Historical Sketch:

The following historical sketch is largely drawn from "St. George's College, 1850-2000", Chapter 6 of Jesuitana Jamaica: Historical Profiles, 1837-1996 by Rev. Gerard L. McLaughlin S.J. and "A Brief History of St. George's College", circa 1999, in the collection.

St. George's College was founded in 1850 by Colombian Jesuits who had fled from persecution in their own country. Two years later, the Spanish-speaking Jesuits left for Guatemala and the English Jesuits, who had been serving the Jamaican mission since 1837, took over the school. For almost 15 years, the school struggled, closing and opening as the focus of the mission in Jamaica changed. In 1868, St. George's College reopened at the secondary school level for boys. In 1894, the English Jesuits left Jamaica to concentrate on their missionary work in Africa and their replacements came from the Maryland-New York Province. In 1929, the newly formed New England Province of Jesuits assumed responsibility for the Jamaica Mission. The American Jesuits already had much experience in secondary and university education and they recreated the standard classical curriculum at St. George's College staffing the school with Jesuits.

St. George's College became a grant-in-aid school in 1936, becoming part of the government's educational system, and allowing for the Jamaican Government to pay the salaries of the teaching faculty and administration. This new status, however, forced the Jesuits to give up some of the control of the school. In 1956, the Ministry of Education established a common entrance examination, ending the College's own entrance examination and selection of its students. In the 1940s and 50s, St. George's College built science laboratories, adding Chemistry, Physics and Biology to its curriculum and developing a reputation for excellence in the physical sciences. In 1942, St. George's College introduced an Extension Course focused on general adult education. Soon the St. George's Extension School was offering pre-professional courses in medicine and law. By the 1950s, St. George's Extension School was involved in training for the Cooperative Credit Unions. The Extension School closed in 2000.

Over the years the student population grew steadily. In 1905 when the College moved to Winchester Park, the student population was approximately 100 students. By 1942 the student enrollment had slowly risen to 235 students; by 1952, 452 students and in 1962 enrollment had risen to excess of 800. In 2010, there were 1450 students. Correspondingly, the size of the faculty has also grown steadily. In 1905 there were eleven teachers (six Jesuits and five lay men), but by 1942 it had risen slightly to thirteen faculty (twelve Jesuits and one layman). In 1952 there were twenty-six teachers (eighteen Jesuits and eight laymen), and in 2010 there were 75 lay teachers. Most administrators had been foreign Jesuits, but in 1945, after ninety-five years of existence, the College welcomed its first Jamaican headmaster, Fr. Dennis Crutchley, S.J., who was an Old Boy of the College. He assumed the leadership of the College and remained in office for the next five years. By the 1980s, the Jesuit presence at St. George's College was diminished due to a lack of vocations, shortage of funds, and the theology of the missions. In September, 2005 the College admitted girls to its sixth form program, and appointed its first Headmistress in 155 years. In 2010, there were no Jesuits on the faculty, although the Regional Superior is the Chairman of the College.
