in 1932, for the first time in many years, Boston's tax rate exceeded the average of the 18 surrounding cities of the metropolitan area. In 1920 the tax rate here was $4.21 less than the average of the other cities of the district. This margin in the next five years averaged $6.81, ranging from $6.25 to $7.35.

In the years following, the bulletin states, the city has gradually lost its comparative tax rate advantage and urges genuine retrenchment to restore it.
HOSPITAL DAY IS OBSERVED

Hospitals of Greater Boston threw open their doors to visitors today in celebration of National Hospital Day.

In addition to inspection of departments and clinics, many hospitals provided music and refreshments as part of the day's observance.

Twenty-three clinics of the New England medical center were open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dr. George H. Bigelow spoke at 3 p.m. Ladies connected with the center acted as hostesses there and at the Boston Dispensary, the Boston Floating Hospital and the Tufts Medical School.

At the Faulkner hospital, guests of the trustees will be entertained at tea, after inspection of the hospital. A concert by the patients will be the feature of the day's observance at the Veterans' hospital in Bedford.

Mayor Curley was guest speaker at the exercises in the New England sanitarium and hospital at Stoneham. A flight of planes dropped a congratulatory letter from Governor Ely on the hospital lawn during the event.

The day will be observed tomorrow at the Melrose hospital with a tea, open house and concert.

CURLEY PLEADS FOR VETS' POPPY DAY

Mayor Curley today appealed to the patriotic citizens of Boston to give their support to the annual buddy poppy drive of the Massachusetts dept., Veterans of Foreign Wars, on May 27.

"I sincerely trust that, in the light of the new faith which animates America, each and every individual, in recognition of the weight of the burden borne by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will contribute generously, and that the Buddy Poppy Drive for the year 1933 will equal the success of any previous year," the mayor wrote Henry V. O'Day, chairman of the drive committee.

MARK NATIONAL HOSPITAL DAY

Patients and Public to Take Part in Observance in U. S. and Canada

Today is National Hospital day, observed generally by hospitals throughout the United States and Canada, and the hospitals in Greater Boston have many programs of interest to their patients as well as to the general public, whose interest in these institutions it is sought to arouse.

Twenty-three clinics of the New England medical center will be open for inspection by the public today from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dr. George H. Bigelow, Massachusetts commissioner of health, will speak at 3:30 p.m. at the Boston Dispensary, 25 Bennet street, and the ladies' committee of the center will be hostesses there and also at the Boston Floating Hospital, 20 Ash street. Volunteer workers will guide visitors through the wards, the children's wards and the solarium of the Floating Hospital. Tea will be served at the Floating Hospital.

Among the clinics of the Boston Dispensary which will be open to the friends of the medical centre will be the medical department, of which Dr. Joseph H. Pratt is the chief. This includes the diagnostic ward, which is becoming better known in Boston, especially in its connection with the Birmingham Associates, for the betterment of rural medicine. Another is the surgical department under Dr. Hilbert F. Day, under whose direction the annual physical examinations for caddy camp are held. Still another is the children's clinic under Dr. Harry H. Barron, including the preventive clinic, which examines every child placed by Boston agencies in the foster home. The work of this clinic is allied with that of the Floating Hospital, of which Dr. Barron is chief of staff.

The day will be observed at the Faulkner Hospital from 4 to 6 p.m. today by the trustees of the corporation, each of whom is entitled to invite a guest. Tea will be served during the inspection.

The Veterans' Administration Hospital at Bedford will observe the day, the institution being open for inspection to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Guides will be available to conduct parties throughout the large buildings. There will be a band concert, weather permitting, on the lawn this afternoon and the patient's orchestra and Army corps will give two exhibitions during the day and the patients' orchestra will play in the auditorium this afternoon.

CURLEY SPEAKER

Mayor Curley will be the guest speaker at the exercises of the New England Sanitarium and Hospital at Stoneham, and more than 1500 persons are expected to view the institution. Among the features of the day will be a mock operation, motion pictures, a demonstration of the electrical surgical knife, the baby clinic, a Red Cross booth, balance meals and health food display booths. A band of 25 pieces will play.

Making Payment in Anticipation of Taxes to Aid Boston

One million dollars rolled into the city treasury today in payment of taxes in advance, and it came from one taxpayer.

The money was paid by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, in advance of the 1933 taxes not yet assessed. The payment was entirely voluntary and was regarded as proof of the good will and willingness of the company to help out the city's financial situation.

The advance payment will make it unnecessary for the city to borrow this amount in anticipation of taxes, and will mean a saving of interest charges running into a large sum, for the city.

A year ago, after a spirited hearing before the state board of tax appeal, an assessment of the underground pipes and equipment of the company by the city was reduced from $26,000,000 to $21,500,000 on 1930 assessment.

Mayor Curley thought the award was unwarranted, and ordered the assessors to recompute the assessment of $26,000,000 for last year. The company again brought the matter before the state board of tax appeal.

Officials of the company and Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman yesterday conferred and agreed upon a compromise assessment of $24,500,000. The company thereupon agreed to pay $7,000,000 taxes in advance.
Curley to Use White Fund to Wipe Out City Slums

Boston's unworthy tenement properties will be wiped out and city-owned apartment houses erected on their sites if plans being considered today by Mayor Curley and the trustees of the George Robert White Fund are given approval.

First work will begin in North End, according to plans, and the construction program, extended over a period of years, will lead eventually to disappearance of all insanitary dwellings in the congested residential sections of the city.

The proposed city-owned apartment houses will be operated along lines of those now in use in Great Britain and Germany.

Funds to defray cost of the work will come from the income of the White fund and the trustees of the fund will supervise the operation of the buildings.

Mayor Curley has been interested in this type of public improvement since his visit to the British Isles in 1931. At that time he made a study of the English plan for wiping out slums and was so favorably impressed that he has been working on plans suitable to local conditions since.

New White Fund Project in Mind

Trustees of the George Robert White Fund met at City Hall this afternoon to decide on a project advanced several weeks ago by the construction of a so-called "prado" in the North End from the annual increment of the fund. Plans have been drawn by Arthur A. Shurtleff, consulting landscape architect of the park department.

For months the trustees have been puzzled over a continuance of the operation of Mr. White's provisions for further purifying the city with objects of public utility or general benefit from the income of the property left for that purpose. When the seventh health unit on Whittier street, Roxbury, was dedicated in February, General Edward L. Logan, manager of the fund, announced that probably no more such institutions would be constructed, owing to the heavy burden of maintaining them by the health department.

At that time the North End plan of constructing a breathing place in a badly congested tenement house section near the foot of Hanover street was in contemplation. Owners of property expressed their willingness to sell it to the city at a reasonable charge. Not more than half an acre of vacant space would be necessary to give the comfort of fresh air and sunshine to scores of poor families.

The space could not be used for a playground or as a park. It could be planted with trees, however, and its maintenance placed under the park department.

Boston Gas Co. Pays City Million Tax in Advance

The Boston Consolidated Gas Co., as a token of its good will toward the city of Boston today will pay advance taxes of $1,000,000 to Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman.

The agreement to take this action was reached at a hearing before the State Board of Tax Appeals at which municipal authorities consented to reduce the assessment of property of the company from $26,000,000 to $21,500,000.

The matter was again taken before the board of tax appeals and after the city had agreed to the $1,500,000 reduction, gas company officials volunteered to pay taxes which would not be due until October 7 next.

Mayor Endorses "Y" Swim Classes

Mayor James M. Curley has endorsed the free swimming campaign conducted by the Boston Y. M. C. A. in a letter to C. H. Johnson, public relations director, in which he says, in part:

"I beg you will accept my congratulations to the membership of your organization on the inauguration of a free swimming campaign from May 15 to May 27. The importance of this work is best appreciated when we consider the extremely large number of fatalities due to drowning, which in large part could be prevented, provided the individual knew how to swim."

Any man in Greater Boston over 18 years of age who cannot swim is eligible to receive free instruction by writing or calling the information desk, Boston Y. M. C. A., 316 Huntington avenue, or telephoning Kenmore 7800.

FOR RELIEF OF CITY HOSPITAL

"Farming Out" of Patients Suggested

"Farming out" of City Hospital patients to private hospitals for the purpose of relieving overcrowding at the municipal institution was suggested last night by City Councillor Charles A. Norton of Hyde Park in a public letter to Mayor Curley.

He asserted that the city had an obligation to private hospitals here where he contended were half-empty, while City Hospital was overcrowded, because of economic conditions.

The Mayor stated that the peak had been reached at City Hospital, and that there was every indication that the hospital population was receding with the advent of good weather, the supply of good food and the general confidence in the community that prosperity was returning.
CURLEY GOES ON AIR AT FARLEY DINNER

Tribute to Cabinet
Officer Tonight

By STEVE FITZGIBBON

The proceedings at the testimonial dinner to Postmaster General James A. Farley in Manhattan this evening will be broadcast over NBC-WBZ and CBS-WNAC at 10 and 10:15 respectively.

In addition to the honored guests, the speakers will be Mayor Curley, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins. Grover Whalen will be toastmaster.

GAS CO. WILL PAY $1,000,000 TODAY

Advance on City Taxes Due to Valuation Reduction

The Boston Consolidated Gas company will today pay the city $1,000,000 on account of 1933 taxes, in compliance with terms of an agreement by which the assessed valuation of the personal property of the company has been reduced from $26,000,000 to $24,500,000.

The company will make payment as a mark of good-will and will receive no interest on the money. The tax payment will not be due until Oct. 2.

The composition of the differences between the company and the city took the controversy before the state board of tax appeal on the question of fair valuation of its property.

In 1929 the valuation was $26,500,000. It was imposed by the assessment board of $21,000,000. Mayor Curley has repeatedly assailed the board because of its decision. In 1931 by order of the mayor the assessment was continued at $26,000,000 and the same figure was used last year.

Under the agreement accepted by Corporation Counsel Silverman with the approval of the mayor, the assessment board of 1931, 1932 and the present year will be $24,500,000.

Since 1930 the company has made additions to the Charlestown plant which the assessors valued at more than $1,000,000. The valuation agreed upon is approximately $2,000,000 greater than the figure feared due by the state board.

A provision of the agreement, said to have been made voluntarily by officials of the company, was the payment of $1,000,000 in advance of the assessment of 1933 taxes, to be embodied in a letter received yesterday by Mayor Curley, in answer to a request for information along that line.

GAS COMPANY TO PAY CITY $1,000,000 ADVANCE TAXES

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company is about to pay the city of Boston $1,000,000 in advance on the taxes of the company for 1933.

The payment will be the first time in history that such a large amount has ever been paid in advance.

Not only will the gas company make the advance payment but the city will not pay any interest for the period between now and September, when the tax will be due.

This came about as a result of a settlement between the city and the gas company, of the latter's petition to the State Board of Tax Appeal to have abated the valuation placed on the company's personal property for 1933.

The assessment on the company for 1930 was $26,000,000. This the Board of Tax Appeal reduced to $23,000,000. For 1931 the Mayor directed the assessors to replace it at $26,000,000. The settlement previously placed the assessment for 1931, 1932 and 1933 at $25,500,000.

NAVY YARD AID DUE TO CURLEY

Mayor Curley yesterday called Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson at Washington by telephone and invited him to announce Boston through the navy yard here.

Secretary Swanson agreed to do what he could to reduce the charge for the use of the navy yard's floating dock from $30 to $20 an hour for unloading heavy cargoes at this port.

The navy yard is afloat of 20 tons a day. The naval administration and the Chamber of Commerce, which pointed out that shipments of big German beer vats, weighing about 30 tons and valued at $2,000,000, would be landed here, provided the navy regulation was suspended to allow the vats to be unloaded.

But the vats have not been landed.
BUILDINGS WHICH WOULD BE RAZED IN CURLEY’S PLAN

Mayor Proposes $400,000 Boulevard from the White Fund

City officials today awaited sales offers on the property which would have to be purchased to make way for Mayor Curley's proposed tree-lined boulevard in the North end at a cost of $400,000 from the George Robert White Fund.

PATTERNED ON PRADO

The avenue, which would be constructed after the style of Havana's famous Prado, is dependent on the purchase of 18 parcels of property between Hanover and Salem streets along Webster avenue for not more than 10 per cent. above the assessed valuation of $355,000.

It is expected that the new boulevard will increase property values in the crowded tenement district by admitting light and air and will form a beautiful vista from St. Stephen's Church to the Old North Church. Designs drawn up by Arthur A. Shurtleff, consulting landscape architect of the park department, have been placed before trustees of the White fund.

The plans call for a wide boulevard, set off with fountains, statues and other decorations, for a distance of about 500 linear feet from in front of St. Stephen's Church on Hanover street, along Webster avenue to Unity street and the rear of the Old North Church.

RAZE FAMOUS HOUSE

Among the buildings that would have to be razed to make way for the boulevard will probably be the old Webster House, famous as a hotel a century ago at the easterly corner of Hanover street and Webster avenue. A municipal playground would also have to be taken over.

Mayor Curley, if the project goes through, would consider it his farewell gave the mayor the idea of having a Prado in Boston similar to Cuba's famous street.

Officers of the Massachusetts Housing Association are keenly interested in the plan. They pointed out that it might be possible to obtain a loan from the reconstruction finance corporation to cover the building of dwellings along the sides of the boulevard by the city government.

Up to the present time the income from the White fund has been devoted to the construction of health units, the seventh of which was dedicated in Roxbury last February. At that time it was announced that no further units would be built, as the cost of their upkeep was too heavy a drain on the city health department.

OWNERS WILL SELL

The plan for a Prado in the North end has been under consideration for some time and the property owners affected have signified their willingness to sell at a reasonable figure.

Trustees of the White fund believe the total purchase price of the land will not exceed $380,000 and the cost of transforming the area into a boulevard can be held within $120,000.
WELFARE CHECK-UP

Welfare aid is being distributed to about 32,000 persons in the city of Boston. The statistics department at City Hall has an index of the city which does not contain the names of some 10,000 of the recipients. This means that the habitation of one person in every three persons aided is in question. The situation thus intimated is alarming, to say the least.

Waste and fraud always exist in any time of widespread want and large distribution of public funds. Such are the frailties of human nature that absolute exactitude in the administration of a welfare system is probably impossible. But if one-third of 30,000 persons are imposing on the city, or even one-tenth of that number, it is clear that inexcusable laxity or deliberate deception exists somewhere, or else the whole system has broken down and is incapable of proper functioning. The impression is not administered as efficiently as it should be, that things are at loose ends, and that the public funds are to make should be as accurate and complete as human fallibility admits. If nothing more than normal waste shall be disclosed the public will welcome the assurance that things are better than they seem.

That thousands of persons are missed when the police make their annual lists may be true, but it is not an adequate defence of the expenditure of public funds for weeks and months at a stretch to persons who cannot be found. Last June the city council ordered the statistics department to collect and make a central card index of habitations in the city. These cards contain annotations as to the names of all occupants, and their receipt, if any, of any public money of any kind, whether as welfare or pension, or in any other form. These are the lists on which the thousands of welfare recipients are alleged not to be found.

PROPOSE SCENIC NORTH END ROAD
From North Church to Hanover St

Provided the owners of 18 parcels of land along a proposed improvement agree to sell their properties at a reasonable figure to the city, there will be built in the North End a scenic boulevard, modeled after Havana's Prado, at a cost of $400,000. It will extend from the historic old North Church at Salem st to St Stephen's Church, Hanover st, in the North End.

After a meeting of the trustees of the George Robert White Fund and owners of the real estate involved, Mayor Curley late yesterday made the announcement. The city seeks to purchase the properties in order to wipe out certain dilapidated buildings; provide a bathing spot for residents of the district; and also give to Boston an improvement unique in this country.

The cost is to be borne, providing the deal goes through, from money of the George Robert White Fund, which heretofore has been used for construction of health units.

With Fountain and Statues
Two of the largest owners agreed to sell for assessed value; others wanted 10 percent in excess of assessed value. The Mayor notified them that unless they agreed to the city's terms within 48 hours the project would not be carried out. The time limit on acceptance will be up Monday morning.

The proposed construction calls for a boulevard 80 to 100 feet wide, about 350 feet long, with a fountain, statues and other adornments. From the Old North Church yard it would cross Unity st, pass along Webster av and cut into Hanover st, opposite St Stephen's Church.

It would mean the razing of 10 buildings, including the century-old Webster House at Hanover and Webster av. Property cost would be in the neighborhood of $150,000 and construction would cost $120,000. For more than a decade there has been agitation for the clearing out of Webster av. Part of it was cleared four years ago when a playground of 13,000 square feet was developed.

Held Within Terms of Will

A previous proposal to permit the $2,000,000 White fund to accumulate for the erection of a public auditorium appears doomed by the present measure, a first step in wiping out slums.

The proposed Prado would come within the terms of the will, in the opinion of Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman. The will directs that the net income to be used for creating works of public utility and beauty, for the use and enjoyment of the inhabitants of the city of Boston. It is my intention that no part of such income, however, shall be used for a religious, political, educational or any other purpose which it shall be the duty of the city in the ordinary course of events to provide.

The belief is now that enough health units have been constructed and the trustees consider with favor the Prado, but only if the realty prices are right.
White Fund to Furnish Beautification Project $400,000—Property Assessed for $255,000

SCHEME AWAITING ACTION BY TRUSTEES

Beautification Project Expected to Increase Values In District

Improvement of the North end at a cost of $400,000 from the George Robert White fund by the construction of a tree-lined boulevard after the style of Havana's famous Prado is dependent on the purchase of 18 parcels of property between Hanover and Salem streets along Webster avenue for not more than 10 per cent, above the assessed valuation of $255,000.

Designs drawn up by Arthur A. Shurtleff, consulting landscape architect of the park department, have been placed before the trustees of the fund, who met yesterday for discussion.

BEAUTY SPOT

Originally the plan of Mayor Curley and started by him toward the end of his first administration as a project to build a playground on Webster avenue, the project is now taking the form of a beauty spot which will endure forever with a minimum of expense.

It will increase property values in the crowded tenement sections by admitting light and air, will form a beautiful vista from St. Stephen's Church to the Old North Church and possibily will be bordered by dwellings built by the city to insure the full realization of the scheme.

The Shurtleff plans call for a wide boulevard, set off with fountains, statues and other decorations for a distance of approximately 260 feet from front of St. Stephen's Church on Hanover street along Webster avenue to Unity street and the rear of the Old North Church.

Buildings to be razed to make way for the project will probably include the old Webster House, famous as a hotel a century ago, at the easterly corner of Hanover street and Webster avenue.

A municipal playground of 15,328 square feet on the easterly side of Webster street would also be absorbed.

FARWELL GIFT

Mayor Curley, who is keenly interested in the fulfillment of the plan, consented to its fulfillment as a farwell gift to the city.

Recently his original plan for a playground on Hanover street has been extended, and his recent visit to Havana gave him the idea of giving Boston a Prado of its own, like Cuba's world famous street.

John Hilder, executive director of the Massachusetts Housing Association who is deeply interested in the plan, pointed out recently that in classical times, faced with an economic crisis, the Romans built baths to give the people work, but the baths were too expensive to keep up and fell into ruin.

In more ancient days, he said, the Egyptians solved a similar situation by building the pyramids, at almost no cost, and they have served as a source of revenue to Egypt ever since. Boston's Prado in conception is like the idea behind the construction of the pyramids, he said.

Other officers of the Massachusetts Housing Association said last night, it might be possible to obtain a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to cover the building of dwellings along the sides of the boulevard by the city government.

Without the income from the White fund has been devoted to the construction of health units, the seventh of which was dedicated last February in Whittier street, Roxbury. At that time, Lt.-Gov. Edward L. Logan, chairman of the trustees of the fund, said no further health units would be built, since the expense of their upkeep is too great a drain on the municipal health department.

For some time the trustees have been puzzling over the original provisions of the fund for furnishing the city with objects of public utility or general benefit.

CANNOT BE USED AS PARK

The present plan for a North end Prado has been under consideration for some months, and owners of property already have expressed their willingness already to sell to the city at a reasonable price. More than half an acre of ground would be needed to provide scores of poor families with light and air, and while the space cannot be used as a park, it could be planted with trees and grass and maintained by the park department.

Trustees conferred with owners of property yesterday, and the owners said they will be willing to make their sales at terms early next week.

Mayor Curley last night denied that there is any plan to devote the income of the White fund to the glorification of slums and the construction of modern apartment houses. He believes the Prado would not only be a valuable municipal work, but also would provide the inhabitants of the congested tenement section with the use and enjoyment of the inhabitants of the city of Boston.
Saltonstall and Curley Pictured in Senate Race

Chance of Clash in 1936 Seen if Speaker Keeps Out of '34 Lt. Gov. Contest

By William F. Furbush

Cries from the constantly grinding political mills have worked itself into strange mixture from which arises the questions, what have the Fate in store by way of public life for Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House of Representatives and for Mayor James M. Curley? Will they list these two for a tryout before the year 1936 is ended?

The answers require consideration of many angles, the chief of which is the speculation whether Saltonstall will go after the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor next year, or will he now look upon himself as a candidate for the United States Senate, where he has been mentioned as an aspirant to the seat now held by Senator Marcus A. Coolidge.

Mayor Curley, who temporarily yielded his position before the Bay State political footlights, when he declined appointment as ambassador to Poland, is back again, in the limelight of speculation. Predictions are rampant that President Roosevelt will appoint him to take a dubious fling at Senator David L. Walsh's job in 1934 and thus make himself the political candidate for the United States Senate, should the Democrats take over the latter house.

The mayor is not off the list of prospective candidates, for the mayors of some cities are evidently aiming at the House of Representatives, and the Boston mayor might conceivably be tempted to try for a seat there, despite his recent failure to win the lieutenant governorship.

It is conceivable that the importance and duties of whatever position the mayor may achieve will be of such a nature as to eliminate him from consideration as a candidate for governor next year, as has been done in the past, or as advanced as his reward should he win the lieutenant governorship and thus be put in a position as a senator until adjournment of the Legislature. And, whatever decision he makes on this point, it is foregone conclusion that he is entitled for his meticulous loyalty to the party.

Appreciates Basis of Criticism

Any hesitancy that Speaker Saltonstall may have in deciding whether to aspire to higher office, ranging from lieutenant governor to United States senator, will, without doubt, be due to a strong feeling among the Saltonstall followers, however, that the time has come for the promotion to which they figure he is entitled for his services. They contend that, if he does not go after the lieutenant governorship, he should at least be put in line for the United States Senate.

There are not blind to the strength of the mayor's candidacy, and it is reason to believe, he would not necessarily preclude a Curley-Saltonstall ticket for the lieutenant governorship and the United States Senate, should both men decide to try for that office.

May Be Named After Jan. 1

Despite this latter belief, there are friends of the mayor who will be listening in more or less rapt and hopeful attention to the announcement at the dinner in New York in honor of Postmaster General James A. Farley. Mayor Curley is on his way to attend the dinner and the chief mogul in the matter of Federal patronage, and will be on the tip of his eight minutes of broadcast in eulogy from one "Jim" to another.

Development of reigning talk of a Curley-Saltonstall ticket in turn for his obvious disappointment over failure to receive appointment as ambassador to Poland, have contributed suddenly to those informed of patronage developments as pertaining to the Massachusetts situation, at sea.

According to one authoritative source, however, it may be stated that, although the latest word from the chief executive of the city, duty to which he said prevails above his going to Warsaw, was that he would not go back to Washington for which Mr. Curley is considered available and it should be possible to him, he probably will have a change of heart.

If this deduction by politicians that contemplate the possibility of a Saltonstall-Curley senatorial crack two years hence. For the time being, however, neither Saltonstall nor Curley is giving any hint of his next political move. It is further more considered extremely likely that the speaker will take no action with respect to either the lieutenant governorship or the senatorship until adjournment of the Legislature. And, whatever decision he makes on this point, it is foregone conclusion that he is entitled for his meticulous loyalty to the party.

Special Dispatch to the Globe

STONEHAM, May 12—Excellent weather conditions favored National Hospital Day at the New England Sanitarium and Hospital today, with the result that hundreds of mothers were in attendance with their babies and older children all born under the roof of the institution overlooking Spot Pond.

During the day there was a baby clinic, display of foods, methods of caring for patients, moving pictures on health subjects, plenty of music and for the youngsters a touch of color was added by bright balloons presented to each.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston was the principal speaker. He was introduced by Representative Joseph Milano of MIlcrose.

Raps "Starvation Diets"

The Mayor paid a high tribute to the work of the medical and nursing professions and others in hospitalization work.

He said plans by municipalities in various parts of this country as well as in one or more places in the Commonwealth have been severely criticised. The "starvation diets" for those on the welfare in many places, said the Mayor, "will represent a mortality toll in succeeding generations that it is impossible for any authority to estimate."

During his address three National Guard planes flew over the grounds and dropped a message from Gov. Joseph E. Ely. The planes were led by Lt. Col. Louis Botweil and provided the youngsters a great thrill.

In closing, Mayor praised President Franklin D. Roosevelt as an executive and also as a man whose heart "beats for the individual in the shadow of adversity or pain."

300 Examined at Clinic

A feature of the exercises was a baby clinic to which all the babies born in the past three years were invited. About 300 youngsters were examined. Dr. C. A. Statler next Thursday evening. This is a movement started by the Massachusetts Industrial and Development Commissioner to stimulate the city to make a statement which the hotels, stores, restaurants and transportation agencies join hands. A well-planned attempt will be made to acquaint the outside public with the activities of the city.

Week-End Campaign Starts Next Week

Governor Ely and Mayor Curley are scheduled to open the campaign for week ends in Boston during the summer of 1933, a movement to be given at Hotel Statler next Thursday evening. This is a movement started by the Massachusetts Industrial and Development Commissioner to stimulate the city to make a statement which the hotels, stores, restaurants and transportation agencies join hands. A well-planned attempt will be made to acquaint the outside public with the activities of the city.

"What is needed for a long time has been accomplished by bringing to the transportation, hotel, amusement and other business leaders in support of a definite plan to create new business in Boston," the official leaflet says.

"To us, it strangler, we extend our hearty welcome and the guaranty of a courteous and hospitable reception. Your introduction and will identify you in the week-end guest for special consideration.

Hospital Day at Stoneham Draws Large Attendance

Dr. Robert C. Selby, the physician in chief of the New England Sanitarium and Hospital, today, with the result that hundreds of mothers were in attendance with their babies and older children all born under the roof of the institution overlooking Spot Pond.

During the day there was a baby clinic, display of foods, methods of caring for patients, moving pictures on health subjects, plenty of music and for the youngsters a touch of color was added by bright balloons presented to each.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston was the principal speaker. He was introduced by Representative Joseph Milano of MIlcrose.

Raps "Starvation Diets"

The Mayor paid a high tribute to the work of the medical and nursing professions and others in hospitalization work.

He said plans by municipalities in various parts of this country as well as in one or more places in the Commonwealth have been severely criticised. The "starvation diets" for those on the welfare in many places, said the Mayor, "will represent a mortality toll in succeeding generations that it is impossible for any authority to estimate."

During his address three National Guard planes flew over the grounds and dropped a message from Gov. Joseph E. Ely. The planes were led by Lt. Col. Louis Botweil and provided the youngsters a great thrill.

In closing, Mayor praised President Franklin D. Roosevelt as an executive and also as a man whose heart "beats for the individual in the shadow of adversity or pain."

300 Examined at Clinic

A feature of the exercises was a baby clinic to which all the babies born in the past three years were invited. About 300 youngsters were examined. Dr. C. A. Statler next Thursday evening. This is a movement started by the Massachusetts Industrial and Development Commissioner to stimulate the city to make a statement which the hotels, stores, restaurants and transportation agencies join hands. A well-planned attempt will be made to acquaint the outside public with the activities of the city.

New Deal in Civic Groups Will Press the Issue

Effort to Secure Judge Collins as Candidate Reflects Prevailing Spirit

Civic Groups Will Want a Change

No Strictly Political Figure

Want a Change in the Present Serious Emergency

By Forrest P. Hull

Interest in Boston's mayoral election in November is likely to approach in intensity the campaign of 1910, when, under the amended city charter which gave the chief executive almost dictatorial power, the so-called "reform" agitators attempted to deal a death blow to the politicians by the election of the late James Jackson Storrow. The attempt failed by a narrow margin, with the election of John F. Fitzgerald. Since then there have been emergencies in city affairs, but no such attempt to meet them.

Today, some of the leading citizens, who are affiliated with various civic and business groups, have called for a "new deal," using the term which is constantly uttered in reference to President Roosevelt's program of meeting the country's economic plight. They are looking for a mayoral candidate as far removed from politics as possible, an outstanding figure of intellect and energy, who could command the highest respect of the electorate and be relied upon to give the city the highest type of business administration.

At the present time a certain amount of interest is centered in Judge Walter L. Collins of Dorchester, who has served on the Superior Court bench for several years. Conferences have been held with him to ascertain his availability as a candidate, with representations behind him that he would stand for a "new deal," using the term which is constantly uttered in reference to President Roosevelt's program of meeting the country's economic plight. They are looking for a mayoral candidate as far removed from politics as possible, an outstanding figure of intellect and energy, who could command the highest respect of the electorate and be relied upon to give the city the highest type of business administration.

Importance of the Fight

Though there is said to be little hope that Judge Collins would desert to the "new deal," using the term which is constantly uttered in reference to President Roosevelt's program of meeting the country's economic plight. They are looking for a mayoral candidate as far removed from politics as possible, an outstanding figure of intellect and energy, who could command the highest respect of the electorate and be relied upon to give the city the highest type of business administration.

As president of the City Council, Mr. Collins served as acting mayor during Mr. Fitzgerald's absences from the city. Old-timers will recall the sensation at City Hall when, during the mayor's trip abroad, an orator of the Council of nine members under the amended charter, and was its second president. He had won election to that body for a three-year term by the highest vote in a field of nineteen, receiving thirty-three fewer votes than John F. Fitzgerald, the head of the ticket. Judge Ward 20 in the House of Representatives, being the first Democrat to be sent to that body from Old North End. Even at that time his friends were predicting that as his ambition was the mayoralty he could safely rely on another ward. McMasters Enters Race for Senate

William H. McMasters of Cambridge, incidental to filing nomination papers as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for senator in the May 31 primaries in the Middlesex district, has succeeded Judge Joseph W. Monahan, recently appointed to the Middlesex Probate Court, declared that his issue is drive against "racketeering organizations."

"Just as soon as I take the oath of office," said McMasters, whose candidacy is his first try for an elective office, "I shall make an immediate start several investigations against racketeering organizations which should be regarded city officials. During my campaign I will specifically name these various groups of racketeers."

McMasters was one time a director of the Boston Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, serving under appointment by Mayor Curley in the latter's second administration.

CURLEY ASKS SWANSON TO TEND DERRICK RENTAL

Mayor Curley appeared yesterday to Secretary of the Navy Swanson to order a reduction from $30 to $20 per hour in the rate of the floating derrick at the Charlestown navy yard. The mayor acted on the request of the Chamber of Commerce which is interested in obtaining the port of Boston the shipment of German beer vats weighing 28 tons each.

Three such vats will reach Boston next week and other shipments are to follow. The price of the floating derrick at the Charlestown navy yard is reduced. Otherwise shipments will be made via Montreal. The navy yard equipment is necessary to the transfer of the vats from steamers to freight cars.
OUR FERRY DEFICITS

The Municipal Research Bureau calls attention anew to the enormous disparity between the cost and revenues of the East Boston ferry system. Deficits in the last five years have piled up a total of $8,000,000. Not once in fifty years has the ferry made a profit. The total expense of the ferries has been almost seven times the income. When the cost of improvements is included, the expenditures are more than eight times the receipts. The red ink figure last year was about $500,000.

One line has been abandoned, but the employees are retained and one of the boats is added to the South line. In the opinion of the bureau, the net savings from the abandonment will not amount to more than $75,000 a year. Moreover, in the next seventeen years the city must take care of a ferry debt amounting to $760,000.

These constantly recurring huge deficits are a challenge that ought to be faced and met. They intimate what one expert considers "an atrocious lack of efficiency." A private business would find ways and means at the very least to reduce these deficits greatly. It has been said that the loss will be considerably less when the new vehicular tunnel to East Boston is opened. The saving is merely conjectural, however. Great changes have taken place since the tunnel was authorized. It will probably not be used so extensively as was thought, originally. We should not be at all surprised if, somehow or other, the next city administration should find some pretext for retaining our present ferry service in full.

MANY WAYS FOR CITY ECONOMY

Research Bureau Points to Methods

After a survey of Boston municipal finances, the Bureau Municipal Research Bureau asserted yesterday that there are several ways of effecting savings, and that for the first time in many years the Boston tax rate exceeds the average for all surrounding cities, and is well above the average for the State.

It is asserted, in a statement issued by the research bureau, that there are tremendous opportunities for further practical economies, that departmental reorganization is highly necessary, that many "luxury" and non-essential services are being charged to the taxpayer, that there is an inefficient and incomplete use of city employees, that city purchasing and contracting is far from satisfactory, and that the city payroll is inflated by the maintenance of unnecessary positions and an excessive number of employees.
117,667 IN CITY FACE ARREST IN POLL TAX DRIVE

Responses Have Been Slow
Despite Demand—Warrants Served

By JOHN ROCKETT

A campaign into all parts of the city against delinquent taxpayers is planned by the collecting department as the result of a compilation yesterday which revealed that more than half of the residents of Boston are delinquent in payments of their 1932 poll taxes. When the offices of William M. Morrow, city collector, closed yesterday noon 117,687 citizens had failed to pay the 1932 tax of $2, leaving the city with a revenue of $1,176,667. Despite the warning and additional assessments added to the original tax bills, responses have been slow. With every effort being expended to increase the revenue of the city treasury, drastic action was decided on by the collector yesterday. Warrants which constables will obtain from the courts will make possible the arrest anywhere in the state of Boston's poll tax debtors. Thus persons who have moved from the city since the poll taxes were assessed are still faced with arrest if they do not pay. The drive to be started Monday by Collector Morrow is expected to be similar to the intensive campaign against poll tax delinquents personally led by Mayor Curley in 1930. Constables served tax warrants on almost every street, with some of the constables armed with as many as 500 and 600 warrants each in the drive to collect the city's revenue.

The discovery that more than 4000 city employees were among the 1930 poll tax delinquents incensed Mayor Curley and brought forth his active entrance into the campaign of collection. While many employees were warned to be among the 1932 delinquents, the number was not made public. Poll taxes were deducted from the city employee's pay three years ago.

Theodore A. Glynn, chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners, gave an address on "Mother" yesterday in Intercolonial Hall, Roxbury, at a meeting of the Dorchester Aerie, F. C. E. No. 87. Mr. Frederick Schmidt presided. The speaker said that Mother's Day is the most beautiful day of the calendar. "The word has a world of meaning," said Mr. Glynn, "and if we could keep it full meaning before us at all times many of the sins of today would be eliminated."

TO CONTINUE WORK ON SEWER IN DORCHESTER

The Public Works Department was today authorized by Mayor James M. Curley to continue operations on the Dorchester Brook sewer on Auckland st., between Freeport St. and Savin Hill Ave., at a cost of $12,713. The project has already cost $79,000 during the past 10 years.

INCREASE IN AID PAYMENTS

Federal Allotment of $4,-000,000 to Boston

Public welfare payments of the city of Boston to unfortunate out of employment will be increased as a result of the $4,000,000 the city of Boston will be allotted by the terms of the La Follette-Costigan bill. It was announced today by the Public Welfare Department that two persons who have been receiving $9 per week will receive $10. Where there are three in the family who have been receiving $7, the maximum will be $9. For four persons, the amount will be increased from $9 to $10. Five in a family who have been receiving $7 will receive $12; six in a family who have been getting $12 will receive $13, and seven in a family who have been receiving $12 will receive $15, the new maximum payment. The old maximum before reductions was $17.
The Legislative Committee on Ways and Means will take up tomorrow morning, once more, the important and perplexing question of taxation, and, it is assumed, the ground covered in numerous committee hearings and discussions in the House of Representatives will be traversed once more in every detail. The same arguments will be presented on both sides, and the same objections made on the other, and the result will probably be the same bill the committee would report if it had no additional hearings.

Most people believe that the bill proposed by the Senate committee will not be a bill to reduce the number of persons who drive automobiles, but most of the expert believe the proposal to lay a tax on the dividends received from the shares of Massachusetts corporations will carry. Between these two extremes there is wide difference of opinion. Some hope for immediate future adoption, while others think almost every provision will be rejected.

At any rate and Republicans are now in agreement in regard to the diversion of $10,000,000, more or less, from the highway fund to the general fund of the Commonwealth. The Republicans have tried to have the money so diverted go to the cities and towns for the local roads and streets, but have failed twice. Now the Republicans are prepared to support Gov Ely in his effort to have the money turned into the treasury of the State, from which may be drawn for the ordinary purposes of government. If the Democrats also back up the Governor, that project may have a better chance of success than the others which have been offered. Much depends, however, on the attitude of the automobile owners and also on the influence of the individuals and organizations interested in maintaining road construction on the large scale followed in recent years.

The situation, so far as the municipalities are concerned, is better than it was a few weeks ago. Most of the cities have carried out economies which, although individually small, have helped in the aggregate, and, for the time in many months, the payments in aid of deserving citizens in financial stringency have fallen to a considerable amount. The insurance companies, for instance, have been disposed to settle claims rather than to force the courts into court actions. The result is that the companies are not asked for considerable amounts which go into the expense of carrying out the law and thus raise the cost of insurance. Most of these abuses can be corrected, and some progress in that direction has been made recently. Those who are familiar with the situation think it unlikely the present insurability law will be substantially changed.

About Politicians

The Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration has recently commemorated the 25th anniversary of its foundation, and had, as one of the highlights of the celebration, a series of addresses by men competent to discuss the issues of the day. The first speaker was Frederick M. Davenport of Clinton, N. Y., who served for six years in the New York Senate and was a member of Congress from 1923 to the present year. Also, for 25 years he was professor of law and politics at Hamilton College. Thus his experience qualifies him to discuss the subject of his recent book, which was "The Magnitude of the Politicians' Task."

Portions of Mr Davenport's address may be regarded as defense of the politician. Commenting on the fact that business men are constantly urged to take an active part in politics, he agreed they should, but he went on, "They have to remember that business and political skill are quite different characteristics. The mind of the politician is a social laboratory, in which he engages in social experiments by his intuitive reactions. It boils down to the point that good business men are good at these social experiments, but it is the politician who does it and knows how to do it."

In my opinion there is no more alarming symptom in the American democracy than the tendency on every hand to point the finger of suspicion at the Congress of the United States."

What Mr Davenport says about Congress applies with equal force to the Massachusetts Legislature and to other similar bodies. Those who have watched the Massachusetts General Court over a period of years believe its members are in intelligence and probably considerably above the average of the voters who send them to the State House, and that instances of corruption are rare on Beacon Hill. If it not infrequently happens, to be sure, that legislators, for fear of offending their constituents, hesitate to do what they think is right, but that weakness is a wholly human one, and often those who seem to be brave are brave because they have nothing to lose by assuming that attitude.

Political experience is almost an essential to the public servant in high places. The United States never had a President governed by higher and better motives than those which directed Herbert Hoover's conduct. His weakness was his lack of experience in politics. On the other hand, the success which has thus far attended the Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt has been due in large measure to the Democratic primary after the party had had a pre-primary convention. Mr Curley is no tyro in politics, and he knows he could not reasonably expect to defeat Mr Walsh in either the convention or the primary. That story might just as well be killed.

There is a natural curiosity about the relations which now exist between President Roosevelt and Mayor James M. Curley. Some are now trying to make it appear that the Mayor will run against Senator David D. Walsh when the latter comes up for reelection next year. Of course, that contest, if it ever came, would take place in the Democratic primary after the party had had a pre-primary convention. Mr Curley is no tyro in politics, and he knows he could not reasonably expect to defeat Mr Walsh in either the convention or the primary. That story might just as well be killed.

Mayor James M. Curley

Whenever there is nothing else to discuss, political writers turn to the immediate future of Mayor James M. Curley. Some are now trying to make it appear that the President will run against Senator David D. Walsh when the latter comes up for reelection next year. Of course, that contest, if it ever came, would take place in the Democratic primary after the party had had a pre-primary convention. Mr Curley is no tyro in politics, and he knows he could not reasonably expect to defeat Mr Walsh in either the convention or the primary. That story might just as well be killed.

Some think the two have had a falling out, while others insist the President is merely trying to curry favor with the House to tender Mr Curley a Federal office, which will app all to the latter. It may not be unfair to assume that the Mayor has been disappointed by the treatment he has received in Washington. The gossip is that he would have been glad to be Secretary of the Navy or Ambassador to Russia, and that people have been glad to be Secretary of the Navy or Ambassador to Russia, and that people in both the latter office and the rumors which led the President to refuse to give to Mr Curley, but perhaps they have no basis, in fact.
Roosevelt Braves Revolt in War on Waste; Local Leaders Might Well Copy His Courage

By ROBERT CHOATE

As we start up the hill after the long descent it is almost too much to hope that there will still be that concerted public sentiment against the extravagances in government which marked the depression. Enlightened opinion did much to cut public costs but we went only half the distance.

We are going to return to some new form of prosperity without undergoing the surgical operations necessary to remove the cancerous growths that will spread and grow, once popular feeling relaxes. It is probably the one lesson we have not fully learned from the depression.

So far as I can see, there has been only one executive, the President, who has acted to correct the wrongs which years of political indifference permitted to grow as barnacles on the government structure. The burden of taxes, state and city, will be felt for many months before even the healing draughts of renewed business activity will begin to ease them.

Amid all the hue and cry over reduction of salaries of government employees there have undoubtedly been many hundreds of men and women, keen observers of politics, who have sympathized with the public servants whose hard work to obtain adequate justice has been swept away.

There would have been no need of reducing the salaries of federal, state, and city employees if public opinion had been alive to the thousand and one extravagant ways in which the politicians conduct the public business. Any public employee in stating his case against a salary cut could cite possible economies in his own department which would have saved thousands of dollars more than the slashing of wages.

ST%E AND CITY EXECUTIVES

It is disappointing that state and city executives who profess such admiration and loyalty for the man in the White House did not see fit to emulate his example and set about putting their own houses in order. On the hill there is a Democratic Governor who has definitely declared he will not run again. He has been fine to act. The excuse in his case would undoubtedly be that he was hampered by a Republican Legislature. This is a good excuse, but it is the Republican politicians as much as the Democrats who have been responsible for the ever rising totals of public costs.

On School street there is a mayor whose term expires in December who likewise is not hampered by future political considerations or by lack of knowledge where the axe ought to fall. The economies which have been effected in the city administration have been very largely those which can be obtained by horizontal decreases in salaries rather than of infinitely more value which can be brought about by reorganization and businesslike methods applied to the various departments.

I do not mean to criticize either the Governor or the mayor for their failure to follow the example of so popular a figure as Franklin D. Roosevelt. I wish, rather, to express a sense of disappointment that it has been impossible to accomplish any of these things while the pressure to do them was so great. Such action requires a large amount of personal and political courage. In fact, it requires so much courage that I am a little afraid that Mr. Roosevelt may be foolhardy in going so far as he obviously has. There is always a practical point in these matters beyond which it is not safe to go, for, if you are too quick in firing hundreds of government employees; not to refill their places with deserving adherents but to get rid of those who have been fattening on the public purse are liable to undo you in the long run.

The impolitic things which the administration in Washington is doing at the moment stagger the political imagination. Were it not for the pressure of the gigantic effort the administration is making to bring about some sort of business recovery there would be a political revolution as bloody as any we have ever read about. Imagine a new administration coming into office and firing hundreds of government employees; not to refill their places with deserving adherents but to get rid of those for good and all because they are totally unnecessary. In fact, there is the greatest sort of house-cleaning going on in Washington at the moment. In one way it is a pity that the country doesn't know more about it. If it did, the chances are that it would stand solidly behind President Roosevelt. The reaction might even be so great that some of our local state and city officials would have to follow suit.

SEVEN FOR WORK OF ONE

In Washington, I am told by those officials who are attempting to economize, there are, in some departments, seven persons doing the work of one. As recounted last week, there are thousands of men and women who have been on the payrolls for years for no better reason than that some senator put them there and insisted that they be paid. During all this time they have never done a stroke of work.

This sort of thing is duplicated in every public office throughout the country. It can be found in almost every department of the state and city. It is an outrageous payment that is annually forced from the taxpayers to fulfill some one's political obligations. Until an executive like Mr. Roosevelt comes along in a national emergency it swells and swells until it engulfs the people in an army of government bureaucrats ready to defend their lucrative positions at any cost.

As we emerge from this terrible period that we have been through there is also another political subject which ought not to be forgotten. That is the number of persons on the welfare rolls who are never going to get off no matter what may be the demand for outside employment. Examine the costs of any city government today and you are told that income is sufficient to run the ordinary operating expenses, but it is the needs of the welfare agencies which are putting it in the red.

Even the most farseeing of our political economists predict that should employment sharply rise to the peak of 1929 there still would be some 8,000,000 unemployed in the country because of the technocratic improvements of the last three years. In other words, whatever approach to normalcy we may be making at the present time the future is bound to provide a larger class of persons who, for one reason or another, will not be able to provide themselves with the means of livelihood. They must be looked after by the government, presumably the local authorities.

The true story of the graft, waste and downright fraud practised in the name of public welfare during the depression will never be told. Welfare payments in this city and elsewhere are surrounded with a cloak of secrecy, and probably properly so. The Boston police department last summer approximated the real state of affairs but were called off before the public could obtain a picture of conditions as they exist. At this moment the mayor himself is reported to be shocked at revelations uncovered by one of his departments.

One of the problems of the future is going to be the lack of driving off the public charity rolls those who are able to work, but who prefer the easier way of letting the government pay them something for nothing. This job will be difficult because when the time comes to do it the public will again be careless of its money and its taxes. Nobody will care but the politicians and the ne'er-do-wells whose aim is so frequently selfishly directed.
today. In the first place, he is personally popular. Secondly, he has the advantage of having during the mayoralty and knowing the job thoroughly. And third, he is generally accredited with the extremely important support of the city employees. As a unit they are very powerful. Split up, this group is of no consequence.

Again, Nichols is a very able political organizer. Without the flash and audacity of Curley, he is, nevertheless, a commendably persistent and industrious. He has the bulldog quality of hanging on. It is also true that, as a Republican, Nichols encounters less partisan animosity from the Democrats than any other leader of his party in the city.

Must Agree on One

Therefore, from the purely strategic viewpoint, the fight is to concentrate against Nichols. With his admitted strength, he has all the best of it in a big field. If the Democratic leaders, with the swing of the party nationally and in the State at the present time, could agree upon any one candidate—Collins, O'Connell or Foley, for instance—Nichols would be in trouble. All of the other candidates have elements of strength throughout the city, but the Nichols forces are a coherent group and hard to break down.

Assuming that Nichols would poll the greatest part of the Republican strength, it is not unlikely that an attempt will be made to break into this, therefore the suggestion of the candidacy of Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the finance commission, a proven vote getter, or a doughnut fighter; Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., who defeated Charles H. Innes in the 1923 fight for delegate to the national convention; Police Commissioner Hultman and possibly Alonzo Cook. The strategy, of course, would be to divide the Republican strength on Nichols.

City Workers Count

But probably never before, because of the slash in wages, will the city employees exercised so much influence as a political force. There are 8,000 of them and, economically, they are in a strong position. Another organized group which has been strong in other elections is the Good Government Association. Representation is among the taxpayers in every precinct and, possibly, Alonzo Cook. The strategy, of course, would be to divide the Republican strength on Nichols.

Wage Cut an Issue

It is difficult to estimate at this time what will be the cross currents operating in November. But one thing is certain. Every candidate for the mayoralty will be asked how he stands on the matter of wage reductions for city employees and the question of economy in municipal expenditures and taxation are being agitated as never before.

The present wage cut for city employees expires Dec. 31. It will be the first question which the newly-elected Mayor will have to meet. He will be forced to decide whether to continue in force the present wage cut of 15 percent, which takes approximately $3.500,000 away from the employees per year.

Might Win on Issue

On the other hand, it would be assumed that any candidate declaring for continuance of the wage cut would surely be doomed to defeat. But in a large field and assuming that the matter of economy and taxes was a live issue, it would not be beyond the realms of possibility that the candidates standing for continuance of the cut, at least until times change, might win.

To use the common phrase, it all depends upon the extent of the "tax consciousness" of the city. There was a very extraordinary development of this in the last election in New York, when ever the voters were asked what they thought of Judge Collins and Judge Sullivan, as shown by the Seabury investigation. Voters may have in mind the example of Chicago and Philadelphia, both cities being flat broke.

Will Urge Economy

The argument will be strongly presented that, following the example of the federal government and other States and cities, Boston must adopt the strictest economy. No one will question the need of weeding out unnecessary expenses in the administration of the city and the abandonment of all municipal luxuries.

On the other hand, it is safe to presume that few, if any candidates for the mayoralty will not declare for reinstatement of wages in the city. In prosperous times voters generally give little attention to the matter of wages or taxes. It is difficult to arouse their indignation, but public expenditures are being scrutinized now as never before.

One of the things that made Nichols, so popular with city employees was the fact that as Mayor, he increased their payroll by $1,000,000 a year. Under the administration of Mayor Curley there has been a drop of about $400,000 in the payrolls and there are in the vicinity of 500 vacancies in the police and fire departments.

Not Boston Voters

The main issue is certain to be economy. Among those who analyze the situation from a very practical viewpoint state that only one out of four people either own or have an equity in a house in Boston. They argue that the payroll saving effected by Curley only means a difference of about 5 cents a thousand on the tax rate. This is not extremely important, it is asserted, to an employer who has a relative, friend or tenant whose income may be cut from $300 to $400 a year as a result of the economy program.

It is also pointed out that the organized fight for economy and lower taxation is necessary by organizations, the members of which do not live in the city and therefore do not vote here. Nor can anyone about the seriousness of the situation so far as downtown property is concerned, but this is never so far as it concerns the leading proponents of economy. They do not vote in Boston; however: they may be able to influence the voter's decision.

No Need to Borrow

With the steady increase in the tax rate of the city, it is the fact that 80 per cent of the 1932 levy is in the treasury. And it is also to be recalled that in the last biennium, the city treasury received $50,000 in taxes, which under the circumstances was tremendous.

Most persons think that the city is compelled to borrow from the bankers in order to meet its payrolls and other indebtedness in advance of tax revenues. This makes a good talking point, but it is not the fact.

Boston is not at the mercy of the bankers. The law could easily be changed so that tax payments might be due on certain specified dates—quarterly, for instance—and except in extreme circumstances, the experience of the cities that have money received would be sufficient to meet current needs, as well as other obligations. A change of system would prevent the payment of interest money to the banks.

Too Easy to Get Loans

There are plenty of small cities and towns throughout the country which do not borrow money from bankers in anticipation of taxes, through a system of regulated payments. Boston is no exception to the rule, even in these straitened times.

The trouble in the past has been that it was too easy to borrow money and there have been times when the city treasury had to be scrutinized now as never before.

All the signs and portents point to one of the most bitterly fought mayoralty contests in years. There is a plenty of cross rivalries which will come into play. The issue of economy and taxes was a live issue, it is not unlikely that an attempt will be made to break into this, therefore the suggestion of the candidacy of Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the finance commission, a proven vote getter, or a doughnut fighter; Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., who defeated Charles H. Innes in the 1923 fight for delegate to the national convention; Police Commissioner Hultman and possibly Alonzo Cook. The strategy, of course, would be to divide the Republican strength on Nichols.

But probably never before, because of the slash in wages, will the city employees exercised so much influence as a political force. There are 8,000 of them and, economically, they are in a strong position. Another organized group which has been strong in other elections is the Good Government Association. Representation is among the taxpayers in every precinct and, possibly, Alonzo Cook. The strategy, of course, would be to divide the Republican strength on Nichols.

Wage Cut an Issue

It is difficult to estimate at this time what will be the cross currents operating in November. But one thing is certain. Every candidate for the mayoralty will be asked how he stands on the matter of wage reductions for city employees and the question of economy in municipal expenditures and taxation are being agitated as never before.

The present wage cut for city employees expires Dec. 31. It will be the first question which the newly-elected Mayor will have to meet. He will be forced to decide whether to continue in force the present wage cut of 15 percent, which takes approximately $3,500,000 away from the employees per year.

Might Win on Issue

On the other hand, it would be assumed that any candidate declaring for continuance of the wage cut would surely be doomed to defeat. But in a large field and assuming that the matter of economy and taxes was a live issue, it would not be beyond the realms of possibility that the candidates standing for continuance of the cut, at least until times change, might win.

To use the common phrase, it all depends upon the extent of the "tax consciousness" of the city. There was a very extraordinary development of this in the last election in New York, when ever the voters were asked what they thought of Judge Collins and Judge Sullivan, as shown by the Seabury investigation. Voters may have in mind the example of Chicago and Philadelphia, both cities being flat broke.

Will Urge Economy

The argument will be strongly presented that, following the example of the federal government and other States and cities, Boston must adopt the strictest economy. No one will question the need of weeding out unnecessary expenses in the administration of the city and the abandonment of all municipal luxuries.

On the other hand, it is safe to presume that few, if any candidates for the mayoralty will not declare for reinstatement of wages in the city. In prosperous times voters generally give little attention to the matter of wages or taxes. It is difficult to arouse their indignation, but public expenditures are being scrutinized now as never before.

One of the things that made Nichols, so popular with city employees was the fact that as Mayor, he increased their payroll by $1,000,000 a year. Under the administration of Mayor Curley there has been a drop of about $400,000 in the payrolls and there are in the vicinity of 500 vacancies in the police and fire departments.

Not Boston Voters

The main issue is certain to be economy. Among those who analyze the situation from a very practical viewpoint state that only one out of four people either own or have an equity in a house in Boston. They argue that the payroll saving effected by Curley only means a difference of about 5 cents a thousand on the tax rate. This is not extremely important, it is asserted, to an employer who has a relative, friend or tenant whose income may be cut from $300 to $400 a year as a result of the economy program.

It is also pointed out that the organized fight for economy and lower taxation is necessary by organizations, the members of which do not live in the city and therefore do not vote here. Nor can anyone about the seriousness of the situation so far as downtown property is concerned, but this is never so far as it concerns the leading proponents of economy. They do not vote in Boston; however: they may be able to influence the voter's decision.

No Need to Borrow

With the steady increase in the tax rate of the city, it is the fact that 80 per cent of the 1932 levy is in the treasury. And it is also to be recalled that in the last biennium, the city treasury received $50,000 in taxes, which under the circumstances was tremendous.

Most persons think that the city is compelled to borrow from the bankers in order to meet its payrolls and other indebtedness in advance of tax revenues. This makes a good talking point, but it is not the fact.

Boston is not at the mercy of the bankers. The law could easily be changed so that tax payments might be due on certain specified dates—quarterly, for instance—and except in extreme circumstances, the experience of the cities that have money received would be sufficient to meet current needs, as well as other obligations. A change of system would prevent the payment of interest money to the banks.
HUB READY FOR HOT CAMPAIGN

Economy, Lower Taxes and City Employees' Wage Cut Likely to Be Big Issues

BY ROBERT L. NORTON

Of the major cities in the country, Boston is likely the most political minded. A large proportion of its people love to talk politics and to speculate, pro and con, about those who are occupied in the game. And no small percentage of its population is either directly engaged in the business of politics or their occupations depend to some extent upon its fluctuations.

Who Will Mayor Back?

But there are certain obvious political facts and trends in the situation as it stands today. Each of some groups with the power to influence the outcome of the campaign has a candidate. Of course, the first question which arises is, "Who will Mayor Curley support?" There can be no question of the potency of the Curley backbone.

The friends of the Mayor say that he will put "Teddy" Glynn into the fight. But whatever he does will be important. Curley is the ablest political organizer that this city has seen for many years. He is also the hardest fighter. Politics has been no bed of roses for the Mayor. He has had to fight for everything that he has ever achieved in politics. But there is no angle of politics with which he is not thoroughly familiar. He puts tremendous energy into a fight and it is not to be expected that he will permit his political grip on the city to slip, even if he is invited to take the post in the Roosevelt administration.

Lomasney a Factor

Besides the personal influence which the Mayor can exert from the stump, he has a powerful personal organization. Another factor always to be reckoned with is Martin Lomasney. Over a period of years he has wielded great power in city politics. His organization has remained intact. The flavor of the coming fight would be lessened should "Martin" be forced to remain on the sidelines because of the condition of his health.

Then there is ex-Mayor Fitzgerald. The doctor has already launched a campaign to keep him in the race, should President Roosevelt be forced to remain on the sidelines because of the condition of his health.

The other day the Legislature killed the bill providing for a run-off primary, which, had it passed, would have limited the choice to two candidates. The bill had its merits. It would have prevented the possibility of a minority candidate being elected Mayor. But, after all, we would have denied the pleasure of witnessing a free-for-all—every man for himself. The devil take the hindmost. If the very much tinkered Boston charter has no other merit, it provides delectable entertainment every four years in the mayoralty race. There is no bar to any vacancy for the position of Mayor of Boston.

All that is required is the ambition, enough signatures to get on the ballot, and any kind of an old automobile that will go and a voice that can withstand the vagaries of Boston weather.

Plenty of Candidates

O'Connell has a record of 13 speeches in one night, and Nichols is no slumberer. But this is by no means the limit of the field. Other declared candidates are Joseph A. Tomasc, well known contractor, and Francis E. Kelly, City Councillor. And in the offering are: Theodore Glynn, chairman of the street commission; President Joseph McGrath of the City Council; Frederick W. Mansfield; Judge Michael Sullivan, Traffic Commissioner; Attorney Hultman, Traffic Commissioner Conroy, Judge Walter Collins.

Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., Daniel H. Conkley, Congressman John Cor- nouch, and John C. Kiley, real estate experts.

If there are any names missing in the list it is due to inadvertence—an oversight which is regretted. It will be seen, however, that there is no lack of material to choose from. As to the future lineups, combinations and eventualities of the great political rodeo, it is too early to make predictions.

The intense and persistent interest in politics may be explained by the racial character of the dominant group. Politics is in the blood of the Irish and the old-time Yankee strain, from revolution days, has never permitted the exigencies of trade and barter to interfere with its alertness in public affairs. Other peoples have assimilated the contagion, so that there is no such thing as a closed season on politics in this city.

But now we are witnessing the preliminaries of a mayoralty campaign which will be brought to a climax at the election. In November, a little more than five and one-half months away. A half-dozen candidates are openly in the field already and there will be more, according to all the signs. The city is buzzing with talk about the mayoralty. Every indication points to a corduroy kind, knock-down and drag-out fight such as the populace of Bos- ton delights in.

It is to be cut and dried affair. There is never any certain about life or Boston politics. Thus the citize nry are intrigued with the spectacle, smacking their lips, so to speak, over what is to come.

This is a most ambitious undertaking.

Nichols Against Field

Fitzgerald's activities along these lines is proof of the obvious, that it is Nichols against all else. There is not the slightest doubt that Nichols has the pole as the situation goes.

CURLEY HAILS FARLEY AT DINNER TO LEADER

Calls Him Credit to Faith, in New York Address

BY ROGER BATCHELDER

NEW YORK, May 13—Mayor James M. Curley came to New York tonight and told 4000 Democrats gathered at a testimonial banquet to Postmaster Gen. James M. Farley that the appointment of Farley, a Catholic, to the Cabinet of President Roosevelt is "an honor for any man. To have led the movement and by so doing won the admiration, affection and love of an entire people is the highest honor conceivable, and to the guest of the evening more than to any other individual in America is a great honor due—Postmaster-General James A. Farley,

Farley Finds Confidence

NEW YORK, May 13 (A. P.)—Universal return of confidence, which is gaining momentum every day," is seen by Postmaster General Farley, he said in his address. "In its wake," he added, "there has been a positive improvement in economic conditions indicating that prosperity, Nation-wide and world-wide, is speedily returning." "In these days of returning fortitude among our people, America has found itself," he said. Farley recalled this was his 25th year in politics, and he reviewed that career, going back to his first election as a member of the Rockland County Democratic committee. When he told of being appointed to the State Athletic Commission, he said; "I received the appointment from one whose deep faith, outstanding ability and superb sportsmanship, has and always will command my utmost respect, and whose personal friendship I have always and always will esteem, a real American, known to all present, our great ex-Governor, Alfred E. Smith."
SAYS PRIDE OF COUNTRY ASCENDING

Farley Thanks Rank and File at Dinner in His Honor

NEW YORK, May 13 (UP)—James A. Farley, who as Postmaster-General directs the Roosevelt administration patronage, paid his compliments tonight to the rank and file of the Democratic party and its allies and told them that "America has found itself" under President Roosevelt.

PRIDE ASCENDING

"At the portals of the White House or in front of the rough-hewn door of the humblest cabin there is again a welcome on the door mat," Farley said at a testimonial dinner tendered him by friends. "Pride of country is serving humanity. In honoring me, you voice your confidence in him and in your belief that our great institutions will survive." The Postmaster-General went to considerable pains to express thanks to all who worked for the election of Mr. Roosevelt. Recently he had been ruminating on Washington and everything over the delay in handing out patronage, which the administration has said was due to the crush of vital domestic and world problems. Farley again thanked both Democrats and progressive Republican allies.

Thanks Workers

"I look upon this affair (the dinner) not only as honoring me, but also as honoring the thousands of men and women, State leaders, county leaders, district leaders and precinct workers throughout the length and breadth of the land. Their loyalty, activity and devotion to our cause have been a period of over a year in the lives of many. I am glad at this time to express my heartiest thanks for the help they have made." At the same time that he realizes that they must feel partly from the satisfaction of having played a real part in the tremendous movement which has changed the face of government, he is fitted for maintaining confidence in this land where the ideals of the people have always been the ideals of liberal democracy.

"I would like to name all the men and women who have been prominent in the work of which he discharged that seemingly impossible task is now a matter of politics here. In fact, I want to say that history..."

Mayor Curley Tells New York Audience That "Jim" Farley Carried Out to Success What Appeared to Many to Be a Hopeless Task—Also Lauds Mrs. Farley

NEW YORK, May 13—The address of Mayor Curley to the dinner to Postmaster-General Farley follows:

Lapse of time since the enactment of the Roosevelt government to nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt as the Democratic standard bearer has been of sufficient duration to permit of a reasonable approximation as to the underlying causes which resulted in the sweeping victory of November last.

The tremendous majority received by him as a candidate for the Governorship of New York in 1930, being nearly three-quarters of a million greater than his Republican opponent, coupled with the exceptional character of his administration, left no doubt in the minds of thoughtful men as to his candidacy a year later for the Presidency of the United States.

Broad experience in national and state affairs, together with a genial disposition and the ability to assure results, gave weight to background that each and all treasured letters signed by him as an evidence that he recognized the importance of party success.

"Among them I not only want to remember those who have been there and are, but I want to pay a tribute to those who have served us because they felt by doing so they could best serve the real ends of Progressive Republicanism. Not only am I mindful of the help thus given, but I am happy at this time to publicly acknowledge this debt to them for their assistance."

Farley reviewed at length his own political experiences, recalling that this was his 25th year in politics, and concluded with another pledge: "I shall not forget."
CURLEY STIRS N. Y. DEMOCRATS

Casts Aside Prepared Address in Eulogy of Farley

LAUDATION AROUSES GREAT ENTHUSIASM

By JAMES GOGGIN
(Herald Staff Reporter)

NEW YORK, May 13—Casting aside a prepared address, Mayor Curley tonight aroused enthusiasm among 3000 New York Democrats by an extemporaneous eulogy of Postmaster-General James A. Farley as one of five Americans of Irish ancestry to be appointed to cabinet posts.

The mayor's laudation of President Roosevelt for selecting Farley as postmaster-general was climaxed by the assertion that in so doing Roosevelt had typified the doctrine of equality enunciated by Thomas Jefferson in the declaration of independence.

AROUSES ENTHUSIASM
Following Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor; Homer S. Cummings, attorney-general, and Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who gave stereotyped addresses of felicitation, Mayor Curley, speaking in advance of the presentation of Farley aroused the only sustained enthusiasm of the greatest Democratic dinner ever held in New York, at his praise of Roosevelt and Farley.

The prepared address which the mayor discarded was a prosaic exposition of Farley's achievements as the manager of the Roosevelt campaign. His speech was characterized by New York Democratic leaders as a particularly impressive tribute to Farley in which they claimed to perceive political significance of benefit to the mayor.

No mention of any possible appointment to be offered Curley was made either during the political discussions in the lobby of the Hotel Commodore by the mayor's room at the Biltmore. His companions were Councilman Thomas H. Green, Miss Mary Curley and George Curley, Eugene McSweeney, Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, and James L. O'Connor of Dover.

The mayor held no conferences prior to the dinner but he engaged in an animated conversation with Farley and a group which included Mayor O'Brien, John F. Curley, leader of Tammany, John H. McCoey of Brooklyn, and former Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, who presided at the dinner and who used the editorial appraise-ment of Curley, published in The Boston Herald for his introduction.

Site of $400,000 scenic thoroughfare, modelled after Havana's Prado, proposed by Mayor Curley. It would extend from St. Stephen's Church on Hanover street, along Webster avenue to Unity street and the rear of the Old North Church.

CALLED RBPUKE
In his emphasis of the importance of the recognition of a representative of the Irish people as postmaster-general, Curley called the action of Roosevelt "a rebuke to those who draw a fine line of distinction among racial groups."

He devoted most of his address to a bestowal of praise on Farley but in his climax, he described President Roosevelt as one "who will lead the people of America out of the land of darkness" and as "a great champion of the rights of the common people and a living exponent of a square deal."

Prior to the dinner, the lobby of the hotel seethed with political talk, principally about the distribution of patronage. Frequent mention was made that Mayor Curley is slated to receive recognition which will appeal to him, but none of the New York Democrats who professed to have knowledge of a forthcoming appointment of the mayor would venture a guess about the position which he is scheduled to be offered.

More than half of the male residents of Boston over 20 years of age face arrest beginning this week because of failure to pay their 1932 poll taxes, it was revealed yesterday at City Hall.

The delinquents, numbering 117,667, owe the city $225,334, which does not include the total of the old age assistance assessment.

Constables this week will be sent out to collect the taxes in arrears, it was warned at City Hall. The constables will have warrants for them to serve.
The Democrats of Massachusetts have gathered today for federal political patronage. Applicants for jobs, big and little, are understood to have had friends and backers send 5000 letters of indorsement directly to Roosevelt at the White House and to "Big Jim" Farley, the Postmaster-General and manager of the department.

There has never been, probably in all the history of this state, such a drive for jobs. Senator David L. Walsh is besieged by candidates and their friends. The postmaster-general has his office at 92 State st., and the offices of Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic State Committee, like the ants that left their trail on the Moravian Desert.

PARTY HEADS BESIEGED

"Young Jim" Roosevelt's insurance office down at State st., may have had the appearance of a campaign headquarters on the night before election when party workers assemble for final instructions and the payoff.

Mayor Curley, Governor Ely, Andrew J. Peters and all the others, suspected of having a word of influence with the national administration, find themselves blocked by office-seekers every step they take. There is no escape from the ceaseless and rivalries which exist, of the number of the candidates and of the problems which faces Messrs. Roosevelt, Farley and Walsh in choosing the right man to pin the badge upon is seen in the race for the United States attorney at Boston. Some of the gentlemen, each one having a sincere backing within the contending Democratic factions:

M. FRED O'CONNELL—Ex-mayor of Fall River.—A Smith supporter of the last convention. He was foresighted enough to visit with the then Governor and at Groton, recent brother candidate for Congress, sponsored the candidacy of Dan O'Connell, who is Senator Curley's secretary.

CHARLES H. McGUIG—Past and active chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Prominent and alert in every Democratic campaign for the last 20 years. Was a successful pledger candidate. His name presented for the post by Mayor Curley.

Ranged at the sides of these three men and dogging their footsteps are an army of eager Democrats anxious to be "placed" as agents, deputy collectors and the like in the revenue department when the shakeup comes from the Republican domination of the past 12 years.

Another drive for jobs was that of the Mechanics, who have been prominent and unfailing in their support of the Democratic party, and ex-Senator John J. Kearney of East Boston, prominent in organized labor and a friend of Senator Walsh's since the senator began his promising entrance into the public life of the state.

No, not the financial posts of importance to be ov looked with their numerous candidates for agent of the Reconstruction Fi rm, Corporation, agent of the Home Loan Bank and of the other numerous government structures from which the largesse are to be distributed.

CONTESTS ARE BITTER

The locale of Massachusetts offered flamboyant fires of party contests. It was the scene of a bitter contest between Governor Roosevelt and his Governor Smith and Ely, who happens to be the Democratic National Committee as well as governor, pledged their all, at the time, with Smith. Mayor Curley made great sacrifices for Roosevelt, and both sides now claim recognition in the way of patronage.

Farley says patronage will be considered through the state committees, and that let's Chairman Maynard in. "Young Jim" Roosevelt, who happens to be a President's son, has a host of personal friends. The President himself knows intimately of Bay State conditions because of his residence where he was a Harvard student.

The candidates for United States attorney of internal revenue at Springfield, who is the Democratic nominee at the last convention, held the collectorship of the post sewed up, thanks to his loyal support of Roosevelt, once the nomination was won by the New York governor.

But there are minor posts galore, not to mention the immigration commissionership which is sought by Miss May Ward, "Little Miss Dynamite," who is the Democratic national committeewoman from Massachusetts: Dr. Belle Scott Cardmoy of South Boston, who has been prominent and unfailing in her support of the Democratic party, and ex-Senator John J. Kearney of East Boston, prominent in organized labor and a friend of Senator Walsh's since the senator began his promising entrance into the public life of the state.

Former President Wilson and made for himself a creditable record.
Boston Pays for an Unusual Accident

Claims amounting to $12,163.69 were today approved by Mayor Curley as the result of one of the most unusual accidents that ever happened within the city limits. Thirty-seven beneficiaries will receive sums ranging from $6 to $4000. On Oct. 19, 1931, the city of Boston entered into a contract with A. Sifalo to perform certain sewer work in Edgemere road, West Roxbury. During the progress of the work a stock of dynamite exploded, badly damaging several of the nearby houses and causing more or less damage over a large territory.

Claims were filed against the city and liability was denied. The claimants sought legislation to authorize the city to make payments as a moral obligation. Such a bill was passed, signed by the governor on April 20, approved by the City Council last week and by the mayor today.

The largest claim allowed was that of George McKenzie of 46 Edgemere road, for $4000. Eleven of his neighbors on that street, as well as residents of Cheston road, Hinsdale road and Washington street, are on the list.

CURLEY AUTHORIZES MORE SEWER WORK

Mayor Curley today authorized at a cost of $38,729 the construction of another section of the Dorchester brook sewer, which will prevent further flooding of adjacent property.

Mayor Curley will arrive home today on the Eastern Steamship Line from New York, it was announced last night.

He received more than 300 telegrams congratulating him on his radio address at the dinner in honor of Postmaster General Farley, yesterday night, to Postmaster-General Farley. The one which pleased him more than any other was received at the Hotel Biltmore at 1:38 a.m. yesterday, from “Jim Corcoran,” a resident of St. Johnsbury, Vt. It said:

“I have followed your career with enthusiasm and admiration for years. Tonight I heard you speak in public for the first time. I remember gratefully my association with you and Eddie Quinn on our way to and from Houston, but when all other memory has dimmed, your words of tonight in tribute to the Celt will rise like a rainbow when my hopes are dimmer and my eyes are not seeing far. God bless you!”
POSTMASTER-GENERAL FARLEY HONORED

CURLEY SPEECH AT FARLEY DINNER LAUDED

Vermonters' Wire Pleases Mayor Most Out of 200

[Special Dispatch to The Herald]
NEW YORK, May 14—Mayor Curley of Boston today received 200 telegrams praising his address last night at the dinner here in honor of Postmaster-General Farley.

The one he liked most was the following from St. Johnsbury, Vt.:
I have followed your career with enthusiasm and admiration for years. Tonight I heard you speak in public for the first time. I remember gratefully my associations with you and Eddie Quinn on our way to and from Houston, but when all other memories have dimmed, your words tonight in tribute to the Celt will rise like a rainbow when my hopes are dimmer and my eyes are not seeing far. May God bless you.

The mayor will be back at his office tomorrow morning.

117,667 Did Not Pay Poll Tax

THE poll tax of $2 is a nuisance. And, in addition, there is a $1 tax for old-age assistance. Yet many a man who needs the $2 or $3 badly regularly pays his tax.

Then why should more than half the total of taxable persons fail to pay? Is it fair to those who do pay?

Undoubtedly there are thousands who just cannot pay. It would be almost criminal for the city to set the law on them. But there must be thousands of persons who simply ignore the tax which others, poorer than they, pay even at a sacrifice.

Therefore, we applaud the intention of the city to get after this selfish group and at the same time we urge officials to be careful not to harass needy persons who would pay if they could.

One of the most shocking reports in regard to the existing conditions is that more than 4000 city employes are delinquent. It is recognized that city employes have suffered cuts and have been obliged to assume, in many instances, added domestic responsibilities, but they are at least no worse off than many a man who has paid.

Not to pay poll tax means to be liable to pay interest, penalties, constables' fees and to suffer considerable annoyance, possibly punishment. Our advice is that this had better be avoided.
RENEWED CAMPAIGN FOR EMERGENCY RELIEF FUND

Suspended Since Bank Moratorium—Goal Now
$900,000 For Total of $4,500,000

The renewed drive for funds was begun today by the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign, with $900,000 as its goal. Robert F. Herrick, general chairman, issued an appeal last night, the first plea of the sort made since the campaign was suspended early in March, at the time of the tank moratorium.

"Only by increased subscriptions on the part of those who have already given, and by generous donations from the thousands of citizens who have not contributed, can the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign achieve the additional $900,000 needed to bring it to a successful close," he said.

"For many thousands of persons, the lack of ready cash while the banks were closed was their first meeting face to face with the problem of how to feed their families. For the thousands of worthy persons who are dependent during this crisis on the generosity of others, that problem is always present.

"Throughout this campaign we have never lost our faith that conditions would improve and our organization, working through the various committees and ward organizations, has tried to build up faith and hope in the future. Now that conditions have improved we must not forget that the work is not finished.

"Our great job is now one of rehabilitation, of getting people back on their feet so that they may support their families and become real assets instead of public charges. I urge all those who have given, even generously, to recognize the need and to give again.

"And to those who have failed to do their part, I suggest that they shoulder their responsibilities and make a generous contribution. The success of this campaign will mean the end of charity drives for this year, and it should be a constant reproach to anyone who is able if he has not sacrificed something for the unfortunate during this crisis."

Mr. Herrick's statement was prompted by a letter received from Russell G. Fessenden, chairman of the committee representing all the agencies participating in the campaign. Mr. Fessenden wrote as follows:

"At the end of 1932, 111 of Boston's leading charitable and philanthropic institutions joined their fund-raising activities in the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign. Their budgets, together with a planned special emergency fund of $300,000 totalling approximately $5,000,000, to be raised by public subscription during 1933, due to continued curtailing of budgets and to the hope that improving conditions will ease the present extraordinary burden on our charities, it is hoped that a total of $4,500,000 can be made to suffice.

"Thus far I understand the campaign has received subscriptions of about $3,600,000 in hand or in sight. It is imperative that the total shall not fall below $4,500,000, which means that another $900,000 must be subscribed by the public. Only in this way can our charitable organizations continue to help the sick poor, the hungry and the homeless people who come to their doors.

"The participating organizations believe that if their needs are presented to the generous citizens of Boston by your Emergency Relief Campaign, the added funds which are so badly needed will be readily subscribed."

Among others, the following leading citizens continue to induce the campaign: Gov Joseph B. Ely, Mayor James M. Curley, William Cardinal O'Connell, Rt Rev William Lawrence, Dr Harry Levi, Thomas P. Beal, Edwin D. Brooks, Edwin P. Brown, Walter S. Bucklin, Sidney S. Conrad, Walter L. Crocker, Victor J. Cutter, James D. Cushing, William R. Evans, Paul E. Fitzpatrick, Allan Forbes, Louis E. Kirstein, George E. Lee, Robert W. budgets and to the hope that improving conditions will ease the present extraordinary burden on our charities, it is hoped that a total of $4,500000 can be made to suffice.

"The opening of the East Boston traffic tunnel will not necessarily reduce the deficit; in fact, it may increase it," the bulletin says. "Boston may be faced with the predicament of having three publicly controlled and competing transportation lines to and from East Boston—the Elevated, the traffic tunnel, and the ferries—with the taxpayer paying the yearly deficits of all three."

The Bureau reiterates its opinion that the city cannot afford the proposed Huntington avenue subway, which is still before the General Court, and congratulates the city that the legislature reduced the city appropriation limit by $750,000. Speaking of the need of retrenchment in expenditures, the Bulletin says:

"For several years city officials have professed either unwillingness or inability to retrench to an adequate degree. Each budget is presented as 'artificial' or 'the irreducible minimum.' Civic bodies have been invited and have been challenged to show where further reductions can be made. The public will be interested to know that the way to further retrenchment has now been changed, if two reports recently made on city appropriations. The only question remaining is that of the willingness of city officials to reduce appropriations further when the way is shown them."

"These two entirely independent studies were recently presented to the legislative committee on municipal finance in connection with the Boston appropriation limit bill. One was drawn up by the Boston Finance Commission; the other by the Boston Municipal Research Bureau. The fact that these two reports, although approaching the problem from different angles and utilizing different methods, reach the same general conclusions, is striking indication of the fact that the road to satisfactory retrenchment is plain.
PUBLIC WELFARE SCHEDULES RAISED

In anticipation of the receipt by the city of $4,000,000 from the government under the terms of the LaFollette-Costigan bill, the overseers of the public welfare have decided to increase the allotments which will add $500,000 to the estimated cost of the department for the rest of the year.

The new schedule sets the minimum weekly allowance at $7 and the maximum at $12. The latter figure is a reduction from the previous maximum of $17, but very few families will be affected.

Hereafter a family of two will receive a maximum of $7 instead of $6. The present allotment of $7 for a family of three has been increased to $12 and families of four heretofore collecting $9 will be eligible for $10.

Where there are five persons in a family, the limit, heretofore $10, will be $12 and with six members the family will be eligible to $13. Families of seven will be eligible for $15 instead of $12.

City officials who have studied the LaFollette-Costigan act, interpret it to mean that Boston will be entitled to receive $1 for each $3 expended for welfare and a constant fire menace.

ARBORETUM CLUB TO HEAR MAYOR

Mayor Curley will be guest speaker at the Arboretum club meeting in Farnsworth hall, Jamaica Plain, tomorrow night. Also on the program will be Mrs. Joan C. Parsons, soloist, with Miss Helen Driscoll, pianist, and Mrs. Mary E. Curley, wife of the mayor, because of the great love for little ones, Chairman Joseph P. Manning of the finance committee of the institution announced today.

"Mrs. Curley was a beloved and devoted mother," Chairman Manning said. "During her life she took active interest in all movements to improve health and prevent suffering among little children. It is therefore fitting that this structure, most modern of its kind in the country, should be dedicated to her memory."

Exercises are scheduled for Saturday morning.

JAMES H. BRENNAN

Life, will be held tomorrow evening in the K. of C. Clubhouse, Charlestown. The organization was formed 10 years ago and the members gather in reunion annually. Jack Donaghy, well-known actor, up to the time of his death, attended these reunions. Its membership includes Hon. James H. Brennan, who was a member of the Governor's Council; Hon. John P. Buckley, a member of the Alcoholics'摆脱维行政委员会; City Councilor Thomas H. Green; James J. Mullen, clerk of the Charlestown Municipal Court; John Mahoney, secretary to Mayor James M. Curley; Charles Bartick, State Warden of the Knights of Columbus; Alderman George Hannett of Medford; former ELECTION COMMISSIONER; Edward P. Murphy, James A. Roan and Roger Smith.

The officers are David Drinan, president, John A. Kelley, treasurer and Charles Bartick, secretary.

City Officials Help Near East Bundle Day Drive

The cooperation of city departments in the Bundle Day drive for used clothing, has been announced by Mayor Curley through the Near East Committee, of which Albert A. Scott, is director. The campaign, which is being organized vigorously throughout Greater Boston, will culminate on Bundle Day, May 22.

According to Mr. Scott, the drive has not been sponsored by Governor Ely, and the full support of the mayor, Superintendent of Schools Patrick Campbell, the fire and police commission, and Richard Quinan, director of the Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare, has been announced.

Tags will be distributed in all the schools of Greater Boston for the children to take to their parochial schools. The fire stations throughout the city will be open on Bundle Day, May 22, to receive the clothing.

CITY COUNCIL OPPOSES OIL FARM PERMIT

The city council yesterday unanimously passed a resolution opposing the granting of a permit for the construction of a proposed 3,200,000-gallon gasoline tank opposite the end of East First St., South Boston, near St. Eulalia's Catholic Church.

"The proposed tank would be in a region of dwelling houses and a constant fire menace," said City Councillor George F. Donovan, Ward 6, in introducing the resolution. "In addition, the proposed pastor of St. Eulalia Church has said that his church, recently threatened by fire, will not be rebuilt if this menace is allowed in the neighborhood."

The permit was granted and revoked by Mayor Curley, and will be before the state commissioners for consideration Friday, and a great protest demonstration is to be held by the Rev. Patrick J. Waters, pastor of St. Eulalia's, will be staged at City Hall.

HOSPITAL TO BEAR MRS. CURLEY'S NAME

The new 10-story children's building at Boston City Hospital will be dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Mary E. Curley, wife of the mayor, because of her great love for little ones, Chairman Joseph P. Manning announced today.

"Mrs. Curley was a beloved and devoted mother," Chairman Manning said. "During her life she took active interest in all movements to improve health and prevent suffering among little children. It is therefore fitting that this structure, most modern of its kind in the country, should be dedicated to her memory."

CURLEY REVEALS HOUSING SCHEME

Mayor Plans to Get $40,000,000 from R. F. C. to Eradicate Slums Here

By JAMES GOGGIN

A stupendous municipal housing plan, involving upwards of $40,000,000 which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation may be requested to loan the city, is the objective of Mayor Curley as the closing achievement of 33 years of service in public offices to which he has been elected by the voters of Boston.

The idea, not yet advanced beyond the embryonic stage, concerns the wiping out of so-called slum districts in at least five sections of the city and the erection of modern apartment houses which it will be possible to rent at prices within the purse of families of workingmen.

The districts which have been chosen are Charlestown, the North, West and South ends, and a part of South Boston.

Secrecy has shrouded the study by experts of the plan which Mayor Curley has conceived in perspective. He is keenly anxious to have the idea converted into such comprehensive plans that basis will be made for a formal application to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the loan of the necessary funds.

The huge project would wipe out some of the old tenement districts of the city and replace them with modern dwellings which it would be possible to rent within the means of the average workingman.

The districts chosen are located in the North, West and South ends of Boston, Charlestown and a part of South Boston. Thus far no details of the plan have been revealed. The mayor desires to have the plans hopped out on a practicable basis for a formal application to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the loan of funds.

The scope of Mayor Curley's housing plan is said to have amazed the few men with whom he has discussed it but he appears to be confident that the project will be acceptable to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. For several years the mayor has repeatedly expressed his conviction that vast program of public works will do more than anything else to revive industry.

His present project would supply employment to thousands and would replace with modern dwellings many of the shabby tenement houses in several sections of the city.

His conviction remains unchanged and the espousal by President Roosevelt of a variety of gigantic public works plans has strengthened the mayor's belief that his viewpoint is fundamentally sound.

The cities, chosen are Charlestown, the North, West and South ends, and a part of South Boston. They would relieve unemployment to the extent of providing work for thousands and would furnish modern homes in place of cheap tenements in rookeries which are numerous in the cosmopolitan residential districts of the city.

How speedily the idea will be formulated into comprehensive plans is problematical. The mayor is keenly desirous of securing co-operation which will assure a rapid development.

$52,729 SEWER PROJECT APPROVED BY MAYOR

A $52,729 sewer project, the most expensive municipal improvement authorized this year, was approved by Mayor Curley yesterday. It entails the laying of a pipe line varying from 15 to 20 inches in diameter in the Freeport street brook section of Dorchester to prevent any further flooding of land adjacent to Dorchester brook.

The sewer will be laid in Auckland street between Freepost street brook and Savin Hill avenue and in Savin Hill avenue between Auckland street and Treadway road.

Mayor Approves $52,729 Sewer for Dorchester

To prevent the flooding of cellars in the Savin Hill section of Dorchester during heavy storms and flood tides, Mayor Curley, yesterday, approved the expenditure of $52,729 for the construction of a new sewer in the Dorchester brook sanitary sewer through Auckland street, between Freeport street and Savin Hill avenue, and also through Saving Hill avenue, between Auckland street and Treadway road.

Mayor Curley's Stand on Step Increase Cash Return

The suggestion of Boston school teachers that they be given the step increases due them, but that the cash consideration involved in the step did not financially benefit the teachers.

Frank Winston, president of the Council of Presidents of the Boston Male School Teachers' Association, represented the organization at the Mayor's office. The Mayor also present.

Out of a total of 18,000 city, county and school employees, all but 743 had failed to pay.

For persons, the amount will be $7. Where there are three in the family, who have been getting $12, will receive $12; six in a family, who have been getting $10 will receive $12; five in a family who have been getting $8 will receive $9. For families, the amount will be increased from $9 to $10. For families who have been allotted $10 will receive $12; six in a family, who have been getting $12, will receive $15 and seven in a family, who have been receiving $15, will get $18. The new maximum payment. The old maximum before reductions was $17.

37 West Roxbury Home Owners Paid Damages

Under the provisions of a special law passed this year by the Legislature, Mayor Curley yesterday approved the payment of $12,163 by the city in damages to 37 West Roxbury home-owners whose property was damaged by a dynamite explosion nearly a year ago when a city contracter was building a city sewer at Edgemoor and Hinsdale roads.

In directing City Auditor Rupert S. Carven to approve the payments ranging from $490 to $6 to the various home-owners, Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman stated that the settlements were satisfactory to all the claimants.

The list of properties damaged by the explosion follows:

The owner, location and the amount:
- Thomas William, 12 Charlotin road, $50.
- Carl Hansen, 26 Edgemoor road, $15.30.

17,257 PAID POLL TAXES

Report on 18,000 City Employees—10 Days to Pay

Out of a total of 18,000 city, county and school employees, all but 743 had paid their poll taxes, City Collector William M. M. M. McVeigh reported last night to Mayor Curley, adding that the remainder had failed either through oversight or illness.

The 743 delinquents will be given 10 days in which to turn in $3 for poll taxes and old age assistance assessments, and those that fail to do so will find the money withheld from their pay envelopes at the end of that time.

City to Use $4,000,000 to Increase Aid Totals

Public Welfare payments of the City of Boston to folk out of employment will be increased as a result of the $4,000,000 which will be allotted the city of Boston under the terms of the LaFollette-Costigan bill.

It was announced yesterday by the Public Welfare Department that two persons, who have been receiving $5 weekly, will receive $7. Where there are three in the family, who have been receiving $10, the maximum will be $12. For persons, the amount will be increased from $9 to $10. For families who have been allotted $10 will receive $12; six in a family, who have been getting $12, will receive $15 and seven in a family, who have been receiving $15, will get $18. The new maximum payment. The old maximum before reductions was $17.

ONLY 743 CITY EMPLOYEES FAIL TO PAY POLL TAXES

Estimates of unpaid poll taxes, in so far as city employees are concerned, appear to be unfounded, according to a statement issued by Mayor M. Curley yesterday. He said the City Collector had discovered that only 743 city employees, owing the city of Boston to folk out of employment, were not financially benefit. The idea of the teachers, who like other city employees were on a sliding scale increase from year to year and which was halted because of the depression, would work well in the city.

And the conference then and there terminated.

NO FAVORITISM FOR TEACHERS
CURLEY PEEVED AT TEACHERS’ OFFER
Will Not Make “Fish of One Group, Flesh of Another”

Mayor Curley today told Fred Winston, representing the male school teachers of Boston, that he would give no consideration to the latter’s proposal to restore step-rate salary increases to the male teachers, with the understanding that the increases be returned to the city.

Winston made that proposal in the presence of School Superintendent Farley, Campbell, and W. Arthur Reilly, chairman of the school committee. The mayor was incensed and said that any one who thought he would show favoritism to one group of city employees and not all, and thereby make fish of one group and flesh of another group was laboring under a delusion. He said that such proposition would wreck the city.

CURLEY WON’T FAVOR MALES
A plea for special consideration for Boston male school teachers drew stern rebuke from Mayor Curley today and a warning that not only would there be no favoritism in the administration of municipal affairs but that the suggestions of the teachers would wreck the city.

Frank Winston, representing the Council of Presidents, a committee composed of leaders of the various male organizations within the ranks of the teachers, requested the mayor to re-establish the step-rate salary system for the teachers and permit them to return to the city treasure money received in excess of that now paid them.

U.S. MAY ALLOT HUB $4,000,000 TO AID JOBLESS
Revelation that the City of Boston may obtain $4,000,000 for unemployment relief from the U. S. Government under the terms of the LaFollette-Costigan bill, was made before the city council yesterday by Budget Commissioner Charles J. Fox.

Fox declared that $9,400,000 was allotted to relief in the city budget, and that he expected the remainder of the $13,000,000 necessary would come from the federal government. The council passed an order providing for the welfare department in addition to $4,575,000 already appropriated. It is predicted this will keep the department in funds until August.

New Appropriation of $270,000 was made to the Soldiers’ Relief department.

While these measures were before the Council, a new increase to all families of seven or less on the welfare list were announced. The maximum payment for all families is $15.

SHOUSE TO SPEAK HERE AT LUNCHEON TODAY
Jouett Shouse, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, will be the principal speaker at a luncheon, open to the public, in the Boston City Club today at 12:30 P. M. The affair will be the formal opening of the campaign for election of repeal delegates to the state constitutional convention.

The Women’s Organization for Prohibition Reform, the Crusaders and the Constitutional Liberty League are sponsors of the luncheon. Besides Shouse, Gov. Ely, Mayor Curley, Gov. Theodore Green of Rhode Island, James Roosevelt and Mrs. Robert Lovett will speak.

COUNCIL REFUSES OUTLAY FOR BUREAU
Figures on Employment Unit Doubted by Members

After listening yesterday to the statement of Director John J. Shields of the municipal employment bureau that jobs for 16,000 persons have been found in the last 40 months, the city council promptly refused to consider appropriating $14,000 for the continuance of the bureau and told Shields to produce records to support his statement.

“And don’t bring the city directory here,” commented Councilman John F. Dowd after he had said: “I never could allow myself to believe such a cock and bull story as that one.”

The council also displayed interest in the retention as employees of the bureau of Kenneth MacDonald, said to be a resident of Milton, and Mrs. Mary E. Gallagher, wife of a member of the fire department and active political supporter of Mayor Curley.

Shields insisted that MacDonald resides in Burlington avenue, but after confessing that all workers in the bureau are “political appointees” responsible solely to the mayor, he begged to be excused from answering a question as to whether he would discharge Mrs. Gallagher, if he held such authority, and replace her with a jobless woman.

“Why, of course,” replied the mayor, “I have already been asked if Mrs. Gallagher, receiving a salary of $1600 a year, is not the wife of a fireman earning $2600 less the recent 15 per cent. reduction.

To Councilman Curths, the director made known that the salary list last year was $27,600, but that two of the staff, listed at $2000 each per year, had been retired.

In his defence of the bureau, which the majority of the councilmen consider to be a useless and an unnecessary expense, Shields maintained that of the 16,000 persons provided with work, not more than 15 per cent. were sent to jobs in the City. Furthermore, given employment data, the bureau is not needed.
ELY TAX PLAN IS DENOUNCED BY FITZGERALD

SCORES FAILURE TO GET R. F. C. AID

Question of Constitutionality Again Raised at Hearing

While Mayor Curley was urging the Boston members of the Legislature yesterday afternoon to support Gov. Ely's $25,000,000 taxation program, John F. Fitzgerald was appearing before the House committee on ways and means with a scathing denunciation of the proposed levies.

Fitzgerald charged the Governor and the mayor with being recreant to their public duties because of their failure to go to Washington in an attempt to obtain relief funds for state and city from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Although the Governor was somewhat what displeased with the attack aimed at his proposed relief for real estate, he made no public comment. The mayor likewise was silent on the attack.

WOULD DEFER ACTION

Fitzgerald said that the cities of San Francisco and Los Angeles already have borrowed $125,000,000 from the corporation, while 41 other states have been given and totalling more than $2,000,000,000. He urged the ways and means committee to defer action on the pending omnibus taxation bill, which includes a sales tax until the federal program is completed by the Congress.

J. B. Blood of Lynn, retail grocer, raised a question of constitutionality against the proposed sales tax in the face of the supreme court's recent ruling that it would be constitutional. Blood told the committee that the proposed operation of the sales tax was clearly unconstitutional in the section which prevents the merchants from collecting from consumers the tax on commodities costing less than 25 cents, while compelling the merchants to pay the tax to the commonwealth.

The supreme court, he added, had had no opportunity to pass on this feature of the proposed bill. He predicted that it would be carried to the high court if the bill is enacted.

Benjamin C. Lane, representing the United Improvement Association; Sheldon Wardwell, speaking for the Massachusetts Electric & Gas Association; W. R. Rodman Peabody, representing Turners Falls Electric & Power Company; B. Loring Young, P. Manley Ives, Russell S. Putnam and Representative Albert E. Morris of Everett spoke against the various taxation measures.

BACKS HEAD TAX

Morris expressed a willingness to support the proposal to impose a $2 head tax on women, but opposed the remainder of the bill. He suggested the imposition of a 100 per cent. tax on interest from real estate mortgages at any rate in excess of 6 per cent. on principal sums of $2000 or less and a 100 per cent. tax on all interest now being received in excess of 5 per cent. on real estate mortgages for amounts in excess of $2000.

Fitzgerald told the committee that the is particularly a tax in its failure to obtain funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in view of the fact that the building industry at present is practically prostrate. He said that the mayor's program proposes to go through this matter of compromise.

Mayor Curley continues to oppose the proposed sales tax, which would have put the financial burden of financing this program on women and on those who own real estate.

Fitzgerald suggested that this money could be used in the elimination of service payments. He said that he could well leave that task to the Democrats, who have the majority in the House and would, in his opinion, devote their efforts to persuading Gov. Ely to join them in obtaining at least $50,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in view of the fact that the building industry at present is practically prostrate.

Fitzgerald suggested that this money could be used in the elimination of service payments. He said that he could well leave that task to the Democrats, who have the majority in the House and would, in his opinion, devote their efforts to persuading Gov. Ely to join them in obtaining at least $50,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in view of the fact that the building industry at present is practically prostrate.

The mayor expressed a willingness to support the proposal to impose a $2 head tax on women, but opposed the remainder of the bill. He suggested the imposition of a 100 per cent. tax on interest from real estate mortgages at any rate in excess of 6 per cent. on principal sums of $2000 or less and a 100 per cent. tax on all interest now being received in excess of 5 per cent. on real estate mortgages for amounts in excess of $2000.

URGES BIG LOANS FOR CITY, STATE

Fitzgerald Opposed to Proposal for Sales Tax

A demand that Governor Ely and Mayor Curley apply for loans of $50,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and use the La Follette-Costigan act as a means of helping to relieve real estate taxation in Massachusetts cities and towns was made by the former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, who spoke in opposition to the sales tax at yesterday's hearing before the House ways and means committee.

WAIT FOR CONGRESS

Mr. Fitzgerald took the ground that the Legislature should take no action on the tax programme, which Governor's bill, until it has been determined whether Congress will do to extend relief to cities and towns.

Pointing out that Mayor Curley had spoken in behalf of real estate, Fitzgerald said that the real estate was left entirely the business of Congress. He criticized the action of the Legislature in abolishing the Metropolitan Planning Board. Such a board, he argued, is necessary at this time to study plans for removing slums and providing employment for the large number of building trades workers who are now walking the streets.

Oppose Power Tax

The former Mayor said Massachusetts cities and towns should be encouraged by the federal aid given to cities and towns and that the State should get its share of the money thus borrowed used to put men to work abolishing slums, electrifying the railroads and rebuilding the slums of Boston and other congested areas. He said the State should get its share of the money to be spent.

Curley Calls on Boston Men in Legislature to Support Governor's Measure

Mayor Curley late yesterday called upon Boston members of the Legislature, meeting at the State House, to vote for the passage of Governor Ely's tax bill, regardless of their opposition to some of its provisions, because of the necessity of providing relief for the cities and towns.

"You must regard this tax bill as your unpleasant duty and if you vote for it together, there cannot be discrimination against any other city when you come up for re-election," the Mayor told the Boston legislators, 29 of whom attended his meeting.

"I am glad that portions of the Governor's bill are objectionable, particularly the poll tax and the sales tax, but I would like to see this bill go through, because the cities and towns must have some assistance in meeting the demands for public relief, which State Director of Accounts Theodore N. Weddell estimates will be $200,000,000 more this year than in 1932," the Mayor said.

"In the tax programme, I would rather see an increase in the income tax, from 1% to 3% per cent, and in the tax on intangibles from 6 to 10 per cent, but there isn't any such thing as getting a perfectly satisfactory tax programme, and the Mayor of Massachusetts does not get to support the Governor's bill, which, perhaps, is the best that could be drafted."

Police listing for 1933 shows an increase of 1000 over 1932. The total is 501,175, of which 240,077 are men and 260,098 are women.

The 1930 United States census gave Boston a population of 582,107 and in the opinion of Mayor James M. Curley the figures should be contested.

"I believe that there are many residents of Boston under 20 years of age, as there are only 301,175 men and 301,175 women. The Mayor believes that there are 1,000,000 residents of the city."

Unfair Comparison

At a time when the city's credit occupies an enviable place among the cities, not only of the country, but of the state as well, it is poor and misleading publicity for the Boston Municipal Research Bureau, not an official city bureau, to give unfair implication to figures.

The bureau bemoans the fact that Boston's tax rate, which, up to 1932, was lower than the average for the eighteen surrounding cities and towns, in 1932 was "slightly more than that average."

Why compare Boston's problem with that of the smaller cities and towns that surround it? Why overlook the tremendous cost of public welfare—$12,000,000 a year—borne entirely out of taxes? Why not compare Boston with cities somewhere near its size?

Constructive criticism is welcomed. But the Boston Municipal Research Bureau on this occasion uses specious argument to build up its plaint.

Step Rate Salary Gains are Refused

Curley Turns Down Plea of Male School Teachers

Mayor Curley gave short shrift yesterday to Boston's male school teachers who asked him to grant them a distinct preference in the matter of salary over all other classes of city employees.

Curley, telling Frank Winston, who appeared as the representative of all organizations of male teachers, that the proposal presented to him in the presence of Chairman W. Arthur Reilly of the school committee and Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell "would wreck the city," the mayor refused even to consider granting the deferred step-rate salary increase to male teachers with the understanding that the additional increment would be immediately returned to the city treasury.

The teachers had decided that it might be possible for them to assure themselves of the maximum salaries to which they would be entitled by years of service simultaneously with the end of the depression.

Winston proposed to the mayor that the deferred annual increment be allowed with the specification that the teachers would not retain the additional money.

What the teachers asked of the mayor was to guarantee them that when municipal finances were in better condition, they would collect salaries in full accord with the annual increment plan.

The mayor told Winston that he would not be a party to any favoritism that he intended to treat city employees as one family, and that no preference would be shown any group. He added that the suggestion of the teachers "would wreck the city" and continued that "I will not make fish of one group and flesh of another group. I will treat all alike."

Constructive criticism is welcomed. But the Boston Municipal Research Bureau on this occasion uses specious argument to build up its plaint.

Curley Doubts Boston Census

Mayor Cites Listing by Police as Offset to Federal Figures

Mayor Curley expressed serious doubt today as to the accuracy of the federal census for Boston, which was recorded as 781,188. The mayor was inclined to doubt the data, because the Boston police, a month ago, concluded listing residents of the city, over the age of 20, and recorded 501,175. The mayor is of the opinion that the number of persons under 20 added to those over that age would bring the total to a much larger figure than that which the census shows.

"James M. Curley" Had Middle Initial Right, But Didn't Know Name

Are you sure that you are James M. Curley? demanded Judge Michael J. Murray of a defendant arraigned in Municipal Court today on a drunkenness charge.

"I am," replied the erstwhile drunk.

"Well, what does the 'M' stand for—Myrtle or Michael?" inquired the judge.

This proved a poser for the defendant, who decided that his name, after all, was Robert Kenney. He lived in Blackstone square, he said. Judge Murray gave him ten days. It has been the fashion, among up-to-date drunks in court recently, to describe themselves variously as "John Quincy Adams," "Henry Clay," and other celebrities. This was the first time the mayor had been so chosen.

Mayor Denies Step Raises to Teachers

Frank Winston, president of the council of presidents of the Boston Male School Teachers' Association, representing that body, accompanied by Supt of Schools Patrick T. Campbell and Chairman William Arthur Reilly of the School Committee, visited Mayor Curley at City Hall yesterday and suggested that Boston school teachers be given the step increases due them, but that the cash consideration involved be returned to the city.

The suggestion was not well received by the mayor, who said:

"Increments will not be restored at this time. No favoritism will be shown. The school teacher will be treated like every other city employee. There is no class distinction here. We must treat city employees as one big family. We cannot make fish of one group and flesh of another. Other workers have requested no such consideration and I cannot consider this of the teachers. This suggestion would wreck the city."

To Ask Roosevelt Not to Close Chelsea Naval Hospital

BY WALTER HEINTZ

Mayor Curley will go to Washington within a few days in behalf of the war veterans of Massachusetts and will make a personal appeal to President Roosevelt not to permit the virtual closing of the Chelsea Naval Hospital. Veteran representatives asked him to make the trip because they feel that there is a real danger that the institution will close its doors after the last of the war veteran patients are discharged in about two weeks.

ARRANGE FOR TRIP

They said last night that with only the handful of many patients who are to remain in the hospital it is expected the government officials will insist that the place be closed. Arrangements for his trip to call on the President were made with the Mayor yesterday at a conference he had with Major Edwin H. Cooper of Newton, national commander of the Legion of Valor.

Both as aid to war veterans who need hospitalization for service-connected disabilities and to save the huge expense to the city and other cities when they are forced to provide hospital facilities for the veterans who no longer will be cared for by the government, Mayor Curley will urge that the hospital be retained for both naval and veteran patients.

Mayor Sees Action Necessary

Major Cooper, after the conference yesterday, said that he will urge the Mayor in presenting the facts and figures to President Roosevelt. He said he hopes to arrange a conference at the American Legion, Spanish War Veterans, Disabled American Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars representatives may present specific recommendations for Mayor Curley to discuss with the President.

Mayor Curley said last night that he will gladly represent the veterans in their request that the hospital facilities for veterans be continued at Chelsea, not only because he believes it is clearly the duty of the federal government to care for the men whose service was accepted in time of war, but also because providing hospitalization for disabled war veterans may well be

MAYOR TO ADDRESS ARBORETUM CLUB

Mayor Curley will be guest speaker at the Arboretum Club meeting in Fraternity Hall, Jamaica Plain, this evening. Also on the programme will be Mrs. Joan C. Parson, soloist, widely known as an artist of exceptional talent, with Miss Helen V. Driscoll piano accompanist. Mrs. Parson has chosen a group of especially melodious songs, including "Blue Danube Waltz," "Mary of Argyll," "Singing Thru," "Some Day I'll Find You" and "Spring Song," composed by Mrs. Gulick, co-author of "Jack Whittington." This meeting, the last of a successful and progressive club year, has been dedicated to the memory of Major Edwin H. Cooper of Newton, national commander of the Legion of Valor, whose devotion and untiring effort have built an organization of 10,000 women actively interested in the civic, social and charitable affairs of their district.

N O PAY BOOST FOR TEACHERS

Mayor Refuses Plea for Sliding Scale Increases

Requests of Boston's school teachers for an order to them sliding scale increases next fall were flatly rejected yesterday by Mayor Curley at a conference with school representatives at City Hall.

Protesting that such action would "wreck the city," the Mayor explained that the police, firemen and other municipal employees as well as the school teachers had been forced to go without annual increases during the past few years, and warned that there would be no favoritism shown to any single group.

MARY E. CURLEY PAVILION TO BE OPENED SATURDAY

The Children's Building, a 10-story structure, believed to be the most modern in the United States in the treatment of diseases of children, will be opened at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, according to Chairman Joseph P. Manning of the Board of Trustees of the City Hospital.

The building, the Mary E. Curley Pavilion, is named in memory of the deceased Mayor, because of the active interest displayed by her during her lifetime for the welfare of children.

A painting of Mrs Curley, in oils, a gift of the Mayor, is to be hung in the building.

NEW CLUBHOUSE FOR CITY LINKS

Mayor James M. Curley declared last night at a banquet tendered to Gene Sarazen, British and national open golf champion, at the Ritz Carlton, that the time is ripe for the city of Boston to erect a new club house on the public links at Franklin Park.

"During the past 10 days $35,000 has been received as green fees," his Honor stated, "which is very encouraging to any student of public links golf."

"This money represents the yearly permits and daily green fees taken in during the past 10-day period and it seems to me that with that interest in the game a new club house should be built."

Sarazen in return asked for an invitation to participate in the opening ceremonies of the course and play against Ouimet. In extolling the virtues of Sarazen, Francis Ouimet, former national titlist, whom Sarazen plays this afternoon, told the gathering that "Gene is the greatest golfer not only of today but of all time since I have been interested in the game in my lifetime."
MUNICIPAL GOLF COURSE
MAY HAVE NEW CLUB HOUSE

Mayor Curley, in Speaking at Banquet
To Gene Sarazen, Says Time Is Ripe
To Ask For Such Appropriation

Encouraged by the intake of $13,000 during the past 10 days at the municipal course at Franklin Park, Mayor Curley told some 50 members of the golfing fraternity, who paid tribute to Gene Sarazen at the Elks Club last night, that he was about to ask for an appropriation for a clubhouse at the new municipal links in West Roxbury.

"This dinner, given by Boston friends of Sarazen," declared the Mayor, "the return match between Gene and Francis Ouimet, which starts at Weston tomorrow, have created a favorable golfing atmosphere, and the time is ripe to call for a $50,000 to a $100,000 appropriation towards completing Boston's new municipal links."

During his short address, the Mayor put up a good argument for calling for the appropriation in these critical times. "Out at Scarsboro," the Mayor declared, "during the past few years the city has realized a net profit of approximately $15,000 per year. This is the profit from the $10 per year membership fee and the $1 greens fee, for nonmembers.

Pay Honor to George Wright

"This year there has been more interest than ever at Franklin Park and it certainly is encouraging. It is my hope that we will soon be able to open the course and officially dedicate it to George Wright, one of the finest of the sportmen and one of the first Bostonians to play golf."

The opponents in the exhibition match, Sarazen and Ouimet, were both seated at the head table, with speakers Leon B. Rogers, president of Brae Burn, sitting between them.

When called on to speak, Ouimet declared that Sarazen "was the finest shotmaker that he had ever seen and a wonderful sportman. It was a pleasure and honor," continued Francis, "to be able to play against Gene and I sincerely hope that he returns his American and British open titles this year."

"However," he continued, "I am going out there tomorrow to beat you and will play the best I know how."

Sarazen Seeks "Invitation"

Shoing his sincerity in the wonderful hospitality received while in Boston, Sarazen, who followed the Mayor, asked to be invited to help in the dedication of the new municipal course and play against Ouimet. Mayor accepted Sarazen's "invitation."

JAMES M. CURLEY IS ROBERT KENNEY

Drunk Who Used Mayor's Name Given 10 Days

There was a mild sensation in Municipal Court today when the court clerk in Judge Michael J. Murray's session of Municipal Court called out the name of James M. Curley. The spectators waited with bated breath, expecting to see the Mayor of the city step to the bar of justice. Instead of the dignified form of the Mayor, however, there was the slight form of a lesser individual.

Questioned by Judge Murray, the defendant said that his full name was James Michael Curley, but he frankly admitted that he was not Mayor of Boston, in fact he never hoped to attain that high office. Judge Murray mentioned the fact that in recent weeks John Quincy Adams and Henry Clay had been in court before him.

The Probation Department looked into the defendant's record and found out that he was really Robert Kenney of Blackstone sq.

Kenney was sentenced to 30 days in jail, the penalty for imbibing too freely of spirituous liquors.

URGES DIVERSION

Mayor Curley Addresses Legislative Group

The wisdom of favorable action in the Legislature upon two bills which would permit the city of Boston to divert $1,000,000 for two years from existing funds was impressed upon the Boston delegations in the House and Senate by Mayor Curley, at a luncheon he tendered them this noon at the Hotel Bellevue.

These bills, now in committee, provide that the city shall divert $500,000 each from the Cemetery Department fund and the Retirement System fund, for 1933 and 1934, this money to be expended for current expenses.

If authorized to spend these funds thus, the Mayor is pledged, and his immediate successor would be obliged to reduce the city tax rate by 52 cents for each of the two years. The Mayor argued that this money may now safely be taken from these funds.

Mayor May Arrive Today or Tomorrow to Confer on Federal Job

WASHINGTON, May 18 (Thursday) — Mayor Curley of Boston is expected in Washington today or tomorrow to confer with President Roosevelt and Postmaster-General Farley concerning his availability for appointment to an important federal position. The mayor has been summoned here for a conference, following preliminary discussions of the position at the dinner to Mr. Farley in New York last Saturday night.

Although none of those close to the President's official family would discuss the appointment, it was said that positions to be discussed include a place on the Tennessee Valley reclamation project, a place on the shipping board and an executive position in connection with Roosevelt's public works program.

Efforts to reach Mayor Curley in Boston this morning were unavailing. His home on the Jamaicaway did not answer, and at the home of City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan, who usually accompanies the mayor on his trips to Washington, it was said that he was out of town.

MANSFIELD TO ENTER FIGHT
Will Declare Candidacy for Mayor Tomorrow

Former Secretary of State Frederick W. Mansfield, who rolled up 106,000 votes in Boston's last mayoralty election, will make formal announcement tomorrow of his candidacy to succeed Mayor Curley.

The first public demonstration in his campaign will come this noon when a group of his boyhood friends at East Boston will erect the first of a series of large campaign signs at Central square, but a short distance from his birthplace. The radio time has been reserved for Attorney Mansfield at Station WNAC for tomorrow night between 8:06 and 8:15 o'clock. While he has declined to make known the subject of his proposed address, it was learned definitely that he proposes at that time to announce publicly his candidacy for Mayor of Boston.

TWO ARRESTS MADE
Following the talk with these leaders, the Mayor turned the matter into the hands of Corporation Counsel Silverman. Last night a report of the visit of the two leaders was made at a meeting of the joint executive board at 25 Lagrange street. It was decided that the committee should furnish Mr. Silverman with a list of shops that are violating the health laws of the city, and inform him that if he desired to aid the workers he might do so by having these laws made effective through the board of health.

But two arrests were made in the strike zone yesterday, both being on charges of sauntering and loitering. These arrested were Esther Rosenfield, 37, 37 Myrtle street, and Jacob Ames, 46, of 5 Columbus place, Dorchester.

Throw Spools at Pickets

The manufacturers who are still resisting to do business last night repaired to the use of taxi cabs to get their workers out of the district. A large detail of police was on hand, but no attempt was made to molest the workers.

The throwing of large wooden spools from a building on Henry street during the morning hours, presumably at the strike pickets, caused Captain William W. Livinston to send officers into every shop in the building to issue orders against throwing anything from the building, or arrests would result. The union will require the placing of double as a security for the carrying out of the terms of all contracts arranged.

CURLEY SAY S ROOSEVELT TEMPERED HITLER SPEECH

The world disarmament message of President Roosevelt was held responsible for the temperate address Adolf Hitler made on the status and plans of Germany, according to Mayor James M. Curley, who was the only guest speaker last night at the final meeting of the Arboretum Club in Fraternity Hall, Jamaica Plain.

Curley lauded the leadership of Roosevelt. He declared that under Roosevelt there will eventually be some form of unemployment insurance so that the workers may have some security during periods of distress.

He declared that he took pride in Boston's sound financial condition. He compared it with financial conditions of other cities.

In commenting on finances, the Mayor said that one-half the unemployed men in the country could well be put to work building "prisons for dishonest bankers."

MAYOR E. HAGAN DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Henry E. Hagan, 68, former president of the Boston City Council and for 17 years State treasurer of the Knights of Columbus, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 18 Victoria at Dorchester, after a short illness.

Funeral services will be held at St. William's Church, Dorchester, Monday morning, with burial in Calvary Cemetery.

Mr. Hagan was born in St. John, N.B., in 1865. When he was quite young his parents moved to this vicinity, and he lived in East Boston, Chelsea and the North End before residing in Dorchester, where he spent most of his life. He was educated in the public schools of Chelsea.

For many years he was engaged in the retail shoe business in this city, being proprietor of a large store at Washington and Hoytson Sts.

He was a candidate for the City Council in 1914, but was defeated. He was elected the following year, however, and served until 1920. As president of the Council in 1916 he handled the affairs of the city as acting Mayor for a short time during the absence of vacation of Mayor Curley. During his term in office and council he had the indiscriminate good government association.

He was a charter member and past grand knight of Exceletor Council of East Boston and became state treasurer in 1901 of the Knights of Columbus, which office he held for many years. Besides being a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Catholic and Young Men's Catholic Association, he was the first president of the National Retailers' Association.

Mr. Hagan is survived by four daughters, Mrs. George S. Clarkson of Dorchester, Mrs. Mark Croker and Mrs. Joseph C. White, all of Jamaica Plain. Mrs. White is the wife of Senator White of the 6th Suffolk District.

MAYOR CURLEY MOVES TO END GARMENT STRIKE

Mayor James M. Curley entered the situation created by a strike of approximately 30,000 women employed in nearly 100 dress and skirt manufacturing shops in this city yesterday, when a number of the manufacturers asked Philip Kramer, manager of the Boston Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Union, to confer with him at City Hall.

The union leaders, after explaining the situation created by a strike of sitters employed in nearly 100 dress and skirt manufacturing shops in this city yesterday, when a number of the manufacturers asked the joint board that a number of manufacturers had applied for conferences to discuss settlement terms.

MAYORS CALLED INTO ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Mayors of cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants have been summoned to another conference at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D.C., for next Wednesday, to pass legislation which would permit the Federal Reserve Board and the R. P. C. to purchase taxicabs for the workmen and due to a large force of police on hand there was no disturbance last night. Two arrests were made during the day, both being on charges of loitering. Announcement was made at the meeting of the joint board that a number of manufacturers had applied for conferences to discuss settlement terms.
MANSFIELD ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

As Mayor He Hints He Would Restore Pay Cuts

Branding the administrations of Mayor Curley and former Mayor Nichols as "eight years of waste and inefficiency," City Hall," Attorney Frederick W. Mansfield, former State treasurer, and recent head of the Massachusetts Bar Association, last night made formal announcement of his candidacy for Mayor of Boston.

DEPLORES WAGE CUTS

Had they administered the affairs of the city wisely, there would have been no necessity of reducing the salaries of Boston's public employees, he charged in an appeal for the support of labor on the virtual promise to restore the city pay cuts.

By the elimination of "waste and graft," he asserted, government economies would be effected to provide a reduction in the tax rate for the relief of property owners, without taking millions of dollars from the pockets of school teachers, firemen, policemen, mechanics, laborers and all other city and county employes. He promised that the savings would be effected to provide the city pay cuts. By elimination of waste and graft in government, necessary economies may be effected and the burden on the taxpayer lightened without reduction in the tax rate.

He asserted that city contractors were paying "slavery wages" to their laborers. Councillor Dowd of Roxbury in a public letter of protest to Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke last night demanded that the offending contractors be blacklisted and that a specific rate of pay be included in all future contracts.

Councillor Dowd declared that a contractor engaged in the work of reconstructing Grove street, Roxbury, was paying only 25 cents an hour to his laborers, although 45 cents an hour has been considered the standard rate.

He asserted that he took an unemloyed man to the foreman of the job and asked that he be put to work. Councillor Dowd said that the foreman did not recognize him and openly revealed that the contractor was paying only 25 cents an hour and offered to put the laborer to work at that wage.

PRADO OPENS COLUMBUS DAY

Land Purchases Clear the Way for Construction

Completion of the $100,000 North End pra do in time for this year's celebration of Columbus Day was assured by Mayor Curley last night. The trustees of the $60,000 George Robert White Fund reached agreements of sale with the owners of the 18 tenement buildings which will be wiped out. Between St. Stephen's Church at Hanover street, and the historic Old North Church on Salem street, the scenario promenade will be built on the pattern of Havana's famous prado.

The land takings, including buildings, will reach a total of $240,000 under agreements made by the trustees to pay 10 per cent above the assessed valuation on the two big blocks at Hanover street and Webster avenue, and as much as 35 per cent above the assessed valuation on a few of the minor holdings where costly repairs have been made in recent years.
Making a Bad Tax Worse
The State's Income Tax Racket

Governor Ely and Mayor Curley are exactly right when they say that the new tax plan calculated to raise an additional $25,000,000 for relief of our cities and towns will work some injustices upon some of our people.

But they are exactly wrong when they say that the new tax plan should be adopted in toto regardless of the injustices it may contain.

Take the income tax scheme as an example of their error. The income tax was a racket to begin with. It was purposely engineered through the Legislature by a venal lobby to enable the rich owners of intangible wealth to escape the payment of taxes by dumping their taxes upon the wage-earners and professional men.

Now it is proposed to augment the original and indefensible injustice of the income tax by further reducing the exemptions allowed the wage-earners and professional and salaried men.

This new scheme will have the effect of forcing a high rate of income tax to be paid by our workers who receive only $30 or $35 a week and who are supposed to rear and maintain families on that small income.

Two wrongs cannot make a right. The income tax was had in its inception. You cannot compromise with injustice.

Rather than make the income tax a hydra-headed monster of injustice, it would be better to kill it entirely. The people have been quite patient the last three years but they will not stand abuse of their rights forever.

CONRY PLACES CURLEY IN WEBSTER'S CLASS
Reilly Praises Teachers at Submasters' Dinner

Mayor Curley was placed in the same class with Daniel Webster, Caleb

Governor Lawrence, Massachusetts statesmen of three generations ago, by Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry, in a talk, “Politicians and Statesmen,” last evening at the annual dinner of the Boston Submasters’ Club, at the City Club.

He paid tribute to Mayor Curley as a man who because of his firmness and success has made bitter enemies, and declared that if he himself were to mortalize, he would teach every boy in the public schools to be on the level, to reject characteristics of jealousy, hate, and other similar abhorrent qualities advanced by others, and to be guided by his own judgment.

Declaring that the community needs to be brought to a realization of its responsibility to its teachers, Chairman William, Arthur Reilly of the School Committee asserted that the teachers give service which is not surpassed by any other city department. He said that if it were not for the class and school influence, there is no knowing what might have happened during the present conditions.

In all probability, said Chairman Reilly, the salary reductions recently put into effect would not be in force more than two years, although, he added rather facetiously, “the 25 or 50 candidates for Mayor will promise to bring back lost increments and salary reductions.”

Asst Supt John C. Brodhead announced a plan to give graduates of the Teachers College who are unemployed appointment as assistant teachers, serving gratuitously, so that they can gain experience which they must have before taking the city examinations.

A six-year evening course is advanced, with sessions four nights a week, is needed in Boston.” Joseph F. Gould, director of evening and Summer schools, declared.

Maurice J. Tobin, School Committeeman; William B. Snow and William F. Mack spoke briefly.

Camille Girouard sang baritone solo.

City Aid Plea

Mayor Curley will leave Boston Tuesday for Washington, where, on the following day, mayors representing nearly every community of the country will meet with a representative of President Roosevelt for discussion of legislation to permit federal agencies to lend money to municipalities in anticipation of taxes.

Mayor Curley, as president of the Congress of Mayors, will be the principal speaker and present the views of the majority of his associates.

The Mayor may meet with President Roosevelt but, according to close friends, he will not discuss Federal appointment for himself since the position which he will eventually occupy in the Roosevelt official family has been tendered him and accepted.

The Mayor will be accompanied by Secy. Cornelius A. Beardon.

WILL GIVE CITY LIST OF SWEAT SHOPS

Garment Workers Hope for Improvement in Conditions

A list of sweat shops in the city will be given the health department by members of the joint board of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, who conferred yesterday with Mayor Curley and later with Samuel Silverman, corporation counsel.

It is hoped that the health authorities will be able to assist in improving working conditions in a number of the shops in the garment trade.

While nearly all were picketed yesterday during the third day of the garment strike in Boston, only two arrests were made. A man and a woman, both workers, were arrested for loitering and loitering.

Capt. William W. Livingston, a number of his men and a score of workers were showered with big spools thrown from the windows of a Kneeland street factory during the picketing yesterday but no injuries were reported.
Mayor Curley receiving as a gift from Gene Sarazen the bag of clubs with which Gene won the British and American open golf championships, from the Mayor's office. Mr. Curley presented him with a history of the city, a portrait of George Washington and the city's official felicitations in his coming campaigns. The Mayor was busy calling up his golfing partners and arranging a heated foursome as Sarazen left the official chambers and Sarazen went back to the hotel, picked out another set of bludgeons and fared forth to Charles River to shoot one of the prettiest rounds seen on that course for many a day.

A fellow likes to have a story come true for him.

Here's one that did.
Your correspondent, having written himself into a terrific lather upon the subject of golf lately, was aiming to do a piece about Jack Sharkey this morning, featuring some new information about the world's heavyweight champion. But before he can get around to the subject of Mr. Sharkey, there's one last golfing item that he feels he can't avoid.

That's about Mr. Sarazen giving his entire set of golf clubs to Mr. Curley, our celebrated Mayor.

I mean that it's something worth recording when a fellow steps right out and makes a story come true. Newspapermen are used to the other sort of stuff. Gentlemen who deny that they said something or did something are the usual run in this line of business. Occasionally, however, there comes along some individual who backs a story up to the ultimate limit.

Mr. Sarazen pulled such a trick at the City Hall yesterday. We had written in yesterday morning's Post a story about how Sarazen didn't fancy any particular set of clubs, that, in contradistinction to a great many golfers, a bat was just a bat so far as he is concerned and one is about as good as another.

Just by way of making the story look good, the blocky and cocky little American and British open champion rolled down to the City Hall at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, blocking School street with his celebrated Miami-Biltmore land yacht, and being escorted upward to the Mayor's office, he presented Mr. Curley with every club he used against Ouimet the previous day, together with the worn, but extremely handsome, black leather bag he carried when he won the British open last year.

EVERYTHING BUT PUTTER

Something like three beautiful woods and a dozen brand new irons, he presented to Hizzoner. The set included everything but a putter. The champion didn't give the ex-ambassadorial nominee to Poland his putter, because he's been experimenting with it in a machine shop lately and had cobbled it up pretty badly. The Mayor said he had a putter anyhow.

Mr. Curley in the midst of a busy morning, with characteristic hospitality, paused long enough to take a lesson in how to swing the heavy Sarazen driver. At least that's what it started to be, but before it ended, it appeared that the Mayor was giving Sarazen the lesson. At least His Honor was doing all the talking and the champion was doing all the listening, but that's the way it is when you start fooling with politicians.

Sarazen didn't have a club of any sort when he went back from his call upon the Mayor, but he had an armful of souvenirs.
TO BOOM BOSTON AS WEEK-END GOAL

Hotels, Railroads and Others Join in Campaign

Boston, with its Faneuil hall, churches, colleges and adjoining historic spots on the North and South Shores, offered facilities and attractions to week-end visitors last night at a summer campaign sponsored by railroad, hotel, steamship, church, college and recreational executives meeting at the Hotel Stetler, with the Massachusetts Industrial and Development Commission.

For 17 weeks every feature of the city will be publicized as points as far distant as Washington, Chicago and Nova Scotia. An estimated crowd of 5000 each week for 17 weeks, with a spending capacity of $850,000, is the goal of the boosters.

Gov. Ely, through his secretary, Deputy C. DeWolf, opened the "spend your week-ends in Boston" plan in a radio address over WHZ last night, with Mayor Curley scheduled to make an appeal from the air a week later.

An order the week before, a Charles river pageant and celebration, and even enlistment of President Roosevelt in the cause during Harvard's commencement week, were planned last night.

Every Sunday this summer will be a "flying" day in Boston, according to Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, the chief speaker at the dinner.

John T. Scully, chairman of the commission, presided at the dinner where Bradley Cushing, manager of the Hotel Stetler, also a member of the commission, acted as host. Four steamship lines, four railroad lines, 14 hotels, two major league ball clubs, four bus lines were represented and joined in a discussion of the wisest of offerings to attract week-end visitors during the summer.

More than 110,000 pamphlets have been distributed in centres outside Boston, the trips of all varieties and to all historic and recreational spots which may be taken.

Prior owner of the Hotels Lenox and Brunswick, was chosen to head a committee of all the business men and women above 20 years of age living in the city. Of these, 260,238 are women and 240,937 are men.

The mayor believes that the police listing shows that there are 1,000,000 residents of the city.

CURLEY CHALLENGES U. S. CENSUS FIGURES

Mayor Says Police Listing Shows City Must Have 1,000,000

On the assumption that there are as many residents of Boston under 20 years of age as there are over that age, Mayor Curley declared yesterday that he challenged the official Boston federal census showing a population of 781,186 in 1930. He expressed a firm conviction that many thousands of residents were not listed by the federal enumerators.

The 1933 police listing shows that there are 581,170 men and women above 20 years of age living in the city. Of these, 260,238 are women and 240,937 are men.

The mayor believes that the police listing shows that there are 1,000,000 residents of the city.

MAYOR IN TALK WITH STRIKERS

Leaders to Give List of Shops Violating Health Laws

Mayor Curley yesterday took steps to bring about a settlement of the strike of dress and skirt makers of this city. Following a request lodged with him by a number of manufacturers whose shops have been closed by the strike, the Mayor requested Philip Kramer, manager of the Boston Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, A. F. of L., and Israeal Feinberg, vice-president of the international, who are in charge of the strike, to come to his office.

TWO ARRESTS MADE

Following the talk with these leaders, the mayor turned the matter into the hands of Corporation Counsel Silverman. Last night a report of the visit of the two leaders was made at a meeting of the joint executive board at Lagrange street. It was decided that the committee should furnish Mr. Silverman with a list of shops that are violating the health laws of the city, and inform him that if he desired to aid the workers he might do so by having these laws made effective through the board of health.

But two arrests were made in the strike zone yesterday, both being on charges of disorderly conduct.

Throw Spools at Pickets

The manufacturers who are still striving to do business last night reported to the police that they have made their workers out of the district. A large detail of police was on hand, but no attempt was made to molest the workers.

The throwing of large wooden spools rising out of wage reductions and revision of hours for workers at the municipal printing plant yesterday caused Mayor Curley to instruct Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman and Budget Commissioner J. Fox to make an inquiry of rates of compensation paid employees there and to arrange a more equitable scale of pay cuts for them.

Curley Orders Fair Pay Cut

A series of minor misunderstandings arising out of wage reductions and revision of hours for workers at the municipal printing plant yesterday caused Mayor Curley to instruct Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman and Budget Commissioner J. Fox to make an inquiry of rates of compensation paid employees there and to arrange a more equitable scale of pay cuts for them.

TAX APPEALS BOARD PLAYED

City Law Head Gains Point by Protest

Accused by Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman of "slaughtering Boston's reality values and driving Massachusetts cities and towns to bankruptcy," the State Board of Tax Appeals cleared him yesterday for reconsideration of two recent decisions granting large abatements here.

The head of the city law department protested that the board had made "outrageous and absurd decisions" in granting abatements, reducing the Epstein drug building at Scollay square from $444,000 to $275,000, and the Conservatory garage at Gaensboro street, Back Bay, from $77,500 to $200,000.

At the conclusion of his sensational attack, the board announced that it would hold a hearing, May 29, on the city's motion for reconsideration of these two decisions, with the three members of the board, Chairman Alexander Holmes, John D. Wright and Alexander Lincoln in attendance.

Says Federal National Lent Dolan $18,901

Boston City Treasurer Is Named as Borrower in Master's Report

City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan was named as having borrowed $18,901.80 from the Federal National Bank prior to its closing, according to a final report filed today in Essex Superior Court by Lawrence A. Ford, who as master concluded the civil action brought by Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy against officers, directors and stockholders of the defunct Salem Trust Company.

While naming specifically certain of the borrowers in a list of loans totalling $1,644,344 at $18,901 each of "negligible financial worth," the master said of Dolan and others:

"In reference to the character of other borrowers named in the absence of evidence, I make no findings."

It was for the purpose of taking up the above named total of loans, according to Master's Report, that the Federal National Company was formed. The report, as I pointed out in a recent column in the Boston Herald, was an attempt to show that officers and directors of the defunct bank were "guilty of negligence" in the absence of evidence. The master said of Dolan and others:

"In reference to the character of other borrowers named in the absence of evidence, I make no findings."

Only $864.46 in Cash

The master's final report declares that the Salem Trust Company sustained a loss of $7,000,000 as a consequence of advances made to the Federal National Company. The loss was due to the deliberate deceits by John A. Deery, former president of the Trust Company, and now serving a jail term. The report said in part:

"The Federal National Company was a corporation organized at $20,000 and engaged in the business of buying, holding, selling and dealing with securities. Its entire stock was owned by Daniel C. Mulloney, Theodore M. Logan and John A. Deery, each holding one-third interest. On May 12, 1931, its assets consisted of $864.46 in cash and $864.46 in outstanding securitites and notes receivable by it at the following prices:

Securities:—$13 for Bancroft Trust Company, $135,191; 153 shares for Boston Insurance Company, $169,177; $7 for Federal National Bank of Boston, $10,141. I find that the aforesaid carrying values were grossly excessive.

Loans From Other Banks

"Some time prior to May 12, 1931, the following banks had loaned to the following persons the following amounts:

Federal National Bank of Boston—Daniel C. Mulloney $200,000.00. J. D. O'Brien, $17,487.50; W. H. Dolan, $18,901.80; Arthur A. Mullane $20,226.58; C. O. Morse $25,000.00, Arthur A. Mullane $25,000.00; George F. Wilson $25,000.00; William H. McCarron $25,000.00; Daniel C. Mulloney $25,000.00; John A. Deery $25,000.00; M. Logan $25,000.00.

Brockton Trust Company—J. D. Greenburgh $40,000.00; Albert E. Morrison $40,000.00; John L. Fallon $45,000.00, Arthur A. Mullane $20,000.00; T. C. McGovern $55,000.00; Michael T. Kelleher $40,000.00.

Bancroft Company—Charles A. McCarron $40,000.00; John L. Fallon $25,000.00; Francis V. Logan $150,000.00; T. E. McGovern $87,000.00.

Salem Trust Company—Francis V. Logan $13,892.00.

Inman Trust Company—John L. Fallon $75,000.00.

Gloucester National Bank—Arthur A. Mullane $22,764.00; C. C. Morse $19,438.40; J. J. Donovan $20,000.00.

Loan to Junior

"The names of J. J. Donovan, Arthur A. Mullane, H. Marre and Charles O. Morse and their relations with Deery, their financial standing and the role they assumed in loans made by the Trust Company have hereinafter been considered. (Mullane will be referred to as having had the controlling stock of the local bank in his name. Wilson served as a janitor in a building in which Deery was an interest. Morse was a close friend. Morse was a relative and humble carpenter. All of them were persons of anything but sufficient means to be borrowing such large sums.)"

"Francis V. Logan is related to Theodore M. Logan and W. H. Dolan was a director of the Federal National Bank of Boston. Fallon, McGovern, Kelleher and Morse were employees of the Federal National Bank of Boston and each was of negligible financial worth."

These loans, totalling $1,644,344, made prior to May 12, 1931, were secured by various stocks which had dwindled in value and by May 12, 1931, this securing collateral was worth $550,000. Under those conditions on May 13, 1931, the Federal National Company, according to its records, voted to buy all said collateral from Daniel C. Mulloney, Theodore M. Logan and John A. Deery and to that end to borrow the purchase price from the aforesaid different banks that had already had said collateral.

"I find that the plan in consequence of which the aforesaid vote was passed by the Federal National Company contemplated the acquisition by the Federal National Company of all said securing collateral, the cancellation by the Federal National Company of the Mulloney, Logan, Deery note of $412,000 and its consequent acquisition of $25,000 securing the Federal National Bank of Boston and thereafter the use of the cash to be borrowed and the use of notes of the Federal National Company secured by the aforesaid acquired collateral, all to the end that some of the officers and directors of the said bank would be paid in full and the remaining borrowers held harmless through notes of the Federal National Company to the amount of their borrowings secured by the aforesaid acquired collateral."

Eleven Borrowers Were "Straws"

"I find that the borrowers Donovan, Mulloney, William H. Marre, Morse, Francis V. Logan, Fallon, McGovern, Kelleher, Morrison and Brady were straws of Daniel C. Mulloney and that Theodore M. Logan and John A. Deery were straws of William H. Marre. Through the Federal National Company, of which they were the sole proprietors, in reference to the character of other borrowers named, in the absence of evidence, I make no findings."

"The contribution of the trust company to this enterprise was fixed at $75,000. In view of the foregoing and other evidence, I find that the proposed loan of $75,000 from the Federal National Company was hazardous and that the respondents Deery and Morrison were thereof cognizant."

TUNNEL OPEN BY FEBRUARY

Speeding Up Work on $19,000,000 Project

Boston's $19,000,000 vehicular tunnel, connecting the downtown city with East Boston, will be opened to motorists in February, as a result of the speeding up of the construction work ordered by Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the transit commission, in charge of the development.

Of the 53 buildings that stood in the way of the downtown tunnel approach, all have been levelled to the ground except one, the tenants of which will vacate by June 1, so that the last structure may be razed to provide a direct plaza from Dock square to the tunnel portal at Cross street, between Hanover and North.

Although the tube has been paved to permit automobiles to pass over its mile-long course under the harbor to a point near Central square, East Boston, it will require eight more months to tile the tunnel and install 40 miles of electrical wiring, signals, lights and power equipment, as well as the proposed ventilation system, according to Colonel Sullivan's estimates.

CAMPAIGN SIGN FOR MANSFIELD

Boyhood Friends Erect It in East Boston

East Boston friends of former State Treasurer Frederick W. Mansfield brought his expected campaign for Mayor into the open late yesterday, when they placed a large campaign sign, 25 feet long and four feet high, on the building at 2 Porter street, Central street, about a short distance of his old homestead.

His boyhood playmates insisted on firing the first gun in his campaign, anticipating Attorney Mansfield's official announcement of his candidacy to succeed Mayor Curley, which is scheduled to be delivered tonight at 8:06 o'clock over the WNAC radio network.

Although the election is nearly six months away, two other candidates for the office have already made official announcements of their determination to run, former Congressman Joseph J. Manz and District Attorney Joseph J. Brown.
Mr. Dreyfus said:

"In 1864 the Boston City Hospital first opened its doors for the reception of persons who by misfortune or poverty might require relief during temporary sickness." Since that time, when the hospital was little better than a boarding house for suffering people, the record is one of which the city may well be proud. For many years the hospital went along without any attempt to increase it with little increase in the number of patients treated.

"Twenty years ago it was a neglected place with only 12,000 admissions in the course of a year. Ten years ago the numbers grew to 20,000 per year; in 1923, 36,000 were admitted to the main hospital and nearly 500,000 were treated in the outpatient department. Today it has more beds patients than the Massachusetts General, the Carney, the Beth Israel, the Peter Bent Brigham, and St. Elizabeth's Hospital combined.

"This tremendous growth was directly the result of Mayor Curley's insight and liberality and understanding of the city's needs. I remember well that he called to his office during his administration and made us prepare plans for the expansion of the hospital—not for one, or two, or five years but for at least 25 years. The growth in the hospital, the fine buildings, are indeed the result of his vision. The city can never be too grateful for his insistence that this hospital be made the outstanding municipal hospital—not only in this country but in the world.

1800 PATIENTS A DAY.

"The outpatient building was built first, and it has become a model of correct outpatient procedure. Just think of it—nearly 1800 patients are treated in this outpatient building every day in the year.

"Next came the Thoroughfare building, where we are now gathered. In this laboratory medical care has been made, and, as a result, the City Hospital is known throughout the world wherever progressive medicine is taught and practiced.

"Following the Thoroughfare the Maternity building was erected. Twenty years ago there were 600 deliveries. In 1933 there were 5000 babies born here in our hospital. Almost 10 new babies every day.

"Surgical and medical buildings followed in rapid succession—to be filled to overflowing only too quickly.

And once again Mayor Curley came to the fore. He saw, with that rare acumen he shows so often, that better facilities were needed for the medical and surgical care of children. He encouraged the trustees to make new plans, and we are here today to dedicate the fruition of those plans, our New Children's Ward.

LAUDS MRS. CURLEY

"About this building we hope there will forever be the spirit of one of the finest women our city has known—a woman who captivated our hearts, who was an inspiration and guide to her husband, a noble mother to her children, the apostrophe of womanliness. It is entirely fitting that this new building, representing the Boston's motherly care for all sick children, should be named in honor of that lovely mother, Mary E. Curley.

"Your Honor, you have been the best friend the City Hospital has known. The trustees are proud of the opportunity to pay you this public tribute of regard and appreciation and they earnestly hope that you may continue your career of public service for many, many years."

The portrait was then unveiled. Rev. Charles E. Eaton gave the benediction and the audience sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Mayor's Wife Opens City Hospital Unit Dedicated with Unveiling of Mrs. Curley's Portrait

Erected in memory of Mary Emelda Curley, wife of the mayor, the ten-story pediatric building of the Boston City Hospital was dedicated today, including the unveiling of an oil portrait of Mrs. Curley by her son Francis. The exercises were conducted in the spacious lecture hall, George A. Sears, M. D., member of the board of trustees, presiding.

After a selection by an orchestra, Rev. Francis A. Hugel, S. J., gave the invocation, followed by an address by Carl Dreyfus, member of the board, who congratulated the city of Boston on the far-sightedness of the mayor in sponsoring the construction program at the hospital, of which the new building is so fine an example. Mayor Curley spoke of his great interest in the City Hospital from boyhood onward, and by his wife up to the time of her death, and expressed his thanks to the board for the honor which they had conferred on Mrs. Curley.

White Fund Trustees Agree to Spend $400,000 for Prado in North End

Trustees of the George Robert White fund yesterday gave formal approval to the expenditure of $400,000 for the creation of a wide promenade, duplicating in miniature the Prado in Havana, and extending from Hanover street opposite St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church, to the Old North Church on Salem street.

Owners of 18 parcels of property which will be razed to permit the widening and extending of the avenue and its continuation beyond Unity street to the rear of the Old North Church will receive $240,000 for land and buildings. Nothing less than $400,000 will be necessary to transform the land into a promenade, with fountains, statuary and other permanent adornments.

Awards equalling 10 per cent. in excess of the assessed valuation will be made to the owners of the largest buildings involved, and in a few cases the total amount of these awards will be $100,000.

The Mary E. Curley Pavilion is unique in construction in many ways. The framework was entirely electric-welded and the building was the first in Boston to be so constructed both in the shop and in the field. The building is entirely of first-class construction, with fireproof concrete and mosaic floors, walls, partitions, roof, and major equipment, with brick, stone trimmings, granite and limestone. James H. Ritchie and Associates were the architects.

Airing balconies with glass floors lead from the wards on each of the nine floors on the northern elevations, and on the roof is the large enclosed solarium for sun and sunlamp treatment. The remainder of the flat roof is surfaced with tile and arranged for additional outdoor sun treatment of patients. The window glazing is of glass which passes the ultraviolet rays of the sun's spectrum. Included in the construction are metal cubicle partitions.
The Mary E. Curley Pavilion, newly constructed at the City Hospital for the treatment of children and erected to the memory of Mary Emelda Curley, was dedicated this morning. A large group of prominent men and women attended the ceremonies in the amphitheatre of the Thorndike Memorial.

Trustee George G. Sears, MD, was the presiding officer. An address was delivered by Carl Dreyfus of the board of trustees of the hospital, who was followed by Mayor James M. Curley. A portrait in oils of the late Mary Emelda Curley, wife of the Mayor, was presented to the pavilion by her son, Francis Curley. The benediction was by Rev Charles E. Eaton. The program opened with selections by an orchestra and closed with "The Star Spangled Banner."

At the conclusion of the dedicatory ceremonies, the audience inspected the building, said to be one of the finest in the world for the treatment of children.

No Riveting Racket

The building is unusual in construction in many ways, one of which is the manner of building the structural steel framing. This framing was entirely electric welded, and thus the noise incidental to the use of pneumatic hammers driving rivets so disturbing to patients in the other buildings, was eliminated. It was the first building in Boston to be so constructed and probably the first in the country of its size.

The building is entirely of first-class construction throughout, with fireproof concrete and masonry floors, walls, partitions and roof. It is built of selected waterstruck face brick, with stone trimmings, granite and limestone. James H. Hitchcock and associates were the architects and engineers.

Every arrangement has been made for the comfort, care and convenience of the small patients for whom the pavilion is constructed. Airing balconies with glass floors lead off the rooms on each of the nine floors on the southern elevations, and on the roof is the large enclosed solarium for sun therapy, with the rest of the flat roof surfaced with tile and arranged for additional outdoor and treatment of patients.

The window glazing is of the type of glass which permits entrance of the heat but admits violet rays of the sun's spectrum. There is special air-conditioning manufactured weather apparatus for maintaining exact control of temperature and humidity on the top floors for the nurseries for the premature infants. Noise on these floors is reduced to the minimum by the installation of acoustical material in the walls and ceilings.

Milk Laboratory

On each floor above the basement are offices and rooms also. On the seventh and eighth floors are the premature infants' isolation rooms.

The basement contains the milk laboratory, examination rooms, patients' clothes storage, soiled clothes, dumbwaiter machine room. The milk laboratory is especially equipped in every way for research work and scientific preparation of milk diets.

The interior trim is metal and windows and frames are of steel. Included in the construction are metal fireproof doors and frames, metal bas-reliefs, stained glass, insulation, and premature infants' nurseries on seventh and eighth floors; electric passenger and service elevators serving all floors.

Mayor Curley's Remarks

Trustee Carly Dreyfus paid tribute to the memory of Mrs Curley. He said the Mayor had been the best friend the City Hospital ever had.

Mayor Curley expressed on behalf of his family and himself sincere appreciation of the great honor conferred on Mrs Curley in the naming of the new building. He said the trustees were kind in their praise of all who had worked for the development of the hospital during the past 20 years, but, he said, it would not have been possible without the wisdom and advice of the medical and surgical staffs.

The Mayor declared that the City Hospital is now the best in the country. Citing an example of the development of the institution, he said that in 1922 82 children were born at the City Hospital. Last year, the Mayor said, 2500 children were born in the modern maternity building on the hospital grounds.

Mayor Curley said that though many disagreed with him, his theory is that government is constituted for the generous, wise and economical expenditure of money, and that the most important function of government in this connection is the conservation of public health.

Son Presents Portrait

The Mayor paid a tribute to Dr John J. Dowling, superintendent of the City Hospital, and said that the latter had served his health in his eager desire to complete the hospital program.

The Mayor also paid tribute to Dr Martin J. English, of the hospital trustees, who was unable to be present.

In closing, Mayor Curley congratulated the contractor, John Bowen, and said he believed that the hospital would continue to serve the people of Boston as the doctors, nurses and attendants have served it in the past.

Francis Curley, 9, the Mayor's son then presented an oil painting of him to the hospital. He said, "It is the name of these devoted mothers whose little ones come here to be restored to health that I present this portrait of my own beloved mother."

The boy received tremendous acclaim.

Mayor Delivers an Address at the Dedication Ceremonies

Mayor Curley said the City Hospital is the finest municipal institution of its kind in the world. Referring to the maternity ward, he said that in 1922 there were 82 children born in the hospital and the mortality rate was "terrific." Last year 3500 children were delivered in the modern maternity building, he said.

Mansfield in Fighting Mood for Mayoralty

Hastens His Candidacy in View of Many Line-Ups for Opponents

By Forrest P. Hull

Another candidate for the Boston mayoralty—ann exponent of the "new deal" in municipal affairs—comes into the field with fighting spirit. He is Frederick W. Mansfield, former state treasurer, prominent lawyer and unsuccessful candidate for mayor four years ago. His candidacy is no surprise. If it had been expected from the day of his defeat, except by certain groups of politicians who had hoped that he might receive a Superior Court judgment in the interim to decide whether he had the mantle of Good Government Association support over to some other man.

Mansfield indicated with caimness in his radio address of last evening the kind of campaign he will conduct. It will be a campaign against "waste and inefficiency"—a campaign for a new deal, a sound one for an honest administration at City Hall. Appreciating the great disturbance created in the ranks of the city employees by the reductions in pay, as well as the deep concern among the taxpayers for a lower rate, the candidate made a general appeal for support.

Lines Clearly Drawn

With this declaration, a decided step forward has been taken in the mayoral situation. The lines, perhaps, are as clearly indicated as they ever will be. It will be a three-cornered race, and the ambition is also a very fertile field among Democratic voters, especially in the ranks of the new registrants who will vote for mayor for the first time.

"Four years ago Mr. Mansfield's candidacy for mayor was not seriously considered; his fighting abilities. Though Daniel H. Cockley entered the field, the contest was between Mansfield and Curley, in which Curley won by a plurality of 19,517 votes. Mr. Mansfield today declares his belief that he would have been elected if the campaign had even a few more days to go. He blames his defeat on a delayed announcement of his candidacy.

Different Campaign

But from every angle the campaign of this year will be much different from that of four years ago. Mansfield will not be fighting Curley, but a field of candidates in which every conceivable issue of local politics will be involved. Naturally, the action of the administration will be held up as examples of politics as usually demonstrated at City Hall. Always in the foreground will be what the civic organizations and the younger politicians regard as vital, the appeal to the boyhood—"I must work for a living, and must support my family by honest work."

"Do not pay attention to propaganda against me. Do not be hoodwinked or misled by a large number of candidates for the mayoralty. This is an old political trick—to divide and conquer. The electorate of Boston had a sample of this political chicanery eight years ago and know that they will not again be fooled by this old trick.

"Cast your votes for the man who will give you and the city the best service. I will give you the best that is in me."

"I wish to thank all the men and women who have worked so tirelessly—themselves and faithfully for me in the past and who are now working for me. In the meantime, however, your letters—if you care to send them—to Codman, signed by Secretary George Polumbo of the organization, said:"

"Having been associated with you and Mrs. William Lowell Putnam during the city of Bos-mayor of Boston, knew that you are well-versed in city affairs, because of your activities in business and civic interest, and having shown a marked aptitude in dealing with important fiscal matters, we hereby ask you to seriously consider the en-the candidacy of Mayor of Boston."

OUT FOR MAYOR

Lawyer Charges City Pay Cuts Forced by Reckless Waste

SCORES METHODS OF CURLEY AND NICHOLS

Frederick W. Mansfield, prominent Boston lawyer, last night formally announced his candidacy for mayor of Boston at the December election in an address charging "reckless and wasteful" methods against the city administrations of the past eight years under Mayor Curley and Malcolm E. Nichols.

Mr. Mansfield said that if the "financial affairs of the city of Boston had been wisely administered during the last eight years," it "would not be necessary to take from the pockets of city employees millions in wage reductions at this time.

Declaring that there will be "no bagman," if elected, Mr. Mansfield said he would work to lessen the burdens on real estate and to reduce the city tax rate.

Mansfield, a former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, was a candidate for mayor in 1929 when he received the Good Government Association endorsement but was defeated by Mayor Curley by 19,000 votes. In his address last night, Mr. Mansfield said he entered that contest too late. He said in part:

"I shall try my best so to conduct affairs that real estate may be relieved of its burdens, that the employees of the city may be treated with justice and reasonable wage reductions at this time; and to reduce the city tax rate."

When I became a candidate in 1929 I had two thoughts. The first was that the four years that had just passed were years of waste and inefficiency. (Referring to the Nichols administration.)

The second was that unless some one came into the contest the next four years I have no money nor to exhibit the same waste and inefficiency.

Those two thoughts were true and there now comes a third thought that the same elements which for eight years have made the administration of the city so marked for waste and inefficiency will continue for another four years unless the citizens unite upon some one who can successfully inaugurate a new deal—a square deal—and an honest administration of their affairs at City Hall.

Urged, therefore, by these considerations, I announce myself as a candidate for mayor, and I ask for the support of all those of the more than 96,000 men and women who voted for me four years ago, and I also ask for the support of all others, particularly that still more important body of voters who have become voters since the last election, for they are the youth of the city, and to them we must look to carry out the proper and honest administration of it.

If I am elected I shall do my best so that the prestige of this city may be restored and that our city shall be the best governed of the cities of this nation. There will be no bagman when I am mayor of Boston. I shall do my best to make up for the reckless and wasteful administration of the last eight years.

If the financial affairs of the city of Boston had been wisely administered during the last eight years it would not be necessary—mark you, I say "necessary"—to take from the pockets of school-teachers, firemen, policemen, mechanics, laborers and all other city and county employees millions of dollars in reduction of their wages nor would there be occasion for the present intolerable tax rate.

The tax rate must be reduced and if it can be reduced if the affairs of the city are wisely and humanly administered.

My announcement does not mean that this is the beginning of an active candidacy for my part at this date. I have no money nor the time to undertake a campaign of six months' duration. For some time past and still I am engaged all day long and far into the night trying to secure a living wage for the city employees, women and children in this commonwealth. I am obliged to do what I have done since boyhood—I must work for a living wage and support my family by honest work. I am not a millionaire.

Do not pay attention to propaganda against me. Do not be hoodwinked or misled by a large number of candidates for the mayoralty. This is an old political trick—to divide and conquer. The electorate of Boston had a sample of this political chicanery eight years ago and I know that they will not again be fooled by this old trick.

Cast your vote for the man who will give you and the city the best service. I will give you the best that is in me.

BOOMS CODMAN

Committee Urges Him to Run for Mayor

Russell S. Codman, Jr., chairman of the legislation and taxation committee of the Boston real estate exchange was yesterday urged by a committee of leaders of Boston racial groups to consider becoming a candidate for mayor this fall. He declined to comment on the invitation.

In a letter to Codman signed by George Polumbo, secretary, the racial group representatives said in part:

"Having been connected with you and Mrs. William and Paul Putnam during the city of Boston's tercentenary, and knowing that you are well versed in city and state government, because of your activities in business and civic interest, we hereby ask you to seriously consider the indoctrination of our organizations for the candidacy of mayor of Boston.

The popular cry today is for a new deal, but a review of mayoral aspirants reveals the same old faces of past administrations. Why not select a younger man possessing the necessary qualifications to administer the affairs of our city?"

Mass. Exchange Outing June 14

The twenty-fifth annual outing of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange will be held June 14 at the Sandy Burr Country Club, Wayland. Governor Ely has been invited to discuss the sales tax and its benefits to real estate. Lieutenant Governor Bacon, Mayor Curley and Mayor Weeks of Newton have been invited to address the gathering. The following-named committees chairman have been appointed: General, John T. Burns; speakers, John J. Martin; William T. A. Fitzgerald and (vice chairman) Frank T. Evans; sports, David B. Church and (vice) Robert T. Fowler; music, Rodney W. Long; quotas, Edward L. Hopkins; refreshment, Warren F. Freeman and (vice) George W. Judkins; entertainment, Howard H. Davenport and (vice) Daniel T. Blattley.

This being the anniversary of the exchange, it is expected that a large gathering of real estate men from all over Massachusetts will attend.

Eaton, Carl Dreyfus, a trustee, Francis X. Curley, and Dr. George G. Sears, who presided during the ceremonies.

Mayor Curley, who attended the exercises with his four children, declared that the completion of this $560,000 all electrically welded structure, "gave to Boston the finest municipal hospitalization plant in the world."

During the dedication ceremonies, held in the Throtdike building just across the yard from the new pavilion, Francis X. Curley, youngest son of the Mayor, presented a picture of Mrs. Curley to the hospital. He stood up before the several hundred persons present and in clear, childish voice said: "In the name of the devoted mothers whose little ones may find hope and happiness in this beautiful building, may I present this portrait of my beloved mother."

George G. Sears, M.D., the presiding officer, accepted the portrait on behalf of the trustees of the hospital, and said it would always hang in the structure bearing Mrs. Curley's name.

The mayor in his address expressed "sincere appreciation at the great honor conferred upon my wife in the dedication of this building to her memory."

He paid tribute to Dr. John J. Dowling, head of the hospital, the trustees, Joseph P. Manning, president, and Martin J. English, M.D., who were not able to attend, and all doctors, nurses and persons in any way connected with the completion of the new pavilion.

Obviously deeply moved by the exercises, Curley concluded his talk by expressing the hope that the "hospital will continue to serve the people of Boston as it has in the past."

MANY ASPIRE TO BE MAYOR

Mansfield Early Announcement Move to Capture G. G. A. Indorsement

By JAMES GOGGIN

The mayoralty election in November promises to be a free-for-all battle among a flock of aspirants.

The early formal announcement of Frederick W. Mansfield, who lost to Mayor Curley by 19,000 votes in 1929, of his determination to run again, is considered to have been impelled by developments of the utmost consequence to the Mansfield campaign plans.

In addition to informing 96,000 supporters of Mansfield in 1929 that he will welcome their votes in November, the announcement was timed to force the application of brakes to a scheme of the Good Government Association which disregarded the Mansfield as the recipient of the Goo Goo endorsement.

A move to bring forth Judge Michael H. O'Connell of Dorchester, a candidate wearing the Goo Goo label has tentatively been considered by the directors of the association and it is the Mansfield strategy not only to disconcert this plan but to force the association to recognize its obligation to again endorse him. Mansfield has maintained that the endorsement was specifically guaranteed him.

With the Mansfield group somewhat disconcerted, Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley, regarded by observers as the outstanding candidate of the moment because of his strength in South Boston and Dorchester, is beset by unrelated problems.

O'Connell, Foley has relied heavily on the support of Martin M. Lomasney who has been obvious for months. It is now extremely doubtful if Lomasney will be a factor in the mayoral campaign any future political contest. His health is at times of disquiet and if his intimate friends can exercise control of him, he made last political fight for his patron William M. Prendible, clerk of the superior criminal court. In addition conditions in the Hendricks Club have markedly changed. Instead of unanimity there is open discord and predicitions are heard that there will be a real political row in the West and North ends in November.

The loss of Lomasney's active support of Mayor Curley, who is an influential leader in the city, will mean that the mayor will have to work hard to regain the support of the South Boston and Dorchester areas, where Foley has a strong following.

Curley Sees Chance for R. F. C. Loans

Mayor Curley will preside at the meeting in Washington Wednesday of mayors of all cities in the United States of 100,000 population. The gathering to which Senators Carter Glass of Virginia and Robert Wagner of New York have been invited will endeavor to speed the enactment by Congress of legislation which will permit the Federal Reserve and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to municipalities on tax anticipation and tax delinquency notes.

Mayor Curley is convinced that such financial aid must be extended by the Federal government to cities or they will be forced to declare themselves in bankruptcy.

The mayors have asked President Roosevelt to delegate a representative to attend the conference.

Mary Curley Hospital Pavilion Is Dedicated

Mary E. Curley Pavilion, the new children's ward of Boston City Hospital, towering 10 stores as a memorial to Mayor Curley's late wife and her interest in the alleviation of suffering among little ones, was dedicated yesterday.

Tributes to the mayor and Mrs. Curley by trustees of the hospital featured dedication exercises held in the lecture hall of Thorndike Memorial where several hundred men and women were present.

Visibly affected, the mayor voiced appreciation for the work of the trustees and the hospital staff, particularly mentioning Dr. John J. Dowling who, he said, had sacrificed his own health in his arduous duties as superintendent.

It is impossible to obtain from Lev- erett Saltonstall, Speaker of the State House, any information as to how he intends to vote in the election. He says he has been approached by several men who wish to be nominated for the Lieutenant Governor's seat in the State ticket. The custom in the Republican party is for the Lieutenant Governor to the Governor and, with an occasional exception, to move the Speaker up to the Lieutenant Governor's place, but the politicians see a possibility of the Speaker taking up the Lieutenant Governor's post, if the latter is willing to run 1

The custom in the Republican party in the days when it controlled the State was to promote the Lieutenant Governor to the Governorship and, with the exception of following that rule this year, Lieut. Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon and Speaker Saltonstall, to be wholly frank, represent the same class in the community, and many Republicans think it would be politically unwise to nominate those two men for the highest positions in the State Government.

Mr. Saltonstall, therefore, is unfortunately situated. He is one of the most popular speakers the Massachusetts House has ever had as well as Republicans like him. He is modest, unassuming, able and sound. His friends are confident he can win the nomination for Lieutenant Governor if he decides to try for it. Now that Mr. Haigis is for certain a candidate for the Republican nomination he will surely go for it, however, Mr. Saltonstall will be, and probably has been, urged to be a candidate for the Republican nomination to run against David T. Walsh when the latter comes up for reelection next year. That assignment is not particularly attractive to Mr. Saltonstall, and is, at least, certain that no Republican can defeat Mr. Walsh unless a great political upheaval occurs in the next few months, a possibility which some people make, by the way, against a decision already reached by an officeholder. There is no doubt that Mr. Haigis would be a candidate for the Lieutenant Governor's office and his name would be the first to come to the people's minds. They may be in part overcome.

The taxation situation in Massachusetts is a matter of increasing importance. Every one who has lived in the State for any time and who understands the State finances knows that there is a need of raising money for the State and of raising it in the most equitable and least burdensome way possible.

The plan of laying a tax on the male residents of the State is sometimes mentioned in Congress but it is not very possible. In the present political situation in the State it is not likely that such a plan would be carried out.

The next discussion was on the matter of the highway fund. It was pointed out that the highway fund is a very important one and that it is necessary to provide money for the general fund. The most common way of raising money for the State is to use it for the everyday needs of the State and of the municipalities within it. BUILDING DEDICATED AT CITY HOSPITAL

Mayor Curley and Children Attend Exercises

The new 10-story pediatric building of the Boston City Hospital, erected in memory of Mary Emelda Curley, wife of Mayor Curley, was dedicated yesterday in the spacious lecture hall, where Francis Curley unveiled a portrait of his mother. Dr. George G. Sears of the board of trustees, presided.

The Rev. Francis A. Hugel, S. J., gave the invocation, after which Carl Dreyfus, a member of the board, delivered an address. Mayor Curley spoke briefly of his long interest in the City Hospital and expressed his thanks to the board for the honor they had conferred on the memory of his wife. The portrait was then unveiled, the Rev. Charles E. Eaton delivered the benediction, and the dedication exercises closed with "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Mary E. Curley pavilion has an electric welded frame, with fireproof concrete and masonry floors, walls, partitions and roof, and the exterior is of waterstruck brick and granite and limestone trimmings. James H. Ritchie and Associates were the architects and engineers.
Ely's Refusal to Seek Third Term as Governor

By W. E. MULLINS

Apparently the Democrats of Massachusetts have become reconciled to the belief that Gov. Ely was sincere when he said he would not seek a third term on Beacon Hill. Evidence of this conviction comes occasionally to the forefront as the names of new prospective candidates are trotted out into the public eye in search of reactions.

The first serious suggestion of this character was advanced by Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the party's state committee. He publicly gave Prof. Frank L. Simpson of Boston University a pat on the back with a lavish description of the law teacher's qualifications for the Governorship and his wide popularity.

Mr. Simpson qualified as a Boston favorite back in 1928 when he campaigned actively in behalf of Alfred E. Smith. In the last campaign he presided at the Smith rally at Boston Garden and also was toastmaster at the testimonial dinner given in December to Robert Jackson, who, by the way, dropped completely out of sight.

Now an authoritative spokesman for Gov. Ely declares that Stanley Mier, president of Amherst College, is the Governor's candidate, while an unidentified representative of Senator W. E. King's committee has sent out word that Arthur L. Lyman of Waltham is the running mate already selected for the 1934 ticket by Mr. Walsh.

All this speculation, of course, discounts the fact that approximately 700 delegate candidates will assemble next April from all sections of the commonwealth to make a free and uninfluenced recommendation of their own and that subsequent recommendation will be subject to approval by the voters themselves at the primary election.

OTHER THINGS TO CONSIDER

This method of selecting a running mate for Senator Walsh likewise ignores the popularity of Auditor Francis Hurley and Treasurer Charles Hurley. The influence of Mayor Curley and the natural desires of such demonstrated vote getters as Congressman William J. Grantfather, of course, they could take the bill into special election ballot and now, as the question is on the June 13 referendum, it would be only a straw vote when taken in 1934, nothing to vote yes or no on the issue. Otherwise, they could take the bill into the Senate with a genuine initiative referendum attached, pass it or kill it with the question going on the 1934 ballot under the initiative constitutional amendment.

They passed up the opportunity to press the question on the June 13 ballot, the referendum would be only a straw vote when taken in 1934, nothing to vote yes or no on the issue. The exceptional record of the credit unions “during the long period of corruption among the members of the banking fraternity” was praised last night by Mayor James M. Curley, speaking at the annual banquet of the Credit Union League in Hotel Westminster.

The Mayor declared that, although there were 10,000 bank failures or closings in the period between 1920 and 1930, “and almost as many more in the succeeding two years,” there was not “one single failure among the credit unions which operate in 36 of the 48 States.”

Credit unions, he asserted, have made it possible for many persons to own their own homes and “the real security of a Nation is more dependent upon the number of home owners in its population than upon any other factor.”

“In a Nation of home owners,” said the Mayor, “we need never fear the encroachments of Bolshevism or Communism.”

James Roosevelt Talks

James Roosevelt, son of the President, preceded the Mayor as speaker. He declared that in the last few days we have seen a revolution in this country which has resulted in a new era—an era of cooperation between the President and the people, with the Government acting as a kind of senior partner in a partnership between business and Government.

Mr Roosevelt indicated he was referring to the Industrial Control bill, designed to have “industry recognize its responsibilities in relation to the control of production, wages, hours of labor and working conditions.”

“Industry,” he said, “will be given a chance to make pacts which measure up fairly to a definite American standard. These pacts as approved by the President will be in force for the whole of the industry and any member of the industry who violates them will feel the heavy hand of the ‘senior partner’ in the form of fines or imprisonment.”

“There is only one way,” said Mr Roosevelt, “to make this new era succeed and that is for every individual and every group to work out definite contributions to the progress of the Nation as a whole.

“If we all cooperate and work together, we are going to see, not the unstable, speculative prosperity of a few years ago, but a new and better, all-round prosperity.”

The speeches of Mr Roosevelt, the Mayor and Ex-Lieut Gov Edward P. Barry were broadcast over Station WHDH.

Charles W. Harvey Speaks

An honor guest at the banquet was Charles W. Harvey, credit manager of the Gilchrist Company and retiring president of the Credit Union League. Mr Harvey declared that credit unions here have built a firm foundation due to the efforts of men like Felix Vorweberg, Edward A. Filene and Pierre Jay, who started the movement in 1907.

“Credit unions,” said Mr Harvey, “do not need men of genius. They will continue to need men of character, willing to give their time and their energy for the welfare of the people.

More than 425 delegates representing 300 credit unions in this State attended the convention sessions at the Westminster during the afternoon, and were present at the banquet in the evening.

Louis Barrasso of the Mayor’s office was toastmaster. Pres Joseph Campagna was in general charge of arrangements and presided at the business sessions in the afternoon. The day’s program was concluded with a lengthy bill of entertainment.

The committee included Louis Barrasso, Shawmut Credit Union; Joseph Campagna, Industrial Credit Union; Mrs Helen J. Dunlap, Filene Cooperative Association Credit Union; Miss Frances P. Habern, secretary-treasurer, Credit Union League; James V. Haley, Metrogia Credit Union, and Ralph W. Maggs, Fitchburg Postal Employees Credit Union.
The Clan McGregor soccer eleven captured the Mayor James M. Curley cup yesterday by defeating the fast St. Pius eleven, 3 to 1, in the final game of the two-game series at Lincoln Park after two extra fifteen-minute periods.

The game was bitterly contested and came near ending in a riot late in the second regulation period, due to an unpopular decision given by Referee Bob Mills.

The arbiter gave a free kick to the McGregors in the vicinity of their goal line. The St. Pius players mauled the referee. One of them struck him a blow which brought the fans rushing onto the pitch. The police cleared the field.

The St. Pius eleven went into yesterday's game with a one-goal lead, due to its 2 to 1 victory in the opening game, and that was how the score stood at the end of the first period, as neither team scored, although the McGregors had most of the play.

Late in the second period Art Braga, St. Pius goalie, allowed a shot from Sammy Hay to roll up his shoulder and get away from him. Jimmy Lyons of the McGregors headed the ball into the net to put the teams on level terms.

In the first extra period, Tommy Hay put the McGregors ahead after seven minutes' play with a fast shot which took Braga by surprise.

Freddy Greer broke away on the left and sent the sphere flying into the rigging to increase the lead.

St. Pius came back strong, and after Roche had missed the penalty, Joe Mahoney scored with a beautiful high drive which sent the ball over the crossbar.

MARY E. CURLEY PAVILION DEDICATED AT CITY HOSPITAL

Nine-Year-Old Son of Mayor Presents Oil Painting Of Deceased Mother to Department

The Mary E. Curley Pavilion, named in memory of Mary Emelda Curley, wife of James M. Curley, newly erected at the Boston City Hospital, for the treatment of children, was dedicated yesterday morning in the presence of a large number of prominent men and women. The exercises were held in the amphitheatre of Thordike Memorial.

Dr. George M. Sears, trustee, presided. Addresses were given by Carl Dreyfus of the board of trustees of the hospital; by Mayor Curley and the latter's 8-year-old Francis, who elicited tremendous applause when he presented an oil painting of his mother to the department in the following words: "In the name of the devoted mothers whose little ones will come here to be restored to health, may I present this portrait of my own beloved mother."

Mayor Curley expressed, on behalf of his family and himself, sincere appreciation of the great honor to the memory of Mrs. Curley in naming the new building. He declared the City Hospital is now the best in the country and paid high tribute to the trustees, the executives, and the several officials under whose direction its work is carried on.

The program opened with selections by an orchestra and closed with "The Star Spangled Banner."

After the ceremonies, the audience inspected the building which is said to be one of the finest in the world for the treatment of children.

The building is entirely of first-class construction throughout, with fireproof concrete and masonry floors, walls, partitions and roof. It is built of selected waterstruck face brick, with stone trimmings, granite and limestone. James H. Ritchie and associates were the architects and engineers.

Every arrangement has been made for the proper treatment, care and comfort of the small patients for whom the pavilion is constructed. Air-conditioning manufactured weather apparatus for maintaining exact control of temperature and humidity on the top floors for the nurseries for premature infants. Noise on these floors is reduced to the minimum. The Mary E. Calls on All Candidates to Get Together—Does Not Declare Or Eliminate Himself

Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, frequently mentioned as a possible candidate for Mayor of Boston to succeed Mayor Curley, who appointed him to his present post, last night in a public statement called upon all candidates for the office to get together in the interests of the people of Boston and for the protection of the institutions of Boston. Although he neither definitely entered the growing field of candidates or eliminated himself, Commissioner McLaughlin stated that his advice at the present time “is for all elements and factions to cooperate and get together.”

Discussing his own political experience and qualifications, McLaughlin said: “I am ready to do all in my power to see that the proper man, whoever he may be, is elected to that high and honorable office.”

No Mention of Curley

He did not mention Mayor Curley in the statement, but did inject the name of United States Senator David I. Walsh, calling him “Democracy’s greatest Governor,” in explaining that he served under him as leader of the House of Representatives.

Mr McLaughlin, in his explanation of the reasons acting his statement last night, ridiculed the candidacies of certain of the men already announced, declaring many of the stories concerning candidacies are amusing “because some of them would be really jocular, if it were not for the seriouness of the outcome of the contest for that high and honorable office.”

His second reason is based on the fact that he has been approached “by many splendid people, individuals and groups alike, who seem desirous of knowing as to the likelihood of my coming a candidate and if not to whom it is most likely I will cast such little influence as may be mine in that contest.”

No Man Should Declare

“I feel that these people are entitled to know my position as far as I am able to determine that position at the present time,” he said. “To my way of thinking no man should say particularly if that man is interested first in rendering a service to our city, that he is regardless of all considerations a personal and definite candidate for Mayor. It is too bad, I am afraid that one who has full knowledge of the responsibilities of the office and hopes through his candidacy to render public service to our city rather than to gratify a personal ambition however laudable that may be.

It is commonly said on the air at the present time among the candidates now announced neither all of them are of sufficient caliber to all that may not be merit consideration. This may not be my opinion but, however, it does seem that now would be a splendid time to call a halt on further candidates self announced and for whom there is no great public acclaimation, and give earnest thought to the serious side of this question.

Three Questions to Consider

The three principal matters for all to consider to my mind are these: First, the welfare of all classes of our population; Second, the interest of our businesses and industrial institutions, and third, the relief of our city employees and all others in our communities, who, because of unfortunate circumstances, have been deprived of the full benefit of their earning power by cuts in wages. To this might be added a fourth matter that concerns the future welfare of our city and through our city our State and Nation, namely, the protection of the educational curriculum of our Boston schools to a sufficient degree that the people are assured a fair chance of education somewhat comparable to that which the children of the working masses of our country are afforded a fair chance of an education somewhat comparable to that which the children of wealthy and of those well-to-do.

These are indeed serious matters, and the gratifying of a selfish ambition that would endanger the successful solving of these problems must be prevented. To this end I hope to lend myself, as leader of the party, my best efforts to work with the people of this State and Nation, and for all Massachusetts people to elect a man who will do the best he can for the people of this State and Nation.

Takes His Own Counsel

“These people should insist that the successful candidate be possessed of the proper experience, vision, imagination, knowledge of municipal Government and Finance, and above all else the necessary amount of individual power, knowledge of municipal Government and Finance, and above all else the necessary amount of individual power and resources to save our Country from the danger of wholesale insurance at the expense of the Country and at the expense of the Country. CURLEY TO LEAVE TONIGHT FOR MAYORS’ CONFERENCE

Mayor James M. Curley will leave Boston tonight for Washington, as president of the United States Conference of Mayors, he will continue his efforts to obtain legislation favoring cities and towns in bad financial condition.

Tomorrow will be devoted to conferences and a Wednesday the conference of Mayors will meet at the Mayflower Hotel. The Mayor today said he was hopeful of favorable legislation whereby municipalities can borrow from the R. F. C. or the Federal Reserve Bank, a saving of millions in interest money to cities of the country would result from favorable action.

Mayor Curley this afternoon sent to the City Council his annual budget for 1933. It amounts to $23,000,000, which is exclusive of $7,850,000 for soldiers' relief and welfare. It is also exclusive of that to be expended for schools, county departments and city police, which do not come under the Mayor.

The Mayor's budget represents a decrease of $1,545,537 from 1932. The largest item in the budget is that for payroll, representing a total of $18,292,599, which is a decrease of $2,832,051 from 1932.

Mayor Curley in his communication to the City Council accompanying his budget expressed the belief that he did not think that the budget submitted could be cut further without injuring the character of the service being given by the city departments represented by the various items.

Hearings on the various items in the budget will begin next Thursday.

"PREVAILING WAGE" OUT OF CITY CONTRACTS

The stock phrase, "prevailing wage," which for many years has been part of every contract awarded by the City of Boston to concerns or individuals doing city work, was wiped out today by Mayor James M. Curley insofar as wages of laborers are concerned.

Hereafter contractors must pay on city work 50 cents an hour to laborers. Failure to do so will cause the city to cancel the contract and blacklist the contractor.

Up to depression times the "prevailing wage" was 65 cents an hour or $5 an eight-hour day. There has developed a steady conflict of authority as to whether the term meant and, according to the Mayor, it became so bad that contractors were paying, according to complaints, anywhere from 20 to 35 cents an hour, or if the "prevailing wage" was paid, it was said that workers were compelled to resell the products in the capital until Wednesday night.

By executive order, Mayor Curley today fixed the rate at 50 cents an hour. "Though it is less than the old "prevailing wage," it at least puts teeth into city contracts insofar as laborers are concerned.

$4,545,537 CUT BY CURLEY IN BUDGET

Payroll, Largest Item, Decreased by $2,832,951 by Mayor

Mayor Curley submitted to the City Council this afternoon the administration's budget for 1933, calling for a total outlay of $26,550,000. This figure is exclusive of public welfare and represents a decrease of $4,545,537 from last year's figure. The outstanding item is for personal service, figured at $18,292,599, or a decrease of $2,832,051 from last year's figure.

In a message accompanying the budget, the mayor raised question as to whether the estimates could be reduced and cautioned the council that in making any possible reductions it must be careful not to injure the character of service. The council will begin public hearings on the budget items on Thursday.

McLaughlin Gives Mayoralty Views

Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for mayor of Boston, declared last night that his recent position is that the people should insist that the successful candidate be possessed of the proper experience, vision, imaginative power and knowledge of municipal government. He urged all candidates to go to work for the ambition to become a candidate, let me say at this time that I am going to take to myself the counsel that it is not important at all that any candidate be elected, but that it is all important that after a conference among ourselves we get together in the interests of the people of Boston to the end that prosperity and contentment prevail in our glorious city.

"My advice, which may not be taken without the friction of conflicts to cooperate and get together, I say to all who are candidates or who secretly harbor the ambition to become a candidate, even the hope of becoming a candidate, that, though endangering our city's welfare, to get together in the interests of the people of Boston to protect the institutions of Boston."

CURLEY HEADS FOR CAPITAL

Going to Washington for Mayors' Conference, Lighterage Issue

Mayor Curley will leave for Washington tonight, to preside at the postponed conference of municipal leaders representing cities with more than 100,000 population. Though the conference is his primary purpose for visiting the capital, rumors persist that Boston's mayor is slated for an important federal post.

The purpose of the mayor's conference is to impress upon Congress the plan which would allow hard-pressed cities to borrow money from the federal reserve board and the Reconstruction Corporation on taxes, both anticipated and delinquent.

Also current in the affairs of official Washington is the problem of lighterage, concerning which a hearing opened today before the interstate commerce commission. This battle, of direct interest to Boston, is being waged by the ports of Boston and New Jersey against the port of New York. Boston hopes to succeed in forcing New York to abandon free lighterage, which would mean much additional revenue for this city.

Mayor Curley on several occasions has spoken vigorously for a greater port of Boston, and he may attend the hearing.

Bunker Hill Day Bill Is Opposed

Representative Robert L. Lee of Charlestown appeared today before the House Ways and Means Committee and urged legislation providing for a referendum to the voters of Suffolk County on the question of making June 17 a legal holiday.

Lee spoke of the historical importance of the Battle of Bunker Hill and said he felt that the people of the county should be given an opportunity of deciding whether the day should be a legal holiday. He placed twenty-four patriotic and civic organizations on record as favoring the legislation.

Daniel Bloomfield, representing the Boston Retail Trade Bureau, opposed the bill and reminded the committee that Massachusetts has more holidays than any other State in the Union and that Boston leads in the same respect among cities of like size. He felt that the addition of another holiday to the list observed in Suffolk County would constitute an injustice to the merchants of the county. "These men feel," he said, "that they are rendering a greater patriotic service by keeping the wheels of business going than by asseenting to any plan which would reduce business operations.

CURLEY FIXES $4 AS MINIMUM PAY

Insists Contractor Meet That Figure on City Jobs

Mayor Curley today issued an executive order declaring four dollars a day or 50 cents an hour to be the minimum wage to be paid to all laborers engaged by contractors doing city work. The former scale was five dollars per day.

The mayor said that he was prompted to issue the order because the many recent revisions of wage scales practically voided the clause in the common agreement usually signed by the city and the contractor which reads: "To be paid at the prevailing rate." He declared that few contractors recognized the clause, but promised that all would abide by the new four dollars or lose all city contracts.

"Any contractor paying less will automatically cancel his contract and shall be blacklisted," he said.
MCLAUGHLIN DISCUSSES MAYORALTY

Avoids Saying He Will Be a Candidate Himself

Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin last night issued a statement concerning his possible candidacy for Mayor of Boston, neither affirming nor disclaiming his candidacy, but pointing out that the people should insist upon majority rule in the contest, and should make certain that the successful candidate be possessed of the proper experience, vision, imaginative power, knowledge of municipal government and finance and "intestinal fortitude."

REASONS FOR STATEMENT

The statement follows:

"I am actuated in making this statement principally for two reasons: First, because of the many more or less amusing political stories relative to the possibility of certain candidacies for the mayoralty of Boston. I say amusing because some of them would be really jocular, if it were not for the seriousness of the outcome of the contest for that high and honorable office.

Secondly, because I have been approached by many splendid people, individuals and groups alike, who seem desirous of knowing as to the likelihood of my becoming a candidate, and if not to whom it is most likely I will cast such little influence as may be mine in that contest.

Service Rather Than Ambition

"I feel that these people are entitled to know my position as far as I am able to determine that position at the present time. To my way of thinking no man should say, particularly if he is interested first in rendering service to our city, that he is regardless of all considerations personal and definite candidate for Mayor.

"It is to be presumed that one who aspires for office does so with a full knowledge of the responsibilities of the office and hopes through his candidacy to render a public service to our city, rather than to gratify a personal ambition, however laudable that may be.

Three Main Matters

"It is commonly said on the street at the present time among the candidates now announced that neither of all of them are of sufficient caliber to merit consideration. This may not be my opinion, but, however, it does seem that the contest should be a splendid time to call a halt on further candidacies self-announced, and for whom there is no great public acclaimation. And I give my earnest thought to the serious side of this question."

"The three principal matters for all to consider, to my mind, are these: First, the welfare of all classes of our taxpayers; second, the interests of our business and industrial institutions, and third, the relief of our city employees and all others of our community who, because of unfortunate circumstances, have been deprived of the full benefit of their earning power by cuts in wages. To this might be added a fourth matter that concerns the future welfare of our city, as through our city our state and nation, namely: the protection of the educational curriculum of our Boston schools to a sufficient degree that the children of the working masses of our people are afforded a fair chance of an education somewhat comparable, to say the least, with the children of wealth of those well-to-do."

Will Help Proper Candidate

"These are indeed serious matters, and the gratification of a selfish ambition that would endanger the successful solving of these problems must be prevented."

"To this end I hope to lend myself and say after some 20 years of political experience and service to my city and State, as leader of the House of Representatives, as under democracy's greatest Governor, the Hon. David I. Walsh, as party leader in the Massachusetts State Senate, as a member of our city government elected at large for a term of three years, as a former president of the Democratic city committee for several terms and as fire commissioner of Boston for almost four years, that I am ready to do all in my power to see that the proper man, whoever he may be, is elected to that high and honorable office.

All Fractions Co-operate

"To those who have so thoughtfully and considerately suggested my candidacy, let me say at this time that I am going to take to myself the connection which I am now giving to others, by telling them that it is not important at all that McLaughlin or any other man whose name has been mentioned as a possible candidate be elected, but that it is all important that after a conference among us of our citizens who are interested that some candidacy be forwarded that typifies the hopes of the majority of the people of Boston to the end that prosperity and contentment prevail in our glorious city.

"My advice, which may not be taken, is for all elements and factions to co-operate and get together. I am not interested in the candidacy of any individual orNous ousoyfiscrgrifying auy individual's ambition; I am for Boston, and, believing in the sound principle of democratic democracy that majority should prevail in our city, as well as in our State and nation, I say to all who are candidates so who sincerely harbor the ambition to become a candidate, thus endangering our city's welfare, to get together in the interests of the people of Boston and for the protection of the institutions of Boston.

In Interests of All

"The people should insist that the successful candidate be possessed of the proper experience, vision, imaginative power, knowledge of municipal government and finance and, above all, the necessary amount of intestinal fortitude to do right by and for the interests of all.

WASHINGTON

CURLEY VISIT

WASHINGTON, May 22 (AP)—Of intense political interest in New England is the coming visit to the capital of Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, the present question mark of the prospective administration lineup. Recent developments and conversations among the more accurate political prognosticators, indicate that Mayor Curley may yet take his seat in the administration family circle and at a post considerably nearer to Boston than the American embassy at Warsaw.

The State executives—Governors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont and Brann of Maine, will confer with Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture to see if some program cannot be initiated to save the thousands of New England dairymen from impending disaster occasioned by many months of prices actually below the cost of milk production.
City Plan Program Sought by Curtis

Mayor James M. Curley, left, and Gov. Louis Brann of Maine before boarding the train for Washington, where the mayor will attend a conference of mayors, and the governor a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Mayor James M. Curley left the Back Bay Station at 9 o'clock last night for Washington to join with other Mayors of cities of the country in seeking improvement to cover the next twenty years, proposing a thoroughfare plan of wide connecting highways radiating from the business section to surrounding municipalities. He said, however, that he approved any order that would help conditions.

Curtis pointed out that a planning program would justify the city's asking for Federal funds to be used for unemployment relief, quoting President Roosevelt as suggesting that $3,300,000,000 be invested in useful and necessary construction and be made available for States, counties and municipalities.

Mayor Curley said that four years ago he appointed a planning commission which already has reported on possible improvements to cover the next twenty years, proposing a thoroughfare plan of wide connecting highways radiating from the business section to surrounding municipalities. He said, however, that he approved any order that would help conditions.

The council, in executive committee session, voted to allow the Municipal Employment bureau $5000 for salaries, but when the order reached the floor it received only thirteen votes, two short of the fifteen needed for passage.

Smith Pleads U. S. Shipping Case in Radio Address

NEW YORK, May 22 (A. P.)—American patronage of American shipping was urged tonight by Alfred E. Smith in an address in observance of Maritime Day.

As a result of the Jones-White act of 1928, Smith said, "We have put the American flag back upon the world's main trade routes and created a reservoir of men and ships available for national emergency."

Urging support of the country's shipping, Mr Smith said: "It is the North Atlantic trade, which is the most active in the world, of the 20 or 25 percent of the passengers who are foreigners, the proportion selecting American steamers is almost negligible, while of the remaining 75 or 80 percent who are Americans, more than half use foreign vessels."

"We have a half-billion dollar annual bill for maritime freight and passenger service which the American public pays. Of this amount fully two-thirds goes to foreign shipping."

A new era has dawned upon the port of Boston from the standpoint of maritime progress, activity and prosperity, Mayor James M. Curley said yesterday afternoon in a radio address from Station WNAC in observance of Maritime Day. He predicted that next year will witness a commercial revival at the Boston port such as never previously has taken place. Mayor Curley said: "Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, in an address last night, also discussed the maritime situation in Boston and said the port of Boston was about to come into its own at last."

Mayor Curley said that only yesterday he was informed that the Holland-American line has assigned one of its first-class passenger liners, the steamship Volendam, for regular sailings between Boston and European ports starting July 5.

$1 Pay Drop for Labormers Bared

Laborers working on municipal jobs are now getting $4 a day, as compared with the former scale of $5 a day, it was learned yesterday. At the same time Mayor Curley said that unskilled laborers earned enough to keep their families going and warned contractors that any cut on the rate of 50 cents an hour would result in cancellation of contracts.
Mayor James M. Curley yesterday sent the City Council a 1933 budget calling for the expenditure of $52,933,944, a cut of $1.90 to $33.60 was promised last year by Mayor Curley in his 1933 budget calling for appropriations of $49,484,535 for city, county and debt requirements.

Cuts Save $1,900,000

The Mayor set the total savings through reductions in salaries for this year at $7,850,000, and pointed to other savings in the personal service group by allowing vacancies by reason of death or retirement to stand. Reductions in allowance for repairs, lower street lighting costs and a single contract charge for the disposal of waste are credited with the savings under the heading, "contractual services."

The Mayor listed items in the budget which have been curtailed. As an example, the item for contract service has been reduced to $60,160, is marked up in the budget. The item for contract service has been reduced to $60,160, is marked up in the budget. The item for contract service has been reduced to $60,160, is marked up in the budget.

New Heads Are Used

The Mayor listed items in the budget this year under new headings, explaining that he did so because of the extraordinary conditions faced by the municipality. "By consolidating the various item allowances under these groups, it is felt that the resulting flexibility will afford department officials a better opportunity to absorb reductions," he said. "Another beneficial result of the change should be a marked reduction in the number of adjustments or transfers which have been necessary in former years because of the high degree of seggregation followed in the preparation of the budget."

The summary of the budget follows:

Grand Total $49,117,710

Public welfare and soldiers' relief estimates are $7,850,000; the county budget, $3,500,000; debt requirements, $9,233,944; Printing Department, $450,650; City Record, $26,475, and the following Water Department: water service, $1,387,000; collecting division, $72,200, and debt requirement, $56,160; city departments including police, $26,500,000. The grand total is $49,117,710. The figures include all but the School Department, which is approximately $17,000,000.

Estimated public welfare figures are $633,000 more than last year. If, however, the Federal Government makes its contribution of approximately $4,000,000, it will ease considerably the pressure on the city's finances.
Good As Far As It Goes

Mayor Curley's final draft of a budget for the city's regular expenses in 1933, exclusive of relief payments, comes to $20,550,000. For 1932 the comparable figure was $31,096,000. This year's appropriations for the support of Boston's municipal Government therefore indicate a saving, in the regular departments, of $4,546,000. That figure includes the initial cut made by the mayor when drawing up his tentative budget from the estimates submitted to him by the department heads, plus a further reduction of $715,000. This second trimming Mayor Curley has carried out in accord with the recent act of the Legislature, limiting Boston's appropriations for the support of Boston's municipal Government to $36,750,000 for the year. This represents a cut of $4,545,537 below last year's figures, showing that in comparison with last year the police department has been cut from $8,154,870 to $5,321,066; fire department, from $4,490,688 to $3,838,506; City Hospital, $3,432,379 to $2,753,600; sanitarium; $3,216,443 to $2,748,600; parks; $1,541,829 to $1,718,537; paving service; $1,429,452 to $1,240,308; lighting service; $1,012,728 to $908,355; library, $1,068,155; to $904,730; health; $1,071,273 to $912,610, and ferry service, $332,729 to $141,760.

The biggest cut revealed in the budget was made in the city payroll with a reduction of $2,532,551, reducing this year's payroll down to $18,292,559, the lowest since 1925. This was accomplished, the mayor said, through the 5, 10 and 15 per cent pay cuts.

The items for contractual service has been reduced to $3,729,271, to save $785; $34; this year; equipment expenditures are reduced to $697,430, to save $367,386; supplies are down to $2,932,296, saving $378,396; materials will cost $378,545, or $1,250, less than last year, and only $56,000 has been allowed for miscellaneous items, in which a saving of $50,150 is marked up in the budget.

Curley Sees $1.90 Cut in Tax Rate

Before his departure last night for Washington, Mayor Curley said that he anticipated a cut of $1.90 in Boston's tax rate from $35.50 to $33.60 on the basis of his 1933 budget submitted to the City Council and calling for an expenditure of $26,550,000 for city departments under his control and for a grand total output of $49,484,535, which includes the administration and county and debt requirements.

Curley Resumes Relief Drive

Washington to Secure Aid for Distressed Communites

Mayor Curley will preside tomorrow at a conference of executives from a number of major cities and today planned to confer with House and Senate leaders in connection with the objective of the Mayors' conference to obtain legislation making possible federal loans to cities on tax anticipation warrants.

Mayor Curley and Paul Batters, secretary of the conference, planned to seek an audience with President Roosevelt during the day.

CODMAN SUPPORTS NICHOLS FOR MAYOR

Agrees Election of Wrong Man Will Be Danger

Russell Codman, Jr., who was suggested by friends as a candidate for mayor of Boston in a letter to him Friday, issued a statement last night in which he agreed with Fire Commissioner McLaughlin that election of the wrong man would endanger the city's welfare.

Former Mayor Nichols was declared by Codman to be the man among the present declared candidates who best meets the qualifications of proper experience, vision, knowledge of municipal government and finance, and "intestinal fortitude" set up by the fire commissioner in statements to the newspapers as necessary for Boston's next mayor.

"His record as mayor speaks for itself," Codman said of Nichols. "The co-operative functions performed by our municipal government must go on. We know Nichols can do the job. Boston should not take the risk of putting a new and untried man in the mayor's chair in this crisis.

"If a new man allowed Boston's credit to fall, the resulting disaster would be appalling. The failure of municipal credit destroys the equities in real estate and there can be no prosperity for any one in any municipality which allows its real estate to go to ruin."

OLD CLOTHES DONATED FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

Police and fire stations received large quantities of bundles in response to Near East bundle day set aside yesterday for contributions of cast-off clothing for the unfortunate and needy people of Boston. The gifts were spurred on by Mayor Curley's presentation of a bundle of used clothing to Albert A. Scott, regional director of the Near East Foundation, in accordance with his annual custom.

$4 NEW MINIMUM CITY LABOR WAGE

Curley Reduces Daily Rate From $5—Orders Strict Enforcement

A minimum daily wage of $4 instead of the $5 rate which has been recognized in municipal contracts for several years, but not always recognized by contractors, was established yesterday by Mayor Curley as the "prevailing wage" in Boston.

Instead of a provision in municipal contracts stipulating 62½ cents per hour as the prevailing wage, the rate of 50 cents will henceforth be in force.

MINORITY FOR SAVING ON KITCHEN

Claim $7000 Can Be Cut From Architects' Fees

The minority in the City Council kicked up again yesterday to block Mayor Curley's request for money orders to complete the new kitchen building at the City Hospital and to keep the Municipal Employment Bureau in business.

SAYS $7000 CAN BE SAVED

Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury led the opposition to both measures and in the absence of sufficient aid from the administration supporters they failed of passage and will have to go over to the next meeting for another debate.

The Mayor's order for $100,000 to complete the hospital kitchen, laundry and receiving room building went down for the want of a single vote. It being necessary. On the roll call, 14 favored the project, but six opposed. Councillors Curtis, Fish, Kelly, Norton and Roberts joining with Dowd, who complained that $7000 could be saved by the city on the project by cutting the architect's fees at least 15 per cent in conformity with the pay reduction for public employees.

Under the national code the architects receive 5 per cent of the cost of new construction and 10 per cent of the cost of repairs, but Councillor Dowd alleged that the architects should take a cut because they had reduced the wages of their own employees as much as 25 per cent.

The Mayor's request for $14,000 to maintain the employment bureau was cut down to $1,000 by the Council's executive committee, but this lowered appropriation failed of passage on the roll call vote of 13 to 6, for want of two more votes.
CURLEY BUDGET IS $49,117,710

Mayor’s Figures Do Not Include Cost of Education And Welfare Relief

REPORTS DECREASE EXCEEDS $4,000,000

An appropriation budget of $49,117,710.11 was submitted by Mayor Curley yesterday to the city council. Allocations do not include the cost of education, interest on temporary loans in anticipation of taxes or an approximate maintenance of the public welfare and soldiers’ relief departments beyond $7,850,000 already appropriated.

In contrast with the 1932 budget, the aggregate appropriations recommended to the council purport to disclose a reduction in excess of $4,000,000, but because of the incompleteness of the schedule of departmental costs, the budget provides no accurate basis for comparison with expenditures in 1932.

School appropriations have been roughly figured at $17,000,000. How much the interest charged on temporary loans will approximate is uncertain, but hope is held by the mayor that congressional action authorizing the loan of money by the federal government to municipalities on tax anticipation and delinquency notes will effect a saving of $250,000.

The recent reduction in salaries will affect a saving of $1,900,000 to which contributions of city and county employees of $400,000 must be added to disclose the full benefit of personal service outlays. Debt requirements are $9,233,944.25 or $113,174.48 greater than in 1932 and because of the unusually large number of retirements of veteran employees requirements of the pension fund are slightly more than a year ago.

Maritime Progress

NOTABLE, SAYS CURLEY

Recites Long List of Sailing from Boston

Maritime progress for the port of Boston during the past year, despite the depression, was notable. Mayor Curley declared in a broadcast yesterday in observance of Maritime Day.

After reciting a long list of new sailings between Boston and foreign ports of both passengers and freight lines, he pointed out that the Holland-American line has assigned one of its first class steamers, the Volendam, for sailings between Boston and European ports, starting July 5.

Prospects of early abolition by the interstate commerce commission of absorbing charges by railroads and steamship lines at the port of New York, were indicated, he said, by recent recommendations to the commission by its examiner for such abolition.

The removal of the discriminatory charges places the port of Boston on a competitive basis where in the future it will be more advantageous to ship in the port of Boston than any other port," he said, “and if the merchants whose places of business are in New England will take advantage of this opportunity that is presented it is a certainty that Boston will shortly once more occupy the place of pre-eminence so long held in the maritime world.”
CURLEY URGES NEW ECONOMY

Would Enable Cities to Do Part in Public Works Program

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—Doubt that American municipalities will be able to participate in the President’s public works program unless financial assistance is received was expressed freely today at a conference of two score mayors of major municipalities.

Mayor Miller of Cleveland and Mayor Sparks of Akron said there was not a city in their state that could take advantage of the proposed $3,300,000,000 building program.

Under the present bill, 30 per cent of the program would be supplied by the federal government and the other 70 per cent, by state and local governments.

The question of the ability of American cities to take part in the public works program was raised by Mayor Curley of Boston, president of the United States Conference of Mayors, which called the gathering.

Curley said he believed the cities should make further economies to enable them to carry on their part of the public works program and predicted that the saving from welfare expenditures would be sufficient to pay for the construction work Curley urged.

"Unless needed credit can be promptly obtained," Curley said, "the following will result:

1—Solvent cities will be forced to default because cash will not be available.

2—Thousands of municipal employees will be unpaid.

3—Cities will be forced to resort to scrip which will circulate at uncertain prices.

4—Essential governmental services may break down.

5—A public works program, the bulk of which is municipal construction, will be absolutely impossible.

CURLEY IN CAPITAL; SPENDS BUSY DAY

All Public Business—Denies Seeking Office

[Special Dispatch to The Herald]

WASHINGTON, May 24—Mayor Curley of Boston spent a busy day in the national capital, appearing before both the Interstate Commerce Commission and Reconstruction Finance Corporation, spending hours in preparation for the conference here tomorrow of mayors of more than 50 of the country’s largest cities, and issuing no less than three statements.

Before the R. F. C. he urged the proposed amendment to the R. F. C. act which would permit the government corporation to purchase tax anticipation and tax delinquent warrants from municipalities at reasonable rate of interest up to 75 per cent. of the delinquencies for the current year and 50 per cent. for the preceding year, thus making available necessary funds “for the continuous and orderly operation of municipal functions.”

He declared that the major construction program now under consideration of Congress, if enacted, would fail of its purpose unless a market was provided for the sale of tax warrants in order that municipalities may obtain the necessary finances for their part of the construction cost.

He predicted that he would before the Interstate commerce commission against a reduction in lighterage rates in the port of New York, declaring it would result in unfairly depriving Boston of its advantages as a transatlantic port.

He declared his sole mission here was in the interest of saving the financial position of the cities of the country and that he had no thought of discussing with the President any political post for himself. He also denied he had visited the President with Comdr. Rose of the Massachusetts department of the American Legion in behalf of veterans.

Mayor Curley will preside at the conference of mayors tomorrow and will go with a committee of mayors to the White House if a conference can be arranged.

MAY SEE ROOSEVELT

Those who believe Mayor Curley will place among administration favorites regard as highly significant his inclusion among the speakers at the testimonial dinner given yesterday in New York to Postmaster-General Farley, official patronage peddler for the Roosevelt administration.

Mayor Curley tomorrow will preside at the mayors’ conference, will go with a committee of mayors to the White House, if a conference can be arranged, and has a number of other appointments, the nature of which were not disclosed.

Curley pointed out that 60 of the 93 largest cities in the country, which are solvent, today are facing a serious crisis. Due to factors over which they have no control, they are unable to dispose of short term tax anticipation notes.

"Credit," said Curley, "which in the past has always been available from private channels, but which today is lacking, can properly be furnished by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. Legislation can be enacted authorizing the corporation to purchase tax warrants or make loans to cities on tax anticipation notes.

"This authorization can be safeguarded by

CURLEY URGES R. F. C. AID FOR 60 CITIES

Washington, May 24 (INS)—With Mayor James M. Curley of Boston presiding, the mayors of many of the nation’s largest cities met here today in a final effort to obtain federal assistance for municipalities.

Washington, May 23 (AP)—James Michael Curley, Boston's ubiquitous mayor, roused through Washington today on matters official, political and private.

His first appearance was at the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the complaint of the port of Boston and the state of New Jersey against railroads at the port of New York.

Assured that the situation there was "satisfactory and encouraging," the mayor returned to his hotel, where he devoted several hours to preliminary preparation for the conference tomorrow of some 50 mayors of the country’s large cities.

ENDORSE R. F. C. PLAN

Later the mayor, with Robert Jackson, secretary of the Democratic national committee, bobbed up at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, where they endorsed the recommendation for a private loan in a self-liquidation project.

As customary on his frequent trips, Curley was silent as far as his political activities were concerned, but his trip attracted more than casual political observers, and particularly among the New England colony here.

The belief has persisted that Curley will still keep his place among administration favorites and as highly significant his inclusion among the speakers at the testimonial dinner given yesterday in New York to Postmaster-General Farley, official patronage peddler for the Roosevelt administration.

Mayor Curley tomorrow will preside at the mayors’ conference, and go with a committee of mayors to the White House, if a conference can be arranged, and has a number of other appointments, the nature of which were not disclosed.

Curley told the mayors they would have the highest hopes of interest in federal loans, "as long as the mayors will stay in line with the administration.

They will have the highest hope of interest in federal loans, "as long as the mayors will stay in line with the administration.

Mayor Heads Conference at Washington on Relief for Municipalities

By Oliver McKee, Jr.

Special to the Transcript:

Washington, May 24—Under the chair-ship of Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, heads of fifty of the largest cities in the United States began their confer-eences here this morning to canvass their financial problems. Main attention centered around the credit situation. If cred-

t it cannot be obtained, Mr. Curley pointed out, the following results may be expected:

Solvent cities will be forced to default.
Thousands of municipal employees will be unpaid. Cities will be forced to resort to scrip which will circulate at uncertain prices. Essential government services may break down. And finally a public works program, the bulk of which is municipal construction, will be impossible.

As a remedy Curley urged the enactment of legislation authorizing the
R. F. C., to purchase or make loans to cities on tax anticipation notes. This authorization, he said, could be safety-guaranteed by limiting loans to 75 per cent of the 1933 levy and the 50 per cent of the 1932 delinquencies. He suggested that the emergency legislation be limited to time.

Curley estimated the needs of the sixty major cities at $300,000,000 dollars, with possibly less than $100,000,000 actually being applied for. "When these solvent cities are placed on their feet," he said, "their credit will be restored and thorough recovery will be helped. Public business is the largest business in the United States. No direct expenditure is involved but a revolving credit is essential."

In a statement issued prior to the meeting today, Mayor Curley of Boston strove through Union station today on his way to a number of appointments when he was stopped by a number of photographers.

"Pardon us," they chorused, "but are you by chance Mr. Morgan?"

"Boys, I thank you from my heart for the compliment," the mayor told them, "but are you by chance Mr. Morgan?"

Curley's Aid Needed

JOHN F. FITZGERALD SEES ITS NEED TO BLOCK
NICHOLS

A cauc of recognized party leaders to select a Democratic candidate for Mayor in the coming city election was suggested last night by former Mayor Fitzgerald, speaking before the Massachusetts Women's Political Club at the Hotel Bradford.

"CURLEY'S AID NEEDED"

Ma warned the women leaders against backing on the bandwagon of any mayority candidate at the present time, and urged them to wait for the selection of a qualified representative of the rank and file of the party with the support of a united Democracy.

He insisted that a meeting of party leaders should be held for this purpose before Mayor Curley leaves to accept an appointment from President Roosevelt. "Any meeting of representative
Democratic leaders must include Mayor
Curley, for he has an outstanding organization in this city," said former Mayor Fitzgerald.

As Mayor of Boston, his point of view is important in our party organization. He has a legion of friends and he is expected to be in on the proposed movement to get the people together in support of a standard-bearer for the United Democracy of the city in the coming mayoralty campaign."

Up to Democratic Leaders

In view of the fact that the Legislature threw out his demand for a runoff primary to pick party candidates for the mayoralty election, former Mayor Fitzgerald contended that it remained for the Democratic leaders of Boston to prevent a recurrence of the 1925 mayoralty election.

"The Republicans forced this charter on us, and the Republican leader, 'Charlie'
Innes, is trying to put 'Mal
Nichols back in the Mayor's office,'" said former Mayor Fitzgerald. "They want to throw a lot of fellows into the field to split up the vote. But we learned our lesson the last time and it cannot happen again."

EASY MONEY? NO!

Those Bostonians who think that we are out of the woods already, that local expenditures will go down steadily and rapidly from now on, that prudential administration is no longer necessary, should study the tabulation of local relief outlays in the last three years. They were a million a month last year. They are now running higher than ever before. For the first four months of 1933 they exceeded the corresponding total of 1932 by almost a half million.

A tabulation which City Hall has given The Herald includes all money spent by the public welfare department for dependents' and mothers' aid and old age pensions. The other expenditures, except for administration, are not large. Here are the figures:

The problem which distressed Boston has already received attention from Harry L. Hopkins, the federal relief administrator. His words ought to come to the attention of every lawmaking and administrative official in Massachusetts. Some of them have probably been looking on him as a national Santa Claus, who will distribute the $500,000,000 fund without much fuss. We can find no such implication in his first statement as relief administrator. He said in part (we have rearranged the order of his sentences):

"Of course, we will not forget that there are a lot of people to be taken care of, and that the government is going to keep people from going hungry, but an unconscionable number of people are obtaining relief. It will not be my business to perpetuate in the United States a policy which will keep 16,000,000 people on the relief rolls. We will begin with the premise that direct relief is a bad thing. Certainly the states and communities have got to go to work and do their part or we are licked before we start. Certainly it was not the intent of Congress or the President that the government is going to hold the bag.

Let us not expect, therefore, that a city or a state is to get any portion of the federal funds just for the asking. Let us remember, too, that the law itself is not so loosely drawn that temporary politicians can escape their obligations. One clause of the industrial recovery law says that "in deciding to extend any aid or grant hereunder to any state, county or municipality, the President may consider whether action is in process or in good faith assured therein reasonably designed to bring the ordinary current expenditures thereof within the prudently estimated revenues thereof."

To this we may add a passage taken from a speech which Gov. Roosevelt made in July, 1931. He was discussing state aid to municipalities, and the principle which he expressed applies to the federal fund. Said the Governor:

Too frequently, however, state aid is granted and the money turned over to the localities without requiring that its expenditures shall be subject to state supervision—without exacting any guaranties that the aid so granted will be economically used or applied to reduce the local tax load.

In short, the government is not going to be an easy mark. The states, and municipalities must have a clean bill of health before obtaining assistance. This does not mean that we in Massachusetts should refrain from asking Washington for our proper share. We should not be so grossly foolish as to have mock scruples above drawing on a fund to which the commonwealth contributes handsomely. But we must still balance our budgets. Waste must be eliminated. All feasible economies must be made. Local efforts must be continued vigorously.

Therefore many communities have used additional revenue as a pretext for increased expenditures. The views of Mr. Hopkins, President Roosevelt, Budget Commissioner Douglas and the others responsible for the $500,000,000 law indicates to us that this practice will not be tolerated any longer.

CURLEY SCORED ON N. Y. PORT ACTION

Mass. Industries Speaker Hits Efforts to Raise Rates

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—Edward J. Rich, representing the associated industries of Massachusetts, attacked efforts by the city of Boston to secure increased terminal charges at the port of New York, as contrary to the best interests of New England.

Testifying before the Interstate commerce commission in the New York harbor lighterage case, Rich said most of the exports from New England must go through the port of New York because of better shipping facilities there. Efforts by the city of Boston, he said, to have a lighterage charge imposed on freight at New York, would not aid Boston.

Wilbur Laroe, counsel for the port of New York's authority, bitterly attacked the position of the city of Boston in seeking to add a lighterage charge to freight costs in New York. He said the bulk of testimony for Boston had been given by a group of politicians headed by Mayor Curley of Boston, who knew nothing about freight rates. He said their testimony had been repudiated by practically all of the business interests and industries of New England.
CURLEY RENEWS DRIVE FOR AID

Boston Executive to Preside at Mayors' Conference

Social Dispatch to the Globe

WASHINGTON, May 23 — Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, whose chief mission at the Capital, he says, is to do something to avert the financial crisis which threatens nearly 100 of the largest municipalities, spent a busy 10 hours in Washington today. Incidentally, the Mayor did not discuss Federal patronage with either Senators Walsh or Coolidge, or any one in the administration. The matter of patronage he considers at the moment of “minor consequence,” he said.

The Mayor appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission with Samuel Silverman, corporation counsel, and Richard Parkhurst and J. B. Campbell, representing the Port authority, supporting the contention that the system of free lightergage practiced by the railroads at their New York terminal constitutes a discrimination against the Port of Boston, which is in the power of the I. C. C. to correct.

He interested himself with Commanders Rose of the Massachusetts veterans in the matter of urging the President to issue an executive order making a lien on new moneys to cities on tax anticipation notes.

Consults Wagner

The Mayor also had a conference with Senator Wagner of New York and with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in relation to expanding the financial aid which may be given to cities by the Federal Government.

Mayor Curley is the president of the Mayors' Conference which will meet here tomorrow. Tonight he issued a statement emphasizing the need of the extension of credit promptly to cities now solvent, but which cannot borrow from customary sources.

"The break-down of our private financial institutions distributing securities, and the collapse of municipal credit facilities, has forced these cities into a financial straight-jacket," said Mayor Curley.

"All American cities must live on borrowed money for part of each year, pending the collection of taxes.

What Many Cities Face

If this credit cannot be promptly obtained, the following will result:

(1) Solvent cities will be forced to default because cash will not be available.

(2) Thousands of municipal employees will be unpaid.

(3) Cities will be forced to resort to scrip, which will circulate at uncertain prices.

(4) Essential governmental services may break down.

(5) A public works program, the bulk of which is municipal construction, will be absolutely impossible.

"The credit of the United States Government might be affected since the Nation's credit depends on confidence.

"Credit, which in the past has always been available from private channels but which today is lacking, can properly be furnished by the R. F. C.

"Legislation can be enacted authorizing the R. F. C. to purchase or make loans to cities on tax anticipation notes.

Safeguard by Licus

"This authorization can be safeguarded by limiting loans up to 75 percent of the 1933 levy and up to 50 percent of the 1932 delinquencies. A two-year period of repayment can be made on lien on new moneys.

"A careful estimate of the needs of 60 major cities is $300,000,000. Perhaps less than $100,000,000 would actually be applied for. When these solvent cities are placed on their feet through the extension of legitimate credit, national recovery will be helped.

"The action of the judiciary sub-committee, supporting favorably the Wilcox-Fletcher bill represents an important forward step in the buttressing of the financial structure of the Nation. This bill renders it possible for cities to purchase or make loans to cities on tax anticipation notes.

At the present time more than 1000 municipalities are in need of legislation.

Greeted by Scores on His Surprise Visit

Former Mayor Nichols made a surprise visit to City Hall yesterday in the absence of Mayor Curley, who is in Washington for two days trying to get Congress to provide relief for cities and towns overburdened by public welfare expenditures.

With the next mayoralty election in the offing, the first City Hall visit of former Mayor Nichols since he turned over the reins of office three years ago caused considerable comment among city employees. As the news raced through the building.

Scores of workers raced into the corridors to share the news as he got off the elevator facing the Mayor's door on the second floor. He did not go in to look over his old office, as Presiding Joseph McGrath of the City Council was in the chair as acting Mayor.

Instead he dropped in next door for a chat with City Clerk Winfred J. Davis and then looked in on a few other departments in the basement to make sure

MAYORS SEEK PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, May 23 (A. P.) — More than two score Mayors of major American cities will launch a final drive here tomorrow for enactment of legislation to assist financially distressed municipalities.

The Mayors have two specific objectives. They seek, first, enactment of the Wilcox-Fletcher bill to extend the provisions of the bankruptcy law to insolvent communities, and, second, passage of legislation to permit the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to purchase tax anticipation and tax delinquent warrants of cities at a low rate of interest.

Following a conference tomorrow morning, an attempt will be made to obtain an audience with President Roosevelt at the White House, and with Senator Wagner and other Congressional leaders on Capitol Hill.

MAYOR CURLEY, TAKEN FOR MORGAN, THANKS THE PHOTOGRAPHERS

WASHINGTON, May 23 (A. P.) — Mayor James Curley of Boston strode through Union Station today on his way to a number of appointments, when he was stopped by a group of photographers.

"Pardon us," they chorused, "but are you by chance Mr. Morgan?"

"Boys, I thank you from my heart for the compliment," the Mayor told cameramen, who were awaiting J. P. Morgan, the New York financier.

Mayors Demand Federal Relief

WASHINGTON, May 25 (A. P.)—A delegation of mayors today presented to congressional leaders a petition asking Federal aid for American cities. The delegation, representing the United States Conference of Mayors and consisting of Mayors Hoan of Milwaukee, Virgil of New Orleans, Mahoney of Worcester, Holcomb of Houston, and Howse of Nashville, called upon Vice President Garner, Speaker Raine, ranking members of the House Ways and Means Committee, and the chairman of the Finance Committee. The mayors, in a militant mood, planned to confer this afternoon with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and to send a committee before the Senate Finance Committee tomorrow.

"We warn you," the petition to Congress said, "that if municipal credit is allowed to collapse all faith and credit in banks and industry will be undermined and collapse with it. We are not responsible for the closing of the doors of legitimate credit in our faces. This situation is nothing more than a national calamity requiring national action. For a few millions of dollars our cities can be saved, our employees can be paid, our health, welfare, educational, fire and police services can be continued, our credit can be maintained, and we can be freed from the only serious emergency that has ever confronted the American city. If this is not done we warn you that the collapse of municipal credit will ultimately affect the entire credit structure of the country including the credit of the United States Government."

Ask 75 Percent Loan on Taxes—To Try Congress

WASHINGTON, May 24 (A. P.)—More than 40 mayors of large cities voted late tonight to present to congressional leaders a description, couched in bristling terms, of the American municipalities.

Discouraged and angry at what they called a cool reception by President Roosevelt of their proposal for relief of financially distressed cities, the delegates instructed their executive committee to prepare a strongly worded resolution for presentation to administration and congressional chieftains tomorrow.

Earlier in the day the mayors adopted a resolution endorsing a pending bill to expand the bankruptcy act to insolvent cities, and recommending legislation authorizing the Federal Reserve Bank or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to municipalities upon tax anticipation warrants.

Specifically, they seek to borrow from the national treasury at a low interest rate up to 75 per cent on tax anticipation warrants for 1933 and up to 50 per cent of tax delinquencies up to 1932, the loans to be repaid in two years.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, president of the conference, and other executives expressed the fear that unless such assistance was forthcoming, the cities could no longer function.

Mayors will Sell 2250 Parcels

Auction on June 6 for Unpaid Taxes

More than 2250 parcels of Boston real estate upon which the 1931 taxes remained unpaid will be sold at public auction to be held by City Collector William M. McMorrow at City Hall Annex, Tuesday morning, June 6, at 9 o'clock.

Balances due on the properties range from $1 to $2159, not including interest, costs and charges for summonses, advertising the property for sale, and the proportionate cost of the auction itself unless the bills are paid before the hammer goes down.

A few of the properties have been advertised because the owners failed to pay the $1 assessment charged by the city for gypsy and brown-tail moth spray applied on the private trees on front lawns or in back yards.

The great majority of the sales are for unpaid balances on tax bills nearly two years overdue.

Mayor will be an Auctioneer

At "Flea Market" for St. Elizabeth's Guild

Mayor Curley is scheduled to serve as auctioneer at the backyard party which will be held by St. Elizabeth's Guild from 2 o'clock this afternoon until 8 o'clock tonight at the home of Mrs. David Johnson, 118 Commonwealth Avenue, Back Bay.

The Mayor has agreed to preside over the "flea market" where bric-a-brac and old jewelry, which has been contributed to the guild, will be sold to the highest bidders and the proceeds devoted to the work of the St. Elizabeth's Day Nursery.

Angry at Coolness of Roosevelt to Pleas

WASHINGTON, May 24 (A. P.)—More than 40 mayors of large cities voted late tonight to present to congressional leaders a description, couched in bristling terms, of the plight of American municipalities.

Discouraged and angry at what they called a cool reception by President Roosevelt of their proposal for relief of financially distressed cities, the delegates to the conference of mayors instructed their executive committee to prepare a strongly worded resolution for presentation to administration and congressional chieftains tomorrow.

Earlier in the day the mayors adopted a resolution endorsing a pending bill to expand the bankruptcy act to insolvent cities, and recommending legislation authorizing the Federal Reserve Bank or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to municipalities upon tax anticipation warrants.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, president of the conference, and other executives expressed the fear that unless such assistance was forthcoming, the cities could no longer function.

Mayor Curley's remarks when he was stopped in the Washington road station by news photographers who asked him if he were J. P. Morgan's "Boys, I thank you. What are you doing here?" heart for the "Legionnaires," might have been taken as an indication that he is planning to turn his gathering to the veterans' problems.
ROOSEVELT COOL TO MAYORS' PLAN

Delegation Decides on Bristolian Resolution to Congress Asking Aid for Cities

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—More than 40 mayors of large cities voted to Marie tonight to present to congressional leaders a description, couched in bristling terms, of the plight of American municipalities.

Discouraged and angry at what they called a cool reception by President Roosevelt of their proposal for relief of financially distressed cities, the delegators to the conference of mayors instructed their executive committee to prepare a strongly worded resolution for presentation to administration and congressional channels tomorrow.

Earlier in the day, the mayors adopted a resolution in favor of the Fletcher-Willcox bill to expand the bankruptcy laws to insolvent cities, and recommending legislation authorizing the Federal Reserve Bank or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to municipalities upon tax anticipation warrants.

Specifically, the mayors seek to borrow from the national treasury at a low interest rate up to 75 per cent. on tax anticipation warrants for 1933 and up to 50 per cent. of tax delinquencies up to 1932, the loans to be repaid in two years.

Mayor Curley, president of the conference, and other executives expressed belief that unless such assistance was forthcoming the cities could no longer function.

Mayor Curley said that the President told them he was unable to give his approval to the proposal for loans of up to 75 per cent. on tax anticipation because to do so might mean that similar legislation might in fairness be necessary for state governments. Curley said, however, that he felt "some real progress had been made," in obtaining presidential approval of the Fletcher-Willcox bill to extend provisions of the bankruptcy laws to insolvent cities, and a promise of consideration for their proposal to give authorization to the Federal Reserve Bank to purchase short-term municipal securities.

The committee of mayors also left with President Roosevelt a brief, prepared in the suggestion of James A. Rose, commander of the Massachusetts department, American Legion, containing the President for his statement announcing that veterans compensation regulations would be modified and recommending him to extend the modification to cases affecting demented and tuberculosis veterans, and widows and orphans of veterans.

GOODWIN CALLED TO DEFEND WORK

Kelly to Quiz Fin Com Leader—Albany St Clossing Is Upheld

Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the Boston Finance Commission, because of the insistence of Councilor Francis Kelly, was yesterday invited to appear at 2 p.m. today at a hearing of the City Council committee on appropriations, which has before it for consideration the budget of the Finance Commission.

Secretary Robert Cunniff appeared before the committee yesterday, as he had done for the past several years, but Mr. Kelly announced he would like personally to discuss the matter with Chairman Goodwin. Mr. Kelly said that Mr. Goodwin had a faculty of criticizing city employees for not working and Mr. Kelly would like to ask Mr. Goodwin what Mr. Goodwin did the past year for his salary.

Budget Minimum Fixed

Mr. Cunniff, in reply to questions, said that by statutory requirement the budget for the commission could not be made less than $50,000. If any cash remained it could be returned to the city, he said.

He assured the committee members that he would convey Mr. Kelly's request to Mr. Goodwin but could not guarantee that the chairman would appear. Mr. Kelly then offered an order that City Messenger Edward Leary personally present the appearance of Mr. Goodwin. It was finally agreed to invite Mr. Goodwin.

Late yesterday, when asked if he would appear, Mr. Goodwin said, "I will be there."

Councillor Kelly also delved into the affairs of Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry to the extent of learning why Albany st. was closed to traffic at Boston City Hospital. For sometime Councillor Kelly has been investigating the conditions at the hospital as to whether it is necessary for the street to remain closed. Commissioner Hultman to close the street was acknowledged by the Councilor.

GOODWIN TO FACE CRITIC IN COUNCIL

Merry Row on Tap for This Afternoon in City Hall

A wordy tilt is on tap at City Hall for 2 o'clock this afternoon, when Chairman Frank A. Goodwin of the finance commission will face his arch-critic, Councillor Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester, before the council committee on appropriations.

CHARGES SNUBBING

Councillor Kelly severely criticized the Finance Commission head because he did not appear at yesterday's hearing on the $35,500,000 city budget, and charged that Chairman Goodwin "snubbed" the committee by remaining across the street in his own office smoking "a big, fat, black cigar."

His challenge to Chairman Goodwin to make an appearance before the committee was accepted last night by the Finance Commission head with the laconic reply "I'll be there."

That Chairman Goodwin was the only department head who did not make a personal appearance before the Council committee was the complaint of Councillor Kelly, who warned that he would vote against the appropriation of a single dollar unless Chairman Goodwin showed up.

 REQUIRED BY LAW

Representing the Finance Commission, Secretary Robert K. Cunniff asserted that the Council had no control over the committee and was specifically required by law to appropriate $50,000 a year for its expenses. He explained that he was appearing before the committee to explain the budget items as a matter of courtesy and not of compulsion.

Councillor Kelly sought authority to send City Messenger Edward J. Leary across School street to get Chairman Goodwin but the other members of the committee, headed by Chairman George W. Roberts, insisted that an invitation could better be extended to the Finance Commission to come this afternoon.

Organizations Drop Out

Councillor Clement A. Horton of Hyde Park made it clear that under the law creating the Finance Commission it was up to the chairman to decide whether he wanted to appear or not. But upon hearing of the battle, Chairman Goodwin immediately accepted the invitation to appear today.

The episode is worth notice for several reasons. It exposes the readiness of city executives to shift their legitimate burdens to Congress, and their inclination to keep the treasury in mind when they run into difficulties. It reveals the impatience of a sympathetic President at this attitude, and suggests that there is a limit even to federal liberalities. It is additional evidence of a matter on which we commented yesterday in saying that "easy money" is not going to be especially easy in Washington. It is to be hoped that the President will give a number of repeat performances of the little exhibition.

THE PRESIDENT COOL

An important and significant bit of news appeared yesterday with the headings "Mayors Angry at Coolness of Roosevelt to Pleas" and "President Cool to Mayors' Demands." Under the leadership of Mayor Curley, fifty municipal executives called on the President and asked him to help them. They wished to obtain federal loans on tax anticipation warrants or notes based on them. The New York Times says that the President gave little encouragement. The A. P. version is that the callers were "discouraged and angry at what they called a cool reception by President Roosevelt." They are to request action by Congress, it is added.

It is additional evidence of a matter on which we commented yesterday in saying that "easy money" is not going to be especially easy in Washington. It is to be hoped that the President will give a number of repeat performances of the little exhibition.

Mayor Curley returned from a two-days' visit to Washington yesterday, silent about an impending appointment to a federal position, but in such excellent spirits as to create the impression that he is entirely satisfied with the political situation which involves him.

Significance was attached to his absence from the indignation meeting in Washington Tuesday night of mayors of 40 principal cities of the country who were so resentful of the refusal of President Roosevelt to end the financial troubles of their municipalities that they determined to let him know their feelings.

Though Mayor Curley is the chairman of the conference of mayors he did not attend the meeting although he presided at previous sessions of the conference.

Conry Wins Out

Years of experience in the diplomatic service carried Traffic Commissioner Conry to victory in his heralded meeting with his Council critics. Before his arrival, his enemies were planning to feed him to the lions, but as he left at the conclusion of the hearing, they were shaking hands and giving him dinner invitations to dinner, even though they will not give him any more traffic lights for their home districts under his economy program.

He was rescued by Councillor Kent of closing Albany street to 17th.
Mayor Curley to Fly with Family Sunday

Mayor James M. Curley and three of his children will go flying from the Boston Airport Sunday afternoon. This morning he informed E. J. Whitecomb, New England representative of United Air Lines, that he would bring Mary, George, and Paul to the airport in the afternoon to fly in the new Boeing high speed transport plane that is coming here from New York to be the feature of the Sportsmen Pilot’s air meet. Along with the mayor and his family on board the plane will be Frederic Snyder, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Adjutant General John H. Agnew, who will represent the governor, and William P. Marder, park commissioner.

In arranging for the mayor’s flight this morning, Mr. Whitecomb said that he hoped to take the mayor on a speedy flight along the South Shore and thence to Providence and back to Boston, covering more than 100 miles in thirty minutes. The plane is capable of flying at speeds close to 200 miles an hour and is powered with two Pratt and Whitney Wasp engines. The plane will be on exhibition at the Boston Airport tomorrow from 10 A.M. until 5 P.M.

An informal luncheon has been planned for the United Air Lines’ guests at the airport restaurant at noon. In addition to the visit of the high speed Boeing a number of feature events, including bomb dropping, aerobatic flying and races have been planned by Joseph Burnett and his committee in charge of the Sportsmen Pilot’s air meet. Captain Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent, will be referee of the competitive contests.

Pope’s Editor:

I read J. R.’s letter in which he says there are about 178 vacancies in the Boston police department and in which he urges that more men be put on as new officers receive only $26.52 a week. If he inquired as to the Boston fire department he would find between 300 and 400 vacancies.

Bostonians may smile at the small town fire departments, but if our friends from the country want to get a laugh all they have to do is see our fire department going to a fire. They would see three large engines carrying five men—three drivers, a lieutenant and a fireman. They arrive at the fire only to have to wait until other contingents of four or five engines arrive before they have sufficient men to enable them to start fighting the fire. I am not condemning the firemen as they are doing more than is necessary for one man to do.

Have you noticed all the second alarms at small fires lately? They have to sound a second alarm in order to get more men to properly fight the fires.

Evidently Boston is waiting for a fire like Ellsworth or Auburn before it realizes how short-handed its fire and police departments are.

If business is on the uptrend why doesn’t Mayor Curley show his confidence by filling the vacancies in the police and fire departments. Hultman can’t put men on or he would have done so long ago.

$31,000 SEWER FOR DORCHESTER

At a saving of nearly $10,000 below the estimates of municipal engineers, Mayor Curley, late yesterday, awarded a contract of $31,630.50 to N. Moat & Company, lowest bidders, to install a new section of the Dorchester sewer along Auckland street and Savin Hill avenue.

Mayor Curley plans Fast Air Trip

Mayor Curley is planning to ride three miles a minute at the Boston airport tomorrow afternoon as a passenger in the new superplane of the United Air Lines, which is proposing to install a transcontinental service here to connect Boston with San Francisco in 19 hours.

The Mayor said that he had accepted the invitation to make a trial flight over Massachusetts Bay in the new plane, which he contended could do 125 miles an hour. Since the last Presidential campaign, he has been a devoted aviation enthusiast.

4 CITY FRUIT DEALERS ON CURLEY BLACKLIST

Mayor Accuses Firms of Attempt to Secure Exorbitant Prices

Mayor Curley yesterday blacklisted permanently four prominent Boston firms dealing in fruits and vegetables for collusion in attempting to charge the city exorbitant prices after driving from competition for city contracts all smaller firms.

The mayor declared that he was justified by the fact that purchase for the needs of municipal institutions in June, for which the lowest bidder among the four firms asked $16.525, were made in the open market for $11.462. He calling the saving of $5065 a decrease of 30 per cent, from the lowest bid.

He charged that the four firms, by resort to cut-throat tactics, tightened the budget of city contractors, seeking city contracts for the monthly requirements of the institutions.

He ordered Superintendent of Supplies Chapman to disregard any bids hereafter submitted by the four firms for city business.

Mayor Curley’s Gift on Way to Boston, England

A gold embossed, red morocco bound volume, “Fifty Years of Boston,” is en route to the town of Boston, England. The book is the gift of Mayor Curley to the town.

Mayors’ Heirs Win Pet Prizes

Marjorie Nichols, 11, daughter of ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, and Frances X. Curley, nine-year-old son of the present mayor, were prize winners in the annual pet show held under the auspices of the Children’s Museum, Jamaica Plain, in the museum building yesterday.

There were all kinds of pets on exhibition: Turtles and guppies, chickens, white rats, white mice, rabbits, cats, dogs and guinea pigs.

American Curley to Ride in Big Hub Plane Show

An exhibition of stunt flying, parachute jumping, racing and formation flying is scheduled for Boston Airport today in connection with the first New England showing of the world’s fastest ten-passenger transport plane.

Mayor Curley is expected to be one of the first passengers.

Mayor to Welcome Medical Delegates

The 89th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Ass’n., the oldest medical society in America, opens tomorrow at Hotel Statler and will have sessions until Friday. Dr. James V. May of Boston, president, and commissioner of the Massachusetts State Department of Mental Diseases, will preside.

On Tuesday Mayor Curley will deliver an address.
No Prospect of Simplifying Mayoral Field

Nichols, Foley, Mansfield Are in to Stay — Other Candidates Sure to Run

By Forrest P. Hall

Politicians see no hope of simplifying the mayoral field, as per suggestion of Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaurin, that "all candidates and factions cooperate and get together." Former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, District Attorney William J. Foley and Frederick W. Mansfield are avowed candidates who would brook no interference. They are in the mayoral contest to stay, and though they deplore the consequences of a campaign in which the electorate will be rent with factional quarrels, as was the case eight years ago, each is willing to rise or fall in battle.

Those who have been saying that it is "silly" to "start a mayoral contest six months before election now realize that the campaign is on and that the next few weeks will determine issues in the crucial election. The action of Assistant District Attorney John J. Murphy, who has been in charge of the prosecution in the closed Industrial Bank and Trust Company case, in resigning his post under District Attorney Foley to give his endorsement to Mayor Nichols, is a forceful reminder of the complications which the mayoral contest will present.

Other Sensations to Come

Politics makes strange bedfellows and Murphy's abandonment of Foley to support Mayor Nichols is followed by other Republican endorsements. Though no official action has been taken, it is a surprise to hear of Mr. Curley supporting Nichols, whether actively or "privately." It is interesting to hear that Frank A. Goodwin of the Finance Commission, intended to go on the stump for the Republican campaign, for the last ten days the mayor's probable attitude in the fight has been much commented upon.

What could be gained for the present mayoral contest by mounting any action in the coming conflict is being questioned. There is advantage in being a politician "playing the winning hand," if he does not sacrifice too many of his party friendships, but in the coming situation, hosts of Curley's friends can be picked off the bandwagon for Nichols or Foley. Moreover, Curley might be sure of a lucky advantage in looking for aeparative control of the Republican partisanship for governor or United States senator later.

Any day Curley goes, so do the nationalists. To Chairman Goodwin, will go even though he may say, "I am too old to swallow much of this mess in the process.

New Blood Wanted

McLaurin's radio announcement of his mayoral aspirations came as no surprise. Likewise, it has caused little comment. Everyone realizes that to make a credible showing the former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association must receive the backing of suburban groups.

Mass. Exchange Outing June 15

The twenty-fifth annual outing of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange will take place at the Presidential Country Club (formerly Sandy Burr at Wayland) on Thursday, June 15. It is expected that it will be addressed by Governor Ely, Lieutenant Governor Bacon, Mayor Curley and Mayor Weeks of Newton. James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt, has been invited to speak. Players for the field square dance have been selected.
CITY TAX RATE WOULD BE CUT $5

New Bill Would Result in $9,284,147 Saving for Boston

GIFTS TO CITIES AND TOWNS LISTED

Legislative enactment of the pending $33,000,000 omnibus taxation bill would result in a reduction of $9,284,147 in the 1933 tax levy for the city of Boston. This gift from the state would cut the tax rate by approximately $5 for each $1000 assessment valuation.

This information is contained in a table prepared yesterday by the House committee, which shows the amount to which each city and town in the commonwealth would be entitled under the terms of the bill. This table is based on the information furnished yesterday by the House finance board.

Under the restrictive terms of the bill none of the $33,000,000 in new revenue obtained through the imposition of $21,000,000 in new taxes and a federal grant of $12,000,000 may be used by the cities and towns for new expenditures.

The funds would be distributed to the municipalities by the state emergency finance board in amounts fixed by the increase in their public welfare relief expenditures in 1922 over the same expenditures in 1929.

No municipality accepting its appropriation would be permitted to make any new appropriation for this year without the approval of the finance board.

The distributed funds could be used against appropriations made for public welfare relief, soldiers' aid, short term obligations incurred in anticipation of revenue or as an estimated receipt in the establishment of a tax rate.

With these restrictions in force the ultimate result in each instance would be a lowering of the local tax rate by the amount of the appropriated new taxes.

The bill would be debated at Thursday's session of the House of Representatives.

It calls for the imposition of 1 per cent. general retail sales tax for one year.
Francis J. Brennan,
Curley's Aid, Dead

Former Street Commissioner Helped His Chief in Recent Roosevelt Fight

Francis J. Brennan, one of the closest friends that Mayor Curley ever had, died at his home on Larchmont avenue, West Roxbury, this afternoon, aged fifty-seven years. He had been ill for a year of more, and particularly since the hard fight he made as chief aide to Mayor Curley in the Roosevelt campaign.

Brennan was a natural-born politician. He was a native of Boston and for many years lived in Roxbury. As a boy he entered the department store of Timothy Smith and rose to the position of manager. When Mr. Smith died he left Mr. Brennan an annuity.

Urged by his friends to enter politics, with the support of the Tammany Club which he had joined soon after Mayor Curley organized it, Mr. Brennan was elected to the old Common Council and served during 1906 and 1907. At the end of that term he ran for the House of Representatives from old Ward 17 and took his seat in 1910, Speaker Walker assigning him to the Committee on Libraries.

During his House service he became prominent for his work on labor bills and other measures such as direct election for United States senators, the income tax, the initiative and referendum. He was regarded as one of the most popular members of the lower branch. From 1910 to 1918 Mr. Brennan was in the thickest of the old ward's political fights, and Mr. Curley regarded him as his chief lieutenant. A year after Mr. Curley took his seat as mayor for the first term he named Mr. Brennan to the street commission where he served until his resignation under Mayor Peters.

Going out of political office, Mr. Brennan took to his chief who had had enough of politics to live out his remaining years in the quiet of his home.

Mayor Curley learned of his friend's death at a meeting of the Civic Robert White trustees, and immediately left for the home, handing the manuscript of his weekly radio address over to President Joseph McGrath of the City Council to read.

JAMAICA PLAIN DOG BEST IN PET SHOW

Mayor's Son Francis Gets Fourth With Guppies

J. C. Brennan, a 3-year-old collie owned by George E. Brody, 11, of 32 Spring Park ave., Jamaica Plain, was awarded first prize as the best exhibit and best of the large dog group at the annual children's pet show of the Children's Museum of Boston, held on the museum grounds at the Jamaica Pond, Jamaica Plain, Saturday.

More than 200 children attended the show, at which there were 150 entries, including dogs, cats, rabbits, turtles, mice, chickens and fish. Dr. Wesley A. Young of the Animal Rescue League judged the pets as to cleanliness, the care they had received and the stories the children had to tell about the lives of the animals and fish.

Marjorie Nichols, daughter of Ex-Mayor Malcolm Nichols, was awarded second prize in the small dog class for her entry, Chummy, a Boston terrier. Francis Curley, son of Mayor Curley, exhibiting six guppies, was awarded fourth prize in the miscellaneous class.

The principal awards in the five groups, large dogs, small dogs, cats, rabbits, miscellaneous, follow:

Three first prizes were awarded in the large dog class to Brody: Harold Grant Toby, 94 Brock st., Brookline, for a Pomera-nian-Spitz, Trixy; and Elizabeth Long, 3 Call st., Jamaica Plain, French Bull, Jerry.

Two first prizes were awarded in the small dog group to Erwin Lindley, 12, 94 Brock st., Brookline, for a Pomeranian-Spitz; Trixy, and Elizabeth Long, 3 Call st., Jamaica Plain, French Bull, Jerry.

Two first prizes were awarded in the miscellaneous group to Henry Hall, 11, 9 Harvard ave., Brookline, for an Angora, Jeff; and Ralph E. Rose, 733 Centre st., Jamaica Plain, for a Persian, Lu Om.

Two first prizes were awarded for rabbits with her entries, Sammy and Ham, to Barbara Begloe, 12, of 51 Avalon road, Woburn, was awarded first prize, and Ralph E. Rose, 733 Centre st., Jamaica Plain, was awarded first prize in the miscellaneous group for his turtle, Gilbert. The second Prize in the same class went to Bruce George, 6 Charles River parkway, Newton, for a white mouse, Patsy.

Rides in New Plane

Out Next Week

More than 10,000 people watched the Sportman's Pilots meet at the Boston airport yesterday afternoon, which was featured by races, bomb-dropping contests, and rides in a new multi-motored Boeing transport plane, capable of a speed of 155 miles an hour and carrying 10 passengers.

Grocer Snow and Robert Love provided an unusual finish to the airplane races when they crossed the line in a dead heat in the 10-mile race which featured the events. Joseph Barney was third, and John H. Showbe, fourth.

Frank Sprackles of the Harvard Fly- ing Club won the bomb-dropping contest, landing a bomb within 5 feet of the mark. Harry Copland, pilot, completed a loop in an airplane, one of the few times this stunt has been done in Boston.
BOWLERS BANQUET IN CHARLESTOWN

John P. Buckley Toastmaster at League's Party

The annual banquet of the Charlestown Bowling League, served last evening in Roughen Hall, Charterstown, was enjoyed by a gathering of 200 members of the league, their friends and guests. Winners of the league received prizes in cash and silver cups, the latter donated by men prominent in city and State affairs and by prominent Charlestown business.

A fine program was presented. The banquet concluded the league's season of intense rivalry on the bowling alleys for the coveted honors. Well-known local talent provided an evening of songs and music. George Faye was master of ceremonies.

F. J. BRENNAN DIES
IN JAMAICA PLAIN
Long Closely Associated With Mayor Curley

Francis J. Brennan, long closely associated with Mayor James M. Curley, died early this afternoon at his home, 40 Lockstead Av., Jamaica Plain.

Mr Brennan had been sick for about two years. He leaves his wife.

Born 54 years ago in Roxbury, he attended the Hugh O'Brien Grammar and English High Schools, and as a young man entered the employ of a Roxbury dry goods house, remaining with this firm until, in the first term he was one of the Mayor's errand boys, where he worked with Frank A. Goodwin, a member of the City Street Commission.

In 1907-08 he served as a member of the old Common Council from Roxbury. He was active in affairs of the Courcy Tammany Club from its beginning.

Mayor Curley was attending a meeting of the board of trustees of the George Robert White Fund when informed of the death of his close friend. He left the meeting and went to the Brennan home. He had prepared to deliver a speech on the Courcy Tammany Club for its 50th anniversary which he was to give on May 1st at the station WJAC. After the speech, he turned over the address to Mayor Curley.

50 YEARS IN OLD CORNER BOOKSTORE

Pres Joseph M. Jennings
Observing Anniversary

Pres Joseph M. Jennings of the Old Corner Bookstore, Inc., is observing today the 50th anniversary of his connection with the establishment, and is doing so in a characteristically modest way—by taking a day off and remaining at his little farm in Bryantville.

Addresses were delivered by Senator Joseph A. Langone, City Councilor Thomas H. Green, Street Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, Capt. Harry Grace, B. P. D.; Representative Arthur V. Sullivan; Sen- ators, Diet Atty. William F. Polley and Green Club; Street Commis- sioner Theodore A. Glynn Cup.

Others who received prizes were Tom Tracey, Pat McCarthy and Capt. Dan Donovan, and Joseph Lynch received two prizes.

FRANCIS BRENNAN, LONG ILL, IS DEAD

Francis J. Brennan, one of Mayor Curley's closest friends and advisors and one of the political factors in the city of Boston, died this afternoon at his Lockstead street, Jamaica Plain, home. He had been ill for more than a year, but death was not expected.

He had been secretary to Mayor Curley, street commissioner and election commissioner. He was born in Roxbury 57 years ago and first became acquainted with Mayor Curley when the latter organized the Tammany Club. Brennan at that time lived on Greenville street, Roxbury.

When Mayor Curley heard of Brennan's death this afternoon he left a meeting of the George R. White Health Fund trustees, turned over to City Council President Joseph McGrath a speech which he (the mayor) had prepared and went immediately to Brennan's home. A widow survives Brennan.
THREE-MILE-A-MINUTE PLANE VISITS BOSTON

Seven-Ton Super Air Transport Takes Up Mayor and Son — Sportsman's Pilot Day

Mayor Curley and his party, including City Treasurer Dolan and the Mayor's youngest son, Francis, arrived at the field shortly after 3. Before going for a ride in the air Mayor Curley, speaking over the public address system, praised the rapid development of aviation and painted a bright future for it. Francis, who remained in company with City Treasurer Dolan, beamed with anticipation. It was to be his first ride.

Mayor's Party Takes Ride

Mayor Curley took Mr. Dolan by the arm, said: "We're off, Eddie." Francis grabbed his father's hand and all three climbed into the plane. Chairman William P. Long was nearby. Although he has been the directing genius of the airport development Mr. Long has never ventured into the atmosphere above. Persistent efforts to change his mind yesterday were equally unavailing. He stayed on the ground.

"I never realized it could be so nice," was the way City Treasurer Dolan described his maiden trip in the sky. "Gee, it was great. I want to go some more," exclaimed the Mayor's boy.

The plane flew back to New York about 5.

The visit of the plane was in connection with the Sportsman's Pilot's Day program, which abounded in thrills. Lieut. Crocker Snow, a daring and skilled flyer put on a stunt show on a stunt stunt all of his own, thrilling the crowd for fully 30 minutes with a series of stunts. Later he and Hazen Beach, in an autogyro, staged a dog fight. Army and National Guard flyers contributed to the program. The parachute jump, always a spectacular stunt, was omitted because of the high wind. George Jamieson was master of ceremonies, announcing the program over the public address system.

The plane has a wing spread of 74 feet. It is powered with two 550 horse-power motors and has a high speed of three miles a minute and a cruising speed of 165 miles per hour. It is constructed of practically all dural, which is reputed as strong as steel and light as aluminum. Its gross weight is seven tons. The ship lands with a full load at 38 miles per hour, and can climb 8000 feet in 10 minutes, with ceiling of 20,000 feet, fully loaded.

Nation-Wide Flight

The imposing ship, low winged type, bullet shaped, is being flown on the Nationwide demonstration by pilot Warren D. Williams, styled in the world of aviation as the "million mile pilot," one of seven in the country. His co-pilot is Harold H. Neff. Miss Rosalie Gimpal is stewardess.

Newspapermen were among the first to fly in the ship. There were given an extended ride along the North Shore as far as Beverly and were warm in their praise of the air riding qualities of the big ship. The noise of the motors is reduced to a minimum in the cabin.

During the afternoon, for probably two hours or so, the plane carried guests on sightseeing tours. Mayor Curley and Brig. Gen. Agnew were loudly in their praise of the flying comfort and stability of the ship. In the air, in all the excitement, the city was forgotten.

SCHOOL CADETS WILL PARADE NEXT FRIDAY

Col Ranlett to Be Absent First Time in Years

The annual street parade of the Boston School Cadets will be held Friday, with Col Charles A. Ranlett, for many years chief of staff and in military command, missing for the first time. Col Ranlett has retired from the school service and Col George S. Penney, instructor of military drill at the Public Latin School, assumes that position in the parade.

The route will be the same as that of last year. The only difference this year is that the parade will start at 9:30 instead of at 9:10 as previously.

Present plans call for review by the Mayor at the reviewing stand on Tremont st., opposite West; by the Governor at the State House, by the School Committee and superintendent of schools on Boston Common, and by the military instructors and the cadet division and brigade commanders at Copley sq.

The route: Clarendon st, Stuart st, Columbus av, Park av, Boylston st, Tremont st, Park st, Beacon st, entering Boston Common by the gate at the corner of Beacon and Charles st; and leaving the Common by the gate on Charles st, to Charles st, Beacon st, Arlington st, Marlboro st, Dartmouth st, Copley sq, to the electric cars on Huntington av.

Frederick J. O'Brien, associate director of physical education, is in general charge of arrangements.

MAYOR CURLEY WILL ADDRESS PSYCHIATRISTS

Psychiatrists, gathered in Boston from all parts of the United States, Canada and England for the 89th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association, will be addressed by Mayor Curley this morning when the formal sessions open at the Hotel Statler. Fully 50 attended yesterday's preliminary meetings.

CURLEY LOSES IN DEATH RACE

While Mayor Curley was hurrying to his bedside, Francis J. Brennan, 57, long prominent in politics and business, died yesterday at his Lochstead ave., Jamaica Plain, home. The Mayor, a close friend of years, hastily left a city meeting and an address to hasten to Brennan's home, but arrived too late. Brennan was street commissioner in 1916 and 1917, and member of the Common Council in 1908 and 1909. He was general manager of the Timothy Smith Co., of Roxbury, for many years.

He had retired on an annuity after the death of Timothy Smith and had been in ill health for two years and confined to his bed for the last two weeks.

He will be buried from Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain, Wednesday, Mayor Curley and other city officials will be active pallbearers.
Col Penney to Act as Chief of Staff For First Time

17,000 to Be in Line of March

With Col George S. Penney as chief of staff and in military command for the first time, the annual street parade of the Boston School Cadets will get under way tomorrow morning at 9:30.

Col Penney, who is instructor of military drill at the Public Latin School, takes the place of Col Charles A. Ranlett, who has retired from the school service. He held that post for many years. Col Ranlett, however, will review the cadets on the Common with the School Committee.

The parade will form in the streets around the English High School by brigades, in streets lying between Columbus av, West Canton st, Tremont and Berkeley sts. There will be approximately 17,000 in the line of march.

The route will be Clarendon at, Stuart at, Columbus av, Park sq, Boylston st, Tremont st, Park st, Beacon st, entering Boston Common by gate on Beacon and Charles sts. Leaving the Common by gate on Charles st, Charles at, Beacon st, Arlington st, Marlboro at, Dartmouth st, Copley sq, to electric cars on Huntington av.

The cadets will be reviewed on Tremont st by the Mayor, at the State House by the Governor, on the Common by the School Committee and its officers, and at Copley sq by the military instructors and brigade commanders.

William L. Maguire of the Jamaica Plain High School will be acting major general for the day. Acting brigadier generals will be John F. Burke, Brighton High School; George M. Sacco, East Boston High School; Thomas E. O'Rourke, South Boston High School; Chester Woish, Hyde Park High School, and Richard J. Cass, High School of Commerce.

The order of regiments in line will be English High, Public Latin, Dorchester High, Charlestown High, Jamaica Plain High, Brighton High, East Boston High, South Boston High, Hyde Park High, High School of Commerce, Boston Trade School, Mechanic Arts High and Roxbury Memorial High School. Three intermediate school cadet regiments will follow.

The winners of the prizes for marching will be announced after the parade.

BOSTON SCHOOL CADETS PARADE TOMORROW

31,691 Names on City Welfare List

One of every six families in Boston is receiving aid from the city of Boston Department of Public Welfare, according to a study by the Boston Council of Social Agencies, 43 Tremont st. Of 79,189 families in the city, 38,938 are receiving city aid and 27,250 are on the relief lists of the three larger private agencies, the Family Welfare Society, Boston Provident Association, and the Jewish Welfare Association.

Relief figures in the South End are the highest with more than two of every five families receiving public aid. Other neighborhoods in which the percentage of relief is high are the North End, East Boston, West End, Charlestown and South Boston, varying from 34 to 22 percent of the area's total number of families. In the Back Bay and West Roxbury less than five percent are on relief lists.

Of the 38,938 families aided by the city more than 50 percent are receiving straight unemployment relief. Recipients of dependent aid totaled 8653, old age assistance 3324, and mothers' aid 1091.

According to an official of the Public Welfare Department today, there are at present 31,691 names on the city welfare list. This is a decrease of 711 from the peak figures of the year, 32,402, which was reached during the week ending April 15. A year ago the figure was 28,985, while on the closing week of 1932 it stood at 28,966.

MAPS FOR MRS. CURLEY

Friends of Mayor Curley and his family will pay tribute to the memory of Mrs. Mary E. Curley at a memorial mass in Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain, at 8 a.m. on June 12.
Justice for Disabled Vets Sure, Says Mayor

Mayor Orator at Kearsarge
Exercises on Common

Pacifism, "which would leave the nation defenceless against the warlike nations of the world," was condemned by Mayor Curley in an address at memorial services conducted by the Kearsarge Association of Naval Veterans at the Soldiers and Sailors monument on Boston Common yesterday morning. Rain fell as wreaths were laid at the monument by Miss Agnes E. Barry, secretary of the association, who represented the Daughters of Union Veterans; Miss Agnes Maquire, who represented the association auxiliary in the absence of Miss Maria Bateman, the president, and Arthur Elliott, who represented Navy post, American Legion.

David King, 91, senior vice-commander of the Massachusetts department, G. A. R., and commander of the Kearsarge Association, declared that "there is plenty of work for the present generation in instilling patriotism in the younger ones and urging them to honor the flag and the constitution." Prayers were read by Chaplain James Bradley, David Maraspin, senior vice-commander of the association, responded for the organization.

Fully 800 attended the exercises, the 46th held at the monument. A detail from the Boston navy yard fired three volleys, followed by taps. John Lynch, junior vice-commander of the association, placed the wreaths on the monument. The navy yard band played selections during the exercises.

CURLEY LAUDS ROOSEVELT

Mayor Curley placed the necessity for national economy on the shoulders of "men in high places, both public and private, whose sense of patriotism was submerged by their greed, graft and corruption in recent years.

"But the adoption of the proposed economy act which would prove both burdensome and an injustice to the defenders of the nation in the hour of crisis and their dependents was immediately corrected by President Roosevelt—a living hero, who did not hesitate to challenge both criticism and contumely in performing a most courageous act of justice."

DR EARL TELLS ENGLISH METHOD OF DEALING WITH MENTAL CASES

Mayor Curley and Dr May Among Speakers to American Psychiatric Association at Opening of 89th Annual Meeting Here

The diminishing of insanity can be achieved by generous and wise spending of money, Just as diphtheria, typhoid fever and the bubonic plague were diminished, Mayor James M. Curley said yesterday at the formal opening of the 89th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association at the Hotel Statler.

"Whether insanity is curable is a matter of money, in my opinion," the Mayor said. "I believe it can be licked with money, just as diphtheria was."

"Services rendered are equivalent to salaries paid. Starvation wages are of no good. Some years ago, when the wages were low in our public hospitals and institutions, the mortality rate was high. Then we raised the pay of orderlies, interns and nurses, and almost over night the mortality rate dropped."

"In the treatment of the mentally diseased, courtesy and kindness must be used as the extra attention, so to speak, is usually not present when funds are small, salaries low, and equipment inadequate. The combating of disease is an economic problem.

English Methods

Dr Charles J. C. Earl of the Caterham Mental Hospital, Surrey, Eng., in an interview, discussed the contrasting American and English methods of dealing with mentally debilitated. At Caterham most of the patients are young boys, and considerable freedom is given them.

"We tell them that if they wish to escape to do so on a fine day, after tea. The chances will be much better. It will be dark, and they will have had something to eat, and there will be no need of their wandering aimlessly about in the dark on the fog.

"We impress on them, of course, that if they do escape, they can never return to Caterham. We have little trouble. Because, Caterham is a pleasant place, more attractive than their own homes, for the most part, there is nothing for them to escape from."

Allowed to Go Home

"So, there is nothing done to prevent their escape. They are allowed to go home for weekends and the only ones who let us down are those who miss the last train on Sunday night. However, a great many people who are not daily ones who miss the last train on Sunday night, so that is not particularly alarming."

"The only danger from so much freedom is that they might be knocked down by a bus. But that has happened only once at Caterham. And then, the boy was walking across the road at night in the fog. His accident was hardly due to mental deficiency."

"In England there are opportunities for the people of low grade intelligence which are not present in America. I suppose Americans would never think of employing them as house servants. Yet we pay a number of the people who are capable of washing dishes, doing housework and gardening."

"We try to take these occupations at Caterham, pay them with a small amount of pocket money which they save for the train fares home. They know, generally, that if they don't save the money they can't go home. They are given definite responsibilities and assurance."

"The notion that the mentally deficient are raging lions is absurd. After all, they are quite harmless."
Foley Raps Higher Ups in Memorial Address

A rap at the “higher-ups” in Washington and throughout the nation whose names are contained on the J. P. Morgan “gift list” was made yesterday by District Attorney William J. Foley before a crowd of several hundred gathered in Old Calvary cemetery to pay tribute to the soldier dead.

All day long visitors stopped to view the Curley family plot, which was beautifully decorated. Impressive because of its simplicity was the tribute paid to the Rev. Father John F. Cummins, late pastor of the Sacred Heart Church in Roslindale, who died 15 years ago Monday from wounds received at Flirey in the Toul sector of France.

As an orator in Dorchester reached his climax, one of the two civil war veterans who sat on the platform, raised a trembling finger and beckoned to his son, himself an elderly man. “I am very tired,” he said. “Don’t you think we could go home?” And in almost every instance the courtesy and exercises continued long after the aged civil war veterans had retired from the scene of the ceremonies.

It was not only that for the first time no civil war veteran even attempted to march in the parades that were common over the state. It was not only that their numbers were markedly depleted from those present even a year ago. But, moreover, those who were young so short a time ago as 1918 now had streaks of gray in hair that a year ago was black. Legion uniforms fit a bit more snugly, in some instances almost uncomfortably so, and it was with a start that one noticed that the belle of 1918 was now a middle-aged woman.

Exercises at Monument

The white-haired veterans, too old to march, dim of eye and wavering of movement, also had places of honor upon platforms from which orators in glowing oratory described the deeds of the old men when young. The old men sat and dozed—they tired quickly for all their effort not to—and seemed scarcely conscious of that which went on before them. They heard oratorical roars concerning Gettysburg and the Battle of the Wilderness, Lookout Mountain and Vicksburg, but if the eloquence brought a flash of reality to the past, the old men gave no sign of it.

For all the dreary grayness of yesterday, the exercises were not without their color. There was the khaki of the national guard, the blue and orange of the legion, the blue and white of the navy. There was the blare of bugles, the rattle of musketry, the clank of sabers. There were the volleys of the firing squads but for all the hustle and movement the day’s dominant note was one of poignancy.
CITY TAKES Intown Approach to
Provided For

To provide a $3,000,000 downtown approach to the East-Boston traffic tunnel authorized by the 1932 Legislature, Mayor Curley last night announced the public taking of 39 parcels of real estate for the widening of Haymarket square to a diameter of 200 feet, and the widening of Merrimac and Cross streets to 80 feet from Chardon street to Hanover.

DAMAGES OF $1 FOR EACH

Although the assessed valuation of the real estate in the hands of private owners exceeded $2,000,000, the Boston Transit Commission, headed by Colonel Charles W. Whittier, awarded damages of only $1 for each parcel, forcing the owners to appeal to the courts or to make satisfactory settlements out of court with the city.

Investigation by the Finance Commission at the demand of the City Council disclosed that but one parcel of property in the affected area had changed ownership in the last eight years, despite the charges of Council members that politicians and state legislators had been active in that territory in anticipation of the widening.

Fin. Com. Influences Action

The single parcel which owners of the City Scales, and Hotel Blackstone, at Blackstone and Cross streets, will be most of the triangle bounded by Merri- mac, Friend and Sudbury streets.

List of Properties Taken

To make way for the Haymarket square traffic circle, which will measure 200 feet in diameter, the Traffic Commission will have 39 parcels of land under its control: 116 Portland at., $300,000; 91-95 Salem at., $31,000; 13-15 Portland at., $80,000; 530-532 Columbus av, Park sq, Boylston st, Tremont st, Park at, Beacon st, entering Boston Common by gate at Beacon and Stuart st.; Leaving the Common by gate on Charles st, at Charles st, Beaconsfield, at Arlington st, Mariboro st, Dartmouth st, Copley sq, to electric cars on Huntington ave.

The cadets will be reviewed by Mayor Curley on Tremont st, by Gov. Elly at the State House by Col Charles A. Radleif, for many years military instructor in the schools, recently retired, on the Common, and by the present military instructors and brigade officers in Copley sq.

Col George S. Penny, military instructor, for the Latin School, London, will be acting major general for the day. Acting brigadier general will be John F. Burke, Brighton High School; George M. Sacco, the City of Boston High School; Thomas E. O’Rourke, South Boston High School; Chas. W. Welsh, grade 12, Public Latin School, and Richard J. Cass, High School of Commerce.

All bus and street car service in the park Bay will be either suspended or diverted while the parade occupies the streets in that valley. Most of the streets in the Columbus-av and Charles-st district will be temporarily discontinued.

NOISE NUISANCE BUREAU

Also Announces Appointment of Unpaid Advisory Board

Approval was given yesterday by Mayor Curley to the establishment of a noise nuisance bureau in the sanitary division of the health department. He also announced the appointment of an unpaid advisory board on the suppression of noises consisting of Dr. Henry A. Christian, former dean of Harvard medical school and physician-in-chief at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital; Tomaszello, engineer and chairman of board of appeal; Thomas J. Donnellon, retired secretary after years of service as deputy health commissioner in charge of the sanitary division; Ernest A. Johnson, secretary of the building trades council and Miss Mary A. Barre of the planning board.

The advisory board will primarily

Approach to Be 80 Feet Wide

Chairman Sullivan replied that the commission would return to its previous policy of making a nominal award of $1 in future takings, leaving the owners to go before juries to collect land damages. This failed to satisfy the Finance Commission, which insisted that many of the owners would not want to wait for so little time to reach their cases in the civil courts, but would prefer to collect their money immediately by agreeing to equitable settlements with the city.

Commenting on the route selected for the widening, Colonel Sullivan stated that it was substantially the course ordered by the Legislature in authorizing the $5,000,000 which the city to spend. The $5,000,000 which must be paid later by motorists in the form of tunnel tolls, except that the approach was made only 80 feet wide, instead of the 90-foot limit permitted by the Legislature.

In approving the layout, the Mayor directed the Transit Commission to care for the buildings as soon as possible so that the necessary underground construction work, consisting of the installation of a pedestrian underpass beneath the widened Haymarket square may be completed before cold weather sets in at the end of the year.

The Merrimac street widening will wipe out the four-story brick flatiron building bounded by the old hotel Blackstone, at Blackstone and Cross streets.

In five out of the 39 parcels, the city will take only part of the lots, leaving the remainder for the present owners. The properties taken by the city, together with their owners’ assessed valuations, are as follows:

3 MAYORS PROPOSE ROAD PLAN TO ELY

Street Would Run to Chelsea From Charlestown

The utilization of state highway funds to create an 80-foot street from the Little Mystic river, Charlestown, to the junction of Park street and Central avenue, Chelsea, embracing two bridges over the Mystic rivers was jointly proposed to Gov. Ely yesterday by Mayors Curley of Boston, Quigley of Chelsea and Casassa of Revere. They pointed to the allocation of an expected $2,000,000 in federal highway aid funds to Massachusetts.

At the Governor's request Public Works Commissioner Rourke of Boston will prepare plans for study by the Governor and the public works commissioner.

In endorsing the plan, Mayor Curley told the Governor Chelsea and Revere were without funds to contribute to the cost of a new bridge and that there was justification for the argument that the state should take over this particularly busy thoroughfare.

Boston, the mayor said, had widened Chelsea street to 80 feet as far as the Little Mystic river, and he believed that outside the cost of new bridges and land-takings as far as the junction of Chelsea and Park streets, Chelsea, would not be very great.

17,000 SCHOOL CADETS MARCH IN HUB TODAY

Boston's school cadets, numbering approximately 17,000 boys, will swing through Back Bay and downtown streets this forenoon in the annual street parade of the high school battalions.

Col. George S. Penney, instructor in military drill at Boston Latin school, will be chief of staff. William L. Maguire of Jamaica Plain high school will be acting major general for the day.

The parade will form in the vicinity of English high school in streets lying between Columbus avenue, West Canton street, Tremont and Berkeley streets. It will start at 9:30 A.M.

The route will be: Clarendon street, Stuart street, Columbus avenue, Park square, Boylston street, Tremont street, Park street, Beacon street, entering Boston Common by the gate at Beacon and Charles streets. Leaving the same gate after review on the Common the cadets will march from Charles street to Beacon street, Arlington street, Marlboro street, Dartmouth street and Copley square where the parade will disband.

REPORT CURLEY FOR MUSCLE SHOALS JOB

No Confirmation of His Choice as Chairman

WASHINGTON, June 1—There is a revival of the rumor in Washington that Mayor James M. Curley is to receive an important Federal appointment. It was said today that he is under consideration to head the Muscle Shoals Commission which will have direction of that great project and the Tennessee River development.

There was no confirmation of this report. When Mayor Curley declined appointment as Ambassador to Poland he issued a statement in effect that his first duty was to the city of Boston, which carried the implication that he intended to complete his term as Mayor.

Mayor Curley may be slated for the Muscle Shoals post now or at a later date. Administration leaders in Washington have repeatedly stated that the services of the Boston Mayor in the primary and national campaigns will be adequately recognized.

Mayor Attends Brennan Rites

Service at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Jamaica Plain

City and county officials filled Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain, yesterday to pay final tribute to Francis J. Brennan, political figure in Boston for 30 years, and a close friend and adviser of Mayor Curley, who died following an illness of a year.

The solemn high mass was celebrated by the Rev. James F. Kelly. The Rev. James F. Dowling was deacon, and the Rev. William R. O'Connor, sub-deacon. The organist was Miss Helen Dolan.

Mr. Brennan, who had held the positions of street commissioner and election commissioner and secretary to Mayor Curley, lived at Lockstead Avenue, Jamaica Plain.

The bearers were Mayor Curley, Paul G. Curley, son of the mayor; Edmund Dolan, city treasurer; Joseph A. Rourke, Capt. Edward J. Fallon and Dr. Martin J. English.

The ushers were Theodore Glynn, chairman of the street commissioner; William Reilly, chairman of the school commission; Maurice J. Tobin and Cornelius Reardon of the school commission; William O'Hare, penal institutions commissioner; Philip A. Chapman, superintendent of supplies for Boston; Peter Tague, chairman of the election commission; Joseph Maney and Walter Quinn.

A large delegation from the Tammany Club, headed by its president, Aast.-Dist.-Atty. Daniel J. Gillen, attended. This club was started by Mayor Curley 30 years ago. It was there that the mayor became acquainted with Mr. Brennan.

Others who attended included members of the city council. Fire Commissioner McLaughlin, Dist.-Atty. Foley, Sheriff Kelliher and Collector McMor- row.

Burial was at Calvary cemetery, Mat- tapan, where prayers were read by Fr. Kelly.

Hyde Park Wins First Place in Cadets’ Parade

17,000 Youths Reviewed by Mayor and Governor in Two-Hour Procession

By George Mason

For the second consecutive year Hyde Park High School’s cadet corps was awarded first place by the Army officer judges at the conclusion of the annual parade today of the 17,000 cadets of Boston’s public schools. Smartness of appearance was given as the decisive factor in the judges’ decision.

Second honors went to Jamaica Plain High, which was second in last year’s contest. The band was conducted by Mr. William L. Maguire, who was serving today as acting major general of the 26th Division, M. G., who is military instructor of the English High School, raised his hand at the junction of Columbia avenue and Clarendon streets and the long ranks moved with smart military manner into the start of the route.

Among the Army and National Guard officers, the general opinion was that the style of marching by the cadets today was the best since the annual parade was started in 1919. Many yards in front of Colonel Penny rode Sergeant Edward B. Kane of the Boston Police Department, who served as an escort. Colonel Penny was mounted on his pet horse, “Broker,” who went over the schoolboy parade route for the fourteenth time today. “Broker” is seventeen years old. Crowds gathered along Boylston and Tremont streets long before the first regiment swung into view from Park square. At the head of the schoolboy corps was the Jamaica Plain High School, who was serving today as acting major general of the 26th Division, M. G., and his own regiment Maguire is a colonel. With a perfect marching day by the military men who watched the line of march, the ranks of youthful cadets were interspersed with 15 band units, 16 drum and bugle corps and two fife and drum corps.

Mayor Curley hopes for a Noiseless City

Mayor Curley has given his approval to a suggestion that there be established in the Health Department a Noise Nuisance Bureau to receive complaints against unnecessary noises and devise means of suppressing them.

The bureau will be under the charge of the sanitary division and Health Commissioner Mahoney will designate an employee to take charge. The bureau will function without extra cost. Its creation is the result of recommendations of a group appointed by the mayor in September, 1931, upon nomination of the various medical organizations, civic and professional groups and others having a direct interest in the problem of noise abatement. They were in co-operation with the City Planning Board.

The Charles street side of Boston Common, the route was selected as the best since the annual parade was started in 1919. Many yards in front of Colonel Penny rode Sergeant Edward B. Kane of the Boston Police Department, who served as an escort. Thousands of spectators lined the downtown streets as the last company passed the school committee’s reviewing stand on Tremont street.

Mayor’s Son a Private

Somewhere in the ranks of the Boston Latin School was George Curley, son of the mayor, who is a private in the B. L. S. regiment. Theodore A. Glynn, Jr., son of the street commissioner, passed before his father on the mayor’s stand, commanding a battalion of his schoolmates as a part of the Roxbury Memorial High school.

A large crowd greeted the cadets at the State House, where Governor Ely stood solemnly facing the small company with his military aide to observe the parade. Proud mothers and fathers waved frantically to their sons from obscure positions along the streets. Some cheered, some smiled and waved flags. Scores of little tots were parked in baby carriages along the parade and hundreds of youngsters sat, with eager eyes sparkling, on the curbs.

More than 300 policemen were in charge of the crowds and traffic during the parade today. They were under the command of Captain William L. Livingston of the Warren avenue station. The traffic signals lights in the downtown area were shut off during the hours of the parade and motor traffic was routed around the line of march. By 12:30 o’clock the motor traffic was proceeding through the district normally and the Boston Elevated service was resumed. Earlier in the morning the Huntington avenue cars from Jamaica Plain and Brookline were routed along Massachusetts avenue to Massachusetts station, where the commuters were transferred to subway trains.

Takes Parcels for Cross St. Widening

City Starts on Long-Delayed Approach to New Traffic Tunnel

After months of delay which has affected the impression that the final step in the East Boston traffic tunnel improvement program will be delayed, the city has taken the necessary property, to provide a $3,000,000 northern approach to the North End portal under an act authorized by the Legislature of last year, which involves the widening of Haymarket square and the widening of Merrimac and Cross streets to 50 feet.

The route is substantially that ordered by the Legislature, except that the approach was made 89 feet instead of 99. In all, thirty-nine parcels of real estate have been taken by the Transit Department. In total, 300 policemen were on duty.

The property taken exceeds $2,000,000 in assessed valuation and the city has awarded damages of only $1 for each parcel, this policy forcing the owners to appeal to the courts or to make satisfactory settlements out of court with the city.

The decision of the Transit Commission results from dissatisfaction expressed by the Finance Commission against awards of 10 per cent above assessed valuation and the city has taken the necessary property.

The policy does not satisfy Franklin A. Goodwin and his associates who declare that many of the property owners will not want to wait two or three years for settlement in the courts.

The new approach may be substantially completed before Mayor leaves office. It is his desire that the buildings be razed as soon as possible so that the necessary underground construction work may be completed in the autumn.

The Merrimac street widening will cause the destruction of the four-story brick office building bounded by Portland, Merrimac and Market streets and will clear away most of the triangle bounded by Merrimac and Sudbury streets. In Haymarket square a group of buildings at Merrimac and Canal streets, including the City Square will be decreased.

16,000 School Cadets

ROUTE OF SCHOOL CADETS' PARADE

The downtown section of the city will resound with blaring bands and martial music this morning when the Boston school cadets march by for their annual review on Boston Common.

16,000 IN LINE

Thousands of proud fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers will line the streets to give the youngsters a great big hand as they swing smartly by in military formation to the music of 15 bands, 16 drum and bugle corps and two fife and drum corps. It is the biggest and most popular spectacle that the school department puts on all year. Approximately 16,000 boys will be in line when the parade starts at 9:30 a.m. at the English High School.

The route of the parade will be as follows: Clarendon street, Stuart street, Columbus avenue, Park square, Boylston street, Tremont street, Park street, Beacon street, entering Boston Common by gate at Beacon and Charles streets. Leaving Common by gate on Charles street, Charles street, Beacon street, Arlington street, Marlborough street, Dartmouth street, Copley square, to electric cars on Huntington avenue.

The honor of leading the cadets on this biggest day of the year will go to Colonel George S. Penney, senior in-structor in military drill, as his chief of staff.

Roster of Parade

The roster of the parade will be as follows:

1—Division commander, acting Major-General William L. Macnaughton, Jamaica Plain High School, and staff.
2—First Brigade commander, acting Brigadier-General John F. Burke, Brighton High School, and staff.
3—First Cadet Regiment, English High School.
4—Second Cadet Regiment, English High School.

May Returns on 1932 Levy
Beat Last Year's

Cash has been flowing into the city treasury during the past month from Boston taxpayers, according to statistics presented last night to Mayor Curley by City Collector William M. McMorrough, who reported that the May collections were $903,886.82 as against $767,253.27 for May, 1932. This means that of $461,642.55 in 1932 taxes, Boston has collected $12,602,454, leaving only 18.349 ¢ cent outstanding.

The parade will be reviewed by Governor Ely at the State House, by Mayor Curley at the reviewing stand on Tremont street opposite Keith's Theatre, and by the school committee and Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of schools, on Boston Common. The review on the Common is set for 9:30 a.m. The military instructors and the cadet division and brigade commanders will review the parade from the steps of the Public Library in Copley square following the review and drill on the Common.

Nathaniel J. Young, director of physical education, and Frederick J. O'Brien, associate director, are in general charge of the parade and review.
A colorful throng of 150,000, the largest ever to witness a schoolboy parade in this city, jammed the streets of downtown Boston and the Back Bay today and cheered enthusiastically an army of 17,000 khaki-clad schoolboys as they marched along to the tune of martial music furnished by more than 30 school bands.

MULTI-COLORED ENSEMBLES

Mothers, fathers, pretty co-eds and friends, smiling, cheering and waving, and dressed in summer fashions that dazzled the eye in their multi-colored ensembles, furnished a setting which has seldom been equalled in any of the city's larger demonstrations. As usual in this annual pageant, the co-ed predominated and her enthusiasm was noticeable. Street vendors did a rushing business and balloons and pennants added to the color.

The parade, with Col. George S. Fenney as chief of staff and in military command for the first time, got away exactly at 9:30 from its starting place in front of the English high school on Warren avenue and began to wend its way through crowded thoroughfares. The parade took two hours to pass a given point.

Dignitaries of the state and city and officials of the army and the Boston school committee reviewed the parade. Gov. Ely remained standing under a blue silk canopy on the steps of the State House for two hours and saluted each company as it passed in review. He was accompanied by his staff and a few friends.

Mayor Charles Street Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, City Messenger Edward Leary and other municipal officials occupied a reviewing stand on Tremont street in front of the Keith Memorial Theatre.

The mayor was detained at City Hall and unfortunately the Latin school company, with which his son George was parading today, had passed in review before his father arrived. Teddy Glynn, however, whose son is a major at the Roxbury Memorial, had the pleasure of seeing his son, Teddy, Jr., lead his brigade by the reviewing stand. "Eyes left," was the command at this point, as a salute to the dignitaries, and in return those in stand doffed their hats in acknowledgement.

All along the line of march, which was over a two-mile route, crowds of three and four deep were standing, but the thoroughfares in which furnished a big noise were Boylston, Tremont, Park and Beacon streets, where in addition to the crowds on the streets, employes in office buildings sent down a veritable storm of confetti.

"I'VE got no News,"

Curley Replies on Latest Report of Federal Job

Newsboys were blatant on School street at the luncheon hour shouting "Curley for Shoals Job." The mayor sat at the big table in the center of his office talking to the press.

"What's that you are shouting?" he inquired as he caught his name and inclined his ear to the window.

The headline was repeated at the table. The mayor's tone was slightly flushed. "Oh, I had seen that," he remarked. "Look's as though they were still making a goat of me," was his rejoinder when inquiry was made if he had anything to say.

Then with more serious face, he continued: "No, I haven't heard a word—not a single word; and that's all I can say about that.

The report in question merely stated that there had been a revival of a rumor in Washington that the mayor is to receive an important Federal appointment and that it was said that he was under consideration to head the Muscle Shoals Commission.

Previous rumors had him slated as chairman or member of the commission having charge of the Tennessee River project, the chairmanship of which was given to the president of Antioch College.

Big Parade Planned for Bunker Hill Day

More Than 6000 Expected to March in Military Parade

More than 6000 representatives of the Army, Navy, Marines, veterans, fraternal and civic organizations are expected to take part in the Bunker Hill Day parade in Charlestown, according to the announcement of Maj. Marshall Joseph F. McLaughlin.

The first division will include the Navy Band and a detachment of marines, a detachment from the U. S. S. Raleigh, the only ship that will be at the Navy Yard at the time, Regular Army and National Guard detachments.

The second division, commanded by Mayor William H. Wilson, with William Ryberg as adjutant, will be led by the staff of the Department of Massachusetts Veterans of Foreign Wars, followed by the massed colors of "V. F. W. posts, and units of the Grand Army, United Spanish War Veterans, American Legion and Disabled American Veterans.

Daniel Foley will be marshal of the third division and William J. Francis, adjutant. This will include the Fire Department and members of the Boston Fire Department in command of Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, the Charlestown Veteran Firemen, commanded by Philip Tague, and other detachments.

The parade will start at 2 P. M. at the corner of Pearl and Bunker Hill streets and proceed over Bunker Hill street to Main, thence to Gardner, to Seaver, to Rutherford avenue, to Mission street, to Main, color south to Harvard street, to City square, to Chelsea street, to Bunker Hill street, to Elm, thence east, south and west sides, to Monument avenue, to Warren street, thence north, to Winthrop street, where it will be reviewed by the chief marshal and staff, to Adams street, where it will be disbanded.

Chief Marshal McLaughlin is one of the best known veterans in Charlestown. He saw service on the Mexican border and when the United States entered the World War, he was sent to Fort Oelthorpe, Ga., as sergeant instructor, detached to the Regular Army until the division was ready to sail for France. He served with the 103rd Ambulance Company in France and was cited in general orders by General Clarence R. Edwards for marked gallantry and meritorious service. He was the recipient of a silver medal from the War Department for services under fire.

Curley Planning Trip to Europe

Though his plans have been uncertain, Mayor Curley has confided to friends that he expects to sail for Europe on June 15, with a month's vacation. He will be accompanied by his daughter Mary and possibly two other children. The exact itinerary has not been perfected, but it will include a visit to Italy. There is a possibility that the mayor will land in England and tour the Low Countries before going south.

Property Assessed for
$2,431,400 Affected in Haymarket Square Deal

FINANCE PROJECT

Thirty-nine parcels of property of an aggregate assessed valuation in 1932 of $2,431,400, between Chardon and Merrimack streets, West end, and Hanover and Cross streets, North end, have been taken by the transit commission for the construction of another 80-foot avenue of approach to the portal of the East Boston traffic tunnel and the creation of a traffic circle in Haymarket square.

In each instance an award of $1 has been made to the owner of record, a decision of the transit commission approved by Mayor Curley, which is certain to be vigorously criticised by the finance commission.

Legislative authorization has provided a bond issue of $3,000,000 to meet the cost of the project. In spite of a report that an appeal is contemplated to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan the requisite funds, Mayor Curley declared without reservation yesterday that the financing will be done by the traffic tunnel bonds.

Investigation of the 사백 of record specified in the paper filed Wednesday in the Suffolk county registry of deeds in conformance with state law pertaining to the taking of property by right of eminent domain has indicated that real estate speculators, other than two groups which made investments several years ago, will not reap any harvest from the widening project.

Abraham Lipp of Brookline and his associates and William R. Schell are said to be the only speculators who are involved. Schell is credited with owning property at 144-146 Friend street, listed in the name of Elizabeth C. Hyde, and assessed for $21,600, and Lipp is interested in two parcels with Frances E. O'Brien as the owner of record.

The assessment on the property at 19-21 Merrimack street and 20-22 Canal street is $165,000, while the valuation on the old Hotel Blackstone, at Cross and Blackstone streets, is $170,000. Both of these properties were acquired when a circumferential highway was proposed some years ago, and the abandonment of the plan left speculators who had purchased options on various properties about Haymarket square temporary losers. Most of these lost their options and permitted the owners of record to retain their holdings.

The policy of awarding each owner $1 is a return to the practice of the transit commission prior to the land takings for the East Boston traffic tunnel.

Under the procedure every owner can either deal directly with the transit commission or force a judicial determination of the value of the property. It is expected that numerous awards will be made within the next three weeks which will be satisfactory to owners.

Although the total valuation of the property involved is $2,431,400, only part of five buildings, including the $190,000 holding of the Bowdoin estate trust at 116 Portland street, will be taken. As no determination of the damages which will be paid in these instances is possible, no estimate of the probable total payments for land and buildings can be made.

Work on the project is intended to be started as quickly as bonds can be disposed of. The job is expected to be completed before the end of the year.

The plan filed at the registry of deeds by the transit commission shows no changes from the tentative plan submitted to the Legislature in 1932 when the project, finally fastened to the $16,000,000 East Boston tunnel, was authorized after long and bitter controversy.

It is held to be a forerunner of the widening of Chardon street, which has been twice rejected by the Legislature. Such an addition would provide a wide thoroughfare from Bowdoin square to the tunnel portal.

The existing plan provides an 80-foot roadway, beginning at Chardon and Merrimack streets, where property on the northerly side of Merrimack street has been marked for destruction. By wiping out buildings between Merrimack street and Market street and obliteratoring this thoroughfare which runs only a few feet connecting Portland and Merrimack streets and a square will be created from which access to Canal street via Traverse street will be made easy.

The widening plan calls for the destruction of buildings on Friend street south of Merrimack street, including the old fire station where ladder 1 is located, and the conversion into the Haymarket square traffic circle, which will have a diameter of 200 feet, of buildings abutting the square on Merrimack, Canal, Cross and Blackstone streets.

Curley Family

MAY GO TO EUROPE

Mayor Undecided on Sailing June 15

Mayor James M. Curley and family may sail for Europe this month. The Mayor is President of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Jamaica Plain, with a large number of clergy, which will sail from New York June 15 on the Italian Line craft Conte di Savoia, and it is possible the Curley family will travel on the same vessel.

Today, Mayor Curley said that he had not definitely decided to sail on the 15th, but would like to accompany a pilgrimage to Rome this year, and the Mayor and family have decided to take the trip, it is his intention to visit other European countries.

American Curley Unaware of Muscle Shoals Job

Mayor Curley has no knowledge of a job in Muscle Shoals, or elsewhere in the federal service, he stated this afternoon.

"I haven't heard anything about such plans," he said.

SCHOOL PARADE TIES BACK BAY TRAFFIC

City to Finance Tunnel Plan Development by Bond Issue

Governor Ely to March with Ancients

More than 200 superior officers and patrolmen have been detailed to handle crowds that gather to see the parade and drumhead election and review Monday of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. It was announced last night at police headquarters.

With Governor Ely as one of the marchers the parade will form on South Market street, and proceed through Commercial, State, Washington, School, Tremont and Park streets to the State House.

The parade will be reviewed at City Hall by Mayor Curley and at the State House by Governor Ely.

Following a reception to Governor Ely at the State House the parade will proceed along Beacon street, Arlington and Houston streets to the New Old South Church.

Following exercises at the church, they will again form and march through Beacon and Charles streets to the Common where the review and election will be held.

Dedicate Traffic Circle to James E. Murray

A special feature of the 54th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murray of 86 Hastings street, West Roxbury, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock will be the dedication by Mayor Curley of the traffic circle at Centre street and the Arborway in memory of their son, Lieutenant James Murray of D Company, 101st Infantry, who died three years ago.

Following his return from France, where he received the Croix de Guerre and two citations for bravery, Lieutenant Murray was appointed a captain and was one of the charter members of the Michael J. O'Connell, Poet, A. L. Curley and Children to Visit in Italy

Mayor to Be Accompanied by Jamaica Plain Priest

Unless his plans are changed, Mayor Curley will accompany his children and the Rev. Fr. James F. Kelly, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain, on a vacation trip to Italy.

This clergyman and the Curley children will sail from New York June 15 on the Italian steamer Conte di Savoia and the mayor expects to accompany them.

Disclosure of his plan in advance of an official announcement was made by political associates who were unaware they had been imparted confidential information. Yesterday the mayor confirmed the story in Thursday's Herald.

More than 17,000 high school cadets caused one of Boston's worst jams today, tying up hundreds of pleasure cars and commercial vehicles on Massachusetts ave. and other streets in that vicinity.

Autos were stalled all along Massachusetts ave. from Tremont st. to Harvard bridge.

No autos were permitted to use Tremont st., Columbus or Huntington ave., Boylston st., Beacon st., Commonwealth ave. or any of the other arteries on the downtown side of Massachusetts ave.

More than 100,000 people, including parents of many of the marching boys, cheered as they paraded in smart olive drab to the beat of military music.

The parade was led by English high school students through Clarendon st. to Stuart st., Columbus ave. and Park sq. Then around the Common via Boylston, Tremont and Park st., and up the Common at Beacon and Charles st.

Traffic all over the downtown section was affected by the march, which forced police to bar autos from some of the busiest streets for nearly three hours.

REVIEWED BY ELY, CURLEY.

The parade was led by Acting Maj.-Gen. William L. Maguire of Jamaica Plain high school, with Col. George G. Penney, senior instructor in military drill in the Boston schools, as chief of staff.

Mayor Curley and the city council reviewed the parade on Tremont st., near West st., Governor Ely and his staff reviewed them at the State House, and the school committee, Supt., Patrick T. Campbell and others were in a reviewing stand on the Common.

After reviewing the common, the parade marched through Charles st., Beacon st., Arlington st., Marlborough st. and Dartmouth st. to Copley sq., and no street cars awaiting him on Huntington ave.

Fire apparatus had to break through the parade at Park sq. and again on Charles st. on the way to a blaze.

Attracting much attention was John Ooter, four feet high, smallest parader, and one of the 3000 boys who made the English high delegation, the largest in the line of march. Carrying a special size gun.

Sale of traffic tunnel bonds will finance a big Haymarket square development authorized by the Legislature to cover the project, for which the city has taken 30 parcels of land of a total assessed value of $2,431,400 between Merrimac and Charlestown streets, West end, and Hanover and Cross streets.

A bond issue of $3,000,000 has been the cost of the project, in which an 80-foot avenue of approach to the portal of the East Boston traffic tunnel and the creation of a traffic circle in Haymarket square will be built.

To each of the land owners of record has been awarded $1, Mayor Curley having approved a decision by the transit commission to make such an award.

The finance commission, it is expected, will approve such action.

It is planned to start the work on the development as soon as bonds can be disposed of and it is hoped to finish the entire project by the end of the year.

Some regard the job as the forerunner of widening of Charter street, twice rejected by the Legislature.

An 80-foot roadway, beginning at Charter and Merrimac streets, is provided in the plans. By razing buildings between Merrimac and Charlestown streets and obliterating the thoroughfare which runs only a few feet connecting Portland and Merrimac streets, a square will be created from which access to Canal street via Traverse street will be made easy.

Razing of buildings on Friend street south of Merrimac street is provided. The Haymarket traffic circle will have a diameter of 200 feet. Buildings abutting the square on Merrimac, Canal, Cross and Blackstone streets will be razed.

Cross street, east of Haymarket square and now a narrow thoroughfare, will be made 80 feet wide by obliteration of buildings on both sides.

In awarding each owner $1 the transit commission returns to a policy in effect prior to taking of land for the East Boston tunnel. Each owner may deal directly with the transit commission or force judicial determination of the property value. Numerous awards, it is expected, will be made within the next three weeks.
HYDE PARK WINS PARADE HONORS
Jamaica Plain Is Second in Annual Review
Michelangelo Leads Youngsters
—Not One Boy Drops Out

For the sixth consecutive year, Hyde Park High School, the largest school in downtown Boston yesterday for the annual parade of the Boston school cadets and took away the top honors for marching. Jamaica Plain High School was second. It was the fourth time that this school had won one of the five places for its appearance in the parade, units, part of the 17,000 khaki-clad youngsters in line, were trained, as they have been in the past, by Capt. Albert J. Kelley, instructor of military drill at both schools.

The order in which the first three schools placed, in the eyes of the regular Army officers who marked the 25 regiments from points along the route, was the same as last year. Hyde Park, first, Jamaica Plain second, and Brighton High School, third. The other winners were Charlestown High School, fourth, and East Boston High School, fifth.

Michelangelo Also Wins
In the intermediate school division the best marching units were named as coming from the Michelangelo School, N. Hart Scudder second; Woodrow Wilson School, third; Thomas A. Edison School, fourth, and Thomas G. Faunce, fifth. It was the first time the Hart and Edison Schools had cadets in the parade.

As a result of the awards Hyde Park High School will have the honor next June of furnishing the division commander for the street parade. Jamaica Plain High, Brighton High, Charlestown High and East Boston High Schools will supply the leaders for the four brigades.

The weather man was kind to the schoolboy cadets, so kind, in fact, that the lads had well-nigh perfect marching conditions, and no one was obliged to drop out because of the heat. There was a generous sprinkling of bands throughout the parade that furnished the music for the marchers, there being about 35 musical units in line.

The cadets, like the crowd of spectators, were out in larger numbers than ever before, gave a splendid account of themselves. They were reviewed first in Tremont st., by Mayor James M. Curley and Thomas A. Glynn, chairman of the Board of Street Commissioners; at the State House, by Gov. Joseph L. Hynes and his staff; on the Common, by members of the School Committee, and at Copley sq., by the military instructors and the militia division and brigade commanders.

Notes Along the Route

The parade brought out one of the largest crowds of spectators ever to witness one.

Col Charles A. Ranlett, for 14 years in charge of the parade, was out of it officially for the first time, but he watched the parade as an interested spectator. In Tremont st., Col Ranlett, who is now retired and was in civilian dress, stepped off the sidewalk and greeted Col George S. Penney, who assumed the post of chief of staff in his place.

It was the first time, it was said after the parade, that no one had fallen out of the line of march of needed medical treatment. A Red Cross ambulance followed the parade, and on the Common at an emergency tent, Drs Theodore Erb, Samuel Nadel, Warren Shields, and Drs James A. Keegan, director of school hygiene, were on hand, as were Miss Marion C. Sullivan, assistant supervising school nurse, and in civilian dress, stepped off the sidewalk and greeted Col George S. Penney, who assumed the post of chief of staff in his place.

3000 From English High
There were 3000 boys in four regiments from the English High School alone. A new feature in the parade was the first appearance of the newly organized fife and drum corps.

Two girl drum majors stepping in front of Woodrow Wilson School band "doing their stuff" were the only girls in the parade. They were Isabelle McNeill, who wore a red coat and overseas hat, and Mildred McMurray, dressed in a white suit and yellow cape, the daughter of Lieut Thomas McMurray of the Bureau of Records at Police Headquarters.

With Roxbury Memorial High School regiments marched Maj Theodore A. Glynn Jr., whom his father, of the Street Commission, saw march by from the Mayor's stand. It took 22 street cars to transport the boys from this school to the mobilization area.

Lieut Col John S. Masterson, son of Robert B. Masterson, headmaster of the Roxbury school, marched with the cadets of the English High School regiments.

The band of the Public Latin School and the fife and drum corps of the High School of Commerce, one of only two in the parade, struck up the stirring tune "Over There" as they marched by the School Committee reviewing stand. In the reviewing party were Chairman William Arthur Reilly, Mrs Elizabeth W. Pigeon and Maurice J. Tobin of the School Committee, and Supt of Schools Patrick T. Campbell.

Fire Engines Break Through

Tony Amerahodian, peppy drum major leading the Dorchester High School for Boys' Band, received great applause all along the line of march.

George Curley, son of the Mayor, a first-year student at the Public Latin School, was among the marchers.

Roosevelt Will Aid Vets, Says Curley
President Roosevelt aims to correct the injustices to veterans set forth in the resolution submitted by Comdr. James P. Rose of the American Legion, which was adopted by the conference of mayors in Washington and presented to the President by Mayor Curley.

This was revealed yesterday by the mayor in a letter to Rose through whose personal efforts, the mayor said, justice will be secured for the service men and their dependents.

Curley Dedicates Murray Circle Today
Coincident with the 54th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murray of Hastings st., West Roxbury, Mayor Curley today will dedicate the circle at Center st. and Avenue to the memory of their son, Lieut. James E. Murray of the 101st Infantry, who died three years ago. Members of the Murray family will attend the exercises.

PLANS ANOTHER WASHINGTON TRIP
Mayor Curley to Appeal for Navy Yard

Mayor Curley plans another hurry-up trip to Washington tomorrow night, he announced this afternoon, this time in favor of the interests of Charlestown Navy Yard workers, he said.

The Mayor said he is apprehensive that the Navy Department really intends a severe reduction of the working forces at the yard. He declared he will intercede not only to keep the force at its present numbers, but will attempt to get assignment of more men to the yard for alteration or repair.
Coakley Now Expected in City Contest

Executive Councillor Said to Believe His Day Has Come for Mayoralty

By Forrest P. Hull

Strong intimations have been received in political circles that Daniel H. Coakley is merely awaiting what he considers the proper time and the announcement of his candidacy for the mayoralty. It is said that the erstwhile active lawyer, who is now a member of the executive council, is loth to engage in a rough-and-tumble verbal fight against the present administration and the henchmen of Mayor Curley, who are awaiting the word to do battle for the man of his choice.

If Coakley enters the contest he will add spice to a situation which promises to become even more complicated than the ten-city conflict of eight years ago, when he succeeded John J. Moynihan in the 9th Ward. Perchance he is not quite as certain of the contest of three any more than eight years ago when Coakley gathered only 2,585 votes against Wm. Mansfield and Curley.

Coakley's successful contest in April, 1892, in winning the Ninth District delegate fight pledged to Governor Smith, and his successful fight for the executive council, have naturally given him confidence that his political sun is in the ascendency. He may not actually believe that he can successfully batter down the ramparts which the young politician has erected in the last ten years and step into the mayoral chair, but real satisfaction comes to him in being his own man. Curley, and all that the mayor represents, is the mix-up which is certain to result from a multiplicity of mayoral candidates, Coakley's chances of election might possibly be greater than they were eight years ago.

It is, of course, a serious question how strong the present mayor is in Boston. His defeat with the Roosevelt slate, which contains only a single grain of comfort in the vote of Ward 5, Roxbury, is a part of the mayor's old stamping ground, which alone among the wards remained loyal to him. It may be unfair to compare the mayor's standing as a Roosevelt delegate to that of a Smith city council and his political prestige in local contests, with only the anti-Curley men, and many of them are Coakley's friends, are claiming that Curley can have very little influence in the next mayoral election.

It is assumed that Curley takes any part in the contest it will be in favor of Theodore A. Glynn, chairman of the street commission, his candidate of eight years ago. Such an endorsement would give Coakley all the excuse he will need for the present administration. With Coakley on his side and on the air inveigling against the mayor in kind and to rake up all the old charges which led to Mr. Coakley's disfranchisement a dozen years ago.

Wards Lack Leaders

That the electorate is in the frame of mind easier to grasp at new sensations cannot be doubted. Members of the city council, whose votes are closest to things political, report an innumerable mass of wards which can only be accounted for, they say, by lack of old-time leadership such as existed when Lomasney, Donovan, Fitzgerald, Curley were in their prime. As the councilmen discusspolitics, there are only three leaders today—Curley, Innes and Lomasney—having the power of wide control such as possessed by the worthies of the past.

It is this reasoning that inspires such a portion of the above statement will read.

May Plague the G. G. A.

A portion of the above statement will arise to plague the Good Government Association, perhaps, if it gives its endorsement to Frederick W. Mansfield, who is approaching his seventy-ninth birthday. Nichols was forty-nine when he received the G. G. A. approval. The three City Council members are between thirty-two and forty-two years old, and naturally they will have much to say about the young men being given a chance against the veterans, such as Mansfield. Nichols, Innes and Kelly are the novelists of the four, and each can make a method for settling private enmities nor for vindicating character.
17,000 CADETS SEEN BY 100,000

PARADE JUDGED BEST IN YEARS

Before a crowd of more than 100,000, the 17,000 cadets of the Boston high schools marched yesterday for two hours through downtown streets and the Back Bay.

For the second consecutive year, Hyde Park high school's contingent was awarded first prize by a committee of four United States army officers who viewed the parade. Smartness of appearance was given as the decisive factor in the judges' decision. Second honors were won by Jamaica Plain, as they were last year, while the remaining three prizes were distributed as follows: Brighton high, Charlestown high and East Boston high, in that order.

In the intermediate school's group, the top place went to the Michelangelo school, second to the Thomas N. Hart school, third to the Woodrow Wilson school, fourth to the Thomas A. Edison school, and fifth to the Washington school.

MARCHING BEST IN YEARS

The route of the parade was well lined at 9:30 A. M. when Col. George S. Penney, chief of staff of the 26th division, who is military instructor at Boston Latin school, gave the sign for the ranks to move forward at Columbus avenue and Clarendon street. According to army and national guard officers who viewed the parade, the marching was the best of any years since the cadets first paraded in 1919.

Leading the parade as an escort was Sergt. Edward B. Kane of the police department, who rode "Broker," the police horse who has led the parade 14 times.

Included in the ranks of the marchers from 13 schools, were 13 band units and 16 drum and bugle corps. Mayor Curley headed a delegation at City Hall which reviewed the parade at that point of march. Passing before him in the ranks of Boston Latin school was his son, Theodore Glynn, Jr., commanding a regiment as a major from Roxbury Memorial high school.

More than 300 policemen handled the crowd along the line of march. They were in command of Capt. William W. Livingston, who ordered traffic lights suspended and motor traffic rerouted during the time of the parade.

JUDGED THE PARADE

Four army judges, in command of Capt. Walter C. Hamilton of the army base, judged the parade. Most of the watchers, about 25,000, were bunched between the mayor's reviewing stand at City Hall and the Common gate and Beacon and Charles street. Another group who reviewed the parade was the Boston school committee, who received "eyes right!" for more than two hours.

MAYOR TO DEDICATE LT. MURRAY CIRCLE

Parents of Soldier Also to Mark 54th Wedding Anniversary Tomorrow

Coincident with the 54th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murray, 86 Hastings street, West Roxbury, tomorrow, Mayor Curley, will dedicate at 3 o'clock, the circle at Centre street and Murray to the memory of their son, Lt. James E. Murray of Co. D 101st infantry.

Lt. Murray died three years ago. After returning from France, where he received the Croix de Guerre and two citations for bravery, he was appointed a court officer. He was a charter member of Michael J. O'Connell post, American Legion and selected the name of the post.

Scores of members of the Murray family will attend the exercises. Three of them bear the name James E. Murray. They are the 76-year-old head of the family, a son of Councilman Peter A. Murray and his eight-months-old grandson.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray are natives of Athlone, Ireland, where they were married. They came to Roxbury 53 years ago and for more than 40 years, Murray, now retired, was a storekeeper for the Boston Elevated.

The family includes seven children, 14 grandchildren and one great grandchild. The children are Councilman Murray, Patrolman Thomas F. Murray, John J. Murray, George L. Murray, Martin Murray, Miss Anna M. Murray of Boston and Mrs. Amary Leland of Franklin.

COUNCILMEMEN TO HEAR ECONOMY SUGGESTIONS

Will Hold Open Forum Wednesday On City Budget

The city council committee on appropriations will hold an open forum in the council chamber next Wednesday for the discussion of opportunities to reduce the appropriations recommended by Mayor Curley in the budget.

Any one desirous of pointing out to the committee where the mayor has been unwarrantedly generous in allocation of funds for the hundreds of items composing the budget will have opportunity to do so.

Chairman George W. Roberts of the committee yesterday stressed the fact that the budget items would be the only subjects of discussion and that the committee was interested in learning how greater reductions than already made by the mayor could be ordered by the council.

Rourke Defends 65-Cent Payment to City-Aided

Sixty-five cents a day is fair compensation, in the opinion of Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke, for the majority of the 3800 men receiving aid from the welfare department who are assigned to perform work in Rourke's department.

He made the statement to the city council committee on appropriations yesterday, but he absolved the men from any criticism and asserted that the system of the welfare department is at fault. Few of the men, he said, are physically able to perform hard labor, and because of this handicap the service which they render is of no material benefit to the city.
On the Democratic Side

Gov. Ely has said he will not run again. He must have, of course, the right to change his mind, but there is no doubt he means what he says. It was not altogether easy to persuade him to be a candidate for reelection last year, and he doubtless will welcome the opportunity to return to private life.

A good many individuals, some of them most unlikely, have been brought forward to succeed him. Unless something new develops, the chances are that the next Democratic candidate for Governor will come from the eastern part of the State, Gov. Ely and Sens. Walsh and Coolidge are residents of what is commonly called the Western section, and the Democrats who live in or near Boston think they have done all that a proper spirit of generosity could demand. They are inclined to ask next year for a candidate for Governor from the district in which the great majority of the Democratic votes is cast.

Mayor Curley a Factor

Mayor James M. Curley must be considered in this matter. The newspapers print day after day rumors that he will receive some important office in the Federal Administration, but most people believe that the places he desired most have not been offered to him. Not long ago he confessed that he had the ambition to be Governor, and it may be that his best opportunity to obtain the party nomination for that office will be in 1934.

Rumor has it that the Mayor is not on the most friendly terms with Gov. Ely and Sen. Walsh, and under some circumstances Mr. Walsh might be inclined to prefer someone else to the Mayor as a running mate on the State ticket, but the Senator does not need help in order to be re-elected. The Republicans will have difficulty in finding anybody to run against him, and his defeat seems almost impossible. Under those circumstances Mr. Walsh will probably not go very far in opposition, or in support, of any candidate for the party nomination for Governor.

Young Violinist and Mayor Curley Strike Up Friendship

An immediate friendship resulted yesterday when Grischa Goluboff and Mayor Curley met at the office of the Mayor. Grischa is a 10-year-old violinist who has gained an international reputation, having played with symphony orchestras here and abroad.

Young Grischa made his first Boston appearance May 7 at the Symphony Hall dinner which opened the campaign of the American Palestine Committee and he so electrified the large audience that he received seven curtain calls.

The young violinist expressed the desire to do his "bit" to aid the refugees Jews of Germany. This may have been because of the demand of the Nazi that the costly violins, loaned to him by a German nobleman, which he loves to play on, be returned to Germany. He has another fine violin, loaned by the Wurlitzer Company of New York, which is claimed, cost $30,000.

Before leaving Mayor Curley's office, Grischa was presented with an autographed portrait of the Mayor and a new Liberty Dollar which he says he will keep as a token of the kindness of the Mayor of Boston.
Ex-Gov Alvan T. Fuller’s announcement that he intends to be a candidate for Governor next year for the Republican nomination, is still the principal topic of conversation among the politicians, Democrats as well as Republicans. If Mr Fuller persists he will greatly add to the interest in the coming pre-primary, which will show itself, even if he decides not to run, he will have amused himself at the expense of party leaders who are accustomed to have things move on in routine fashion.

It may be taken for granted that if the ex-Governor receives the support of many Democrats in the election; he has always attracted voters from the opposition party, and there is no reason to think he will not do so in this instance if he is fortunate enough to have his name on the election ballot. Something will depend, of course, on the selection of the Democratic nominee, but whoever he may be he will lose some votes to Mr Fuller.

Bacon Friends Disturbed

Liet-Gov Gaspar G. Bacon and his friends are disturbed by recent developments, and have reason to believe that Mr Bacon was likely to secure without serious opposition the Republican nomination for Governor and then run at the polls against a Democratic nominee whose identity is at present unknown, but could not be so serious as Gov Joseph J. Ely has been. This agreeable outlook has been suddenly marred by the fact that Mr Bacon’s name was on the list of those who have had the privilege of buying securities from J. P. Morgan & Co. before the public could purchase.

Five years ago that incident would probably have attracted no attention, but public opinion has been so deeply aroused by the conduct of many great industrial and commercial corporations that a profound prejudice exists against everybody who has any connection with such enterprises. Mr Bacon’s father and brother, both dead, were members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co and it seems natural that he should be one of those to whom that house would extend opportunities when it had any to give. If the present movement be a real one, he has been deceived in hisambition to be a candidate for the highest office in the State, and he will have to run in the primary after all. That arrangement will probably reduce his chances of success, but there is no reason to think he will not do well enough to have his name on the election ballot.

Small Things; Great Results

It may be taken for granted that if Mr Fuller receives the support of many Democrats in the coming primary, he will lose some votes to Mr Bacon while Dr Burchard, a well-known clergyman, making an address to Mr Bacon, aided to the Democratic party as a champion of “rum, Romanism and rebellion.” That phrase defeated Mr Bacon and elected Grover Cleveland, but Mr Bacon’s friends and supporters at the primary were to the latter to carry New York. In that instance Mr Bacon had to suffer for the mistake of one of his supporters. The fact appears to be that Mr Bacon did not hear what the clergyman said. Two newspaper reporters, now dead, who stood close to Mr Bacon while Dr Burchard was speaking, said afterwards, although not in public, that they did not hear the words and knew that Mr Bacon could not have heard them in the noisy and confusion of the meeting, which was held in a hotel lobby. That incident, however, was fatal to Mr Bacon’s cause.

The result may not be so serious for Mr Bacon, but at present he is the victim of a widespread public feeling which has no patience with anybody associated with “aggregations of great wealth.” A change before the election of delegates to the Republican pre-primary convention next Spring or at any rate before the primary in Fall of 1934.

Fuller Strong Candidate

If Ex-Gov Fuller is a candidate for Governor he must be reckoned with. He may not succeed in getting the endorsement of the pre-primary convention, which will in general be represented by the party organization, but he has said that if he fails in the convention he will run in the primary itself, and there he will probably be stronger than in the convention.

Some have criticized Mr Fuller on the ground that he should abide by the result of the convention, but that argument is weak. He knows that the pre-primary would not have passed the Legislature if the decisions of the convention had not been made subject to the approval of the primary. The Legislature intended to give the convention, not authority, but influence. The candidate who be spoken by the voters in the primary, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that if the pre-primary convention tries to dictate as the convention did in the old days it will speedily be wiped out of existence and the unlimited primary will be brought back.

The chances are that if there is a contest for the Republican nomination in the coming convention all of the candidates in the convention will run in the primary also. That arrangement may change the influence of the convention.

Other Republicans

The entrance of Mr Fuller into the gubernatorial contest may lead others to run. In particular, Attty Gen Joseph J. Ely has not said he intended to be a candidate for a higher place on the State ticket, but his friends have been at work and he probably knows what he is about. For some time there was doubt whether he proposed to be a candidate for State or Lieutenant Governor, but recently the story has been that he would be a candidate for the latter office.

If, however, Liet-Gov Bacon and Ex-Gov Fuller run for Governor it is likely that Mr Warner will be the candidate representing the State outside Greater Boston, in which community both of the other gentlemen are prominent in this paragraph live. It would surprise no one if Mr Warner made announcement, at the proper time, that he would run for Governor.

And then there is John W. Haigis of Greenfield, another well known Republican. His friends have presented him as a candidate for one of the first two places on the State ticket, but he has made no statement about his intentions.

Saltonstall for Other Place

Finally, Leverett Saltonstall, Speaker of the State House of Representatives, will probably be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, although recent events may change his plans.

It looks now as though the Republicans might have one or two real contests leading up to the election of 1934. Most of the party leaders, being conservative by nature, view that prospect with dismay; they would prefer to have things arranged in advance so that bad feelings would persist after the nominations, but such hopes may be vain next year.

The Republicans should take a leaf out of the Democrats’ book on this subject. The members party welcome contests that fights in the primary interest in party membership, enrollment of voters, and to both men and women to election day.

Experienced politicians are to think the Republicans wo better off if they follow set by the Democrats. It has been long time since the Republicans had real contest for the Governor. There was, to be sure, some opposition from Gov Cox, Fuller and Allen, but everybody knew who would be nominated.
Ex-Gov Alvan T. Fuller's announcement that he intends to be a candidate next year for the Republican nomination for Governor is still the principal topic of conversation among the politicians, Democrats as well as Republicans. If Mr Fuller persists he will greatly add to the interest in the coming pre-primary convention and in the primary itself, and even if he decides not to run he will have amused himself at the expense of party leaders who are accustomed to have things move on in routine fashion.

It may be taken for granted that if the ex-Governor receives the Republican nomination from his friends he will have the support of many Democrats in the election; he has always attracted voters from the opposition party, and there is no reason to think he will not do so in this instance if he is fortunate enough to have his name on the election ballot. Something will depend, of course, on the selection of the Democratic nominees, but whatever he may be he will lose some votes to Mr Fuller.

Bacon Friends Disturbed

Lieut Gov Gaspar G. Bacon and his friends are disturbed by recent developments, and have reason to believe that Mr Bacon was likely to secure without very serious opposition the Republican nomination for Governor and then run at the polls against a Democratic nominee whose identity is at present unknown, but could not be too strong as Gov Joseph R. Ely has been. This agreeable outlook has been suddenly marred by the fact that Mr Bacon's name was on the list of those who have had the privilege of buying securities from J. P. Morgan & Co before the public could purchase.

Five years ago that incident would probably have attracted no attention, but public opinion has been so deeply aroused by the conduct of many great industrial and financial corporations that a profound prejudice exists against everybody who has any connection with such enterprises. Mr Bacon's father and brother, both dead, were members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co and it seems natural that he should be one of those to whom that house would extend opportunities when it had any to give. Since the time in which Dr Burchard, a well-known clergyman, making an address to Mr Blaine, alighted to the Democratic party as part of the Blaine party of "rum, Romanism and rebellion." That phrase defeated Mr Blaine and elected Grover Cleveland, for it enabled the latter to carry New York. In that instant Mr Blaine had no friends enough to suffer for the mistake of one of his supporters. The fact appears to be that Mr Blaine did not hear what the clergyman said. Two newspaper reporters, now dead, who stood close to Mr Blaine while Dr Burchard was speaking, said afterwards, although not in public, that they did not hear the words and knew that Mr Blaine could not have heard them in the noise and confusion of the meeting, which was held in a hotel lobby. That incident, however, was fatal to Mr Blaine's chances.

The result may not be so serious for Mr Bacon, but at present he is the victim of a widespread public feeling which has no patience with anybody associated with "aggregations of great wealth." If the tide may be a change before the election of delegates to the Republican pre-primary convention next March at any rate before the primary in the Fall of 1934.

Fuller Strong Candidate

If Ex-Gov Fuller is a candidate for Governor he must be reckoned with. He may not succeed in getting the endorsement of the pre-primary convention, which will, in general, be the representative of the party organization, but he has said that if he fails in the convention he will run in the primary itself, and there he will probably be stronger than in the convention.

Some have critized Mr Fuller, on the ground that he should abide by the result of the convention, but that argument is fallacious to buy are now selling at a price considerably lower than the one he had to meet when he acquired them, apparently for a trust of which he is a co-trustee. That transaction looks innocent enough, but it may have a serious effect on Mr Bacon's political future.

Small Things; Great Results

Matters which seem small and unimportant often have important results in political affairs. Those old enough to remember the Presidential campaign of 1884 will recall the fact that a few weeks before the ballots were cast James G. Blaine of Maine, the Republican nominee, seemed almost certain of election. Then came a meeting in New York at which Dr Burchard, a well-known clergyman, making an address to Mr Blaine, alighted to the Democratic party as part of the Blaine party of "rum, Romanism and rebellion." That phrase defeated Mr Blaine and elected Grover Cleveland, for it enabled the latter to carry New York. In that instant Mr Blaine had no friends enough to suffer for the mistake of one of his supporters. The fact appears to be that Mr Blaine did not hear what the clergyman said.
