HOLY CROSS POETRY WALK

PURPOSE

It's almost silly to comprehend or to grasp at in reality
For it sits lingering away
as blue jeans so often do.

But I can't stop glancing around the corner expecting
To bulldoze me away into a mirage

Cemented with my handprint
Being perfectly imperfect
Smudged glistening.

Why do I feel like you're gone or that you never really existed at all? Did you?

Imagine me a sign
Well, proven to me.
Something small, something that's something.
That you exist and will appear
At any given time.
