Geography of Loves Lost

Alexandra Larkin '18

I. You loved a girl named Rome who licked blood off her fingers and she looked like divine absolution she looked like an empire

II. You loved a girl named Sparta and they told you to be careful this is your life but she is playing a game and she will win

III. You loved a girl named Knossos whose eyes were the labyrinth and all the paths led to the minotaur the prodigal son

IV. You loved a girl named Alexandria who held all life's mysteries on papyrus who was not as simple as they wanted but burned anyway

V. You loved a girl named Athens who pulled clay from the cracks in her skull and built carrera temples with poetry

VI. You loved a girl named Delphi who could see all and all stars and saw you and hated what you had made
