Contributors to Indian Catholicism: Interventions and Imaginings

Mathew Schmalz

Follow this and additional works at: https://crossworks.holycross.edu/jgc

Part of the Anthropological Linguistics and Sociolinguistics Commons, Asian History Commons, Asian Studies Commons, Catholic Studies Commons, Christian Denominations and Sects Commons, Christianity Commons, Comparative Methodologies and Theories Commons, Comparative Philosophy Commons, Cultural History Commons, Digital Humanities Commons, Esthetics Commons, Feminist Philosophy Commons, Fine Arts Commons, Folklore Commons, Gender and Sexuality Commons, Hindu Studies Commons, History of Christianity Commons, History of Religion Commons, Inequality and Stratification Commons, Intellectual History Commons, International Relations Commons, Liturgy and Worship Commons, Missions and World Christianity Commons, Oral History Commons, Other Anthropology Commons, Other International and Area Studies Commons, Place and Environment Commons, Politics and Social Change Commons, Practical Theology Commons, Quantitative, Qualitative, Comparative, and Historical Methodologies Commons, Race and Ethnicity Commons, Race, Ethnicity and Post-Colonial Studies Commons, Regional Sociology Commons, Religious Thought, Theology and Philosophy of Religion Commons, Rural Sociology Commons, Social and Cultural Anthropology Commons, Social History Commons, Sociology of Culture Commons, Sociology of Religion Commons, South and Southeast Asian Languages and Societies Commons, Women's History Commons, and the Women's Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

DOI: 10.32436/2475-6423.1011
Available at: https://crossworks.holycross.edu/jgc/vol1/iss1/7

This Contributors is brought to you for free and open access by CrossWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Global Catholicism by an authorized editor of CrossWorks.
Contributors

Dr. P. J. Johnston is lecturer in Asian religions at the University of Wisconsin--Eau Claire, having attained a doctorate from the University of Iowa in 2015 and serving as visiting assistant professor in Asian Religions in 2015-2016. Johnston works in the fields of comparative theology and global Catholicism, with a secondary interest in religion and gender in Asia. Johnston's next anticipated project will investigate the impact of the Indian Mutiny on the Newman-Kingsley debate and the emergence of British Muscular Christianity, considering the role of Oxford Movement as a subculture resisting a new paradigm of gender and sexuality linked to British colonialism.

Dr. James Ponniah is assistant professor in the Department of Christian Studies at the University of Madras. He previously was the dean of the faculty of philosophy and an associate professor in the Department of Indian Studies at Jnana Deepa Vidaypeeth University in India. Ponniah specializes in popular religious movements in India. Ponniah published The Dynamics of Folk Religion in Society in 2011 and has co-edited three other books; in addition, he has written numerous articles about popular religious movements in India. Ponniah was also a part of the Christianity and Freedom Project headed by the Berkley Center's Religious Freedom Project. He holds an MA and PhD from the University of Madras.

Dr. Kerry P. C. San Chirico is assistant professor of Interfaith and Interreligious Studies at Villanova University. Born and raised in Monterey, California, he holds a bachelor’s degree in political science from Santa Clara University, and master’s degrees from Princeton Seminary, Rutgers University, St. Vladimir’s Seminary, and Boston College. He holds a doctorate in religious studies (South Asian religions) from the University of California, Santa Barbara. With expertise in Indian religions and global Christianities, his scholarly interests include South Asian bhakti, vernacular Hinduisms, inter-religious interaction and exchange, and theory and method in the study of religion. Recent publications include the chapter “Religion in the Practice of Daily Life in India’’ in the multi-volume series Religion and Everyday Life and Culture (Praeger, 2010) and “Between Christian and Hindu: Khrist Bhaktas, Catholics, and the Negotiation of Devotion in the Banaras Region” in Constructing Indian Christianities (Routledge India, 2014). He is co-editor of the forthcoming book Hagiography and Religious Truth (Bloomsbury), which explores sanctity across religious traditions. Currently the secretary of the Society for Hindu-Christian Studies, San Chirico resides in Narberth, Pennsylvania with his wife and three daughters.

Dr. Mathew N. Schmalz is the founding editor of the Journal of Global Catholicism. He is associate professor of religious studies at the College of the Holy Cross and received his BA from Amherst College and his PhD in the history of religions from the University of Chicago. He has published over fifty articles and essays that engage global Catholicism (particularly in South Asia), Catholic theology and spirituality, Mormonism, and The Watchtower movement. He is co-editor of Engaging South Asian Religions: Boundaries, Appropriations, and Resistances (SUNY, 2012, with Peter Gottschalk) and author of Mercy Matters: Opening Yourself to the Life Changing Gift (OSV, 2016). Schmalz has also written over one hundred opinion pieces that have appeared in On Faith, Crux, The Huffington Post and the print editions of The Washington Post, Commonweal Magazine, US Catholic, The National Catholic Reporter, the Providence Journal, and the Telegram & Gazette. He has provided expert commentary to USA Today, The New York Times, ABC's Good Morning America, NPR, CNBC, Hardball with Chris Matthews, and U.S. News & World Report, among others.

Dr. Sonja Thomas is an assistant professor of women’s gender and sexuality studies at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Her forthcoming book, The Politics of Belonging: Gender, Caste, Race and Religion in Postcolonial South Asia, focuses on the Syrian Christian community in Kerala, India. In the book, Thomas examines how a state sponsored political interpretation of minorities in India seeks to homogenize minorities as subordinated in order to protect their rights while on the ground, caste, class and racial hierarchies are reified in numerous ways between minority communities making feminist solidarity between religions, castes, races and classes and among minority populations, contentious. She has written articles on gender, education and human rights in India, South Asian feminisms, and on the field of women’s studies. Thomas received her PhD from the Department of Women and Gender Studies at Rutgers University.