So too, a day must end, but not as it began. It ends in strength and fire and tints the world with its color. But then comes the darkness, and like every other day, this one comes to an end.

But soon another comes, and this also with the faintest trace of light showing its fragile head above the imaginary line.
SCRAPBOOK
Holy Cross men have made their mark upon the world.

"Where there's a man . . ."

"But she said she'd meet me here!"

"The natives were rather friendly!"

"Yeah! That's right . . . a four horse parlay!"

"See if she's got two friends"
"Of course I'm alone."

"The staples hold my trousers up."

"You've called me 'Bunkie' for the last time!"
"But he said he'd meet me here!"

"And my friend, the Marquis de Portago"

"Of course my intentions are honorable"

"Why curse the darkness, Brother?"

Dry (?) run for Stowe

"Did you catch the bosom on that bunny?"
We didn't invite you to come to Holy Cross . . .
Where??

"Blind dates are such fun!"

Shot-down

"Hey Cato... warm up the car..."

Cato in pursuit
“There is no joy in Mudville”

“. . . it bit me!”

There never was such a goose

“Welcome to Transylvania”

“We all love Peg”

“Bobby’s sooo good to me”

On the day when a book of the size and scope of the Purple Patcher goes to press, the editor experiences mixed emotions. He is, of course, greatly relieved, for there have been times in the course of the year when it seemed that the book would never be finished. But more than that, he must be grateful; grateful primarily to his staff, the members of which have borne the heat of the day. This gratitude is especially due to the staff of the 1958 Patcher.

There are many others also to whom the editors of the 1958 Patcher are deeply indebted; those whose suggestions, efforts and kindliness have brought the first rough sketches into reality. Among these, we feel compelled to mention . . .

Rev. James E. Fitzgerald, S.J., Dean of the College, for his understanding and kindness.

Rev. Brendan C. McNally, S.J., our moderator, who worried the book to completion.

Miss Lorette Smith, of Denholm and McKay, for her invaluable assistance to our photographic staff.

Frank Gallagher, of the Public Relations Office, for many of the pictures used in the Patcher.

Bernard J. McManus, M.A., Registrar of the College, who compiled the data used in the Faculty and Senior sections.

The Patrons and Advertisers, whose kindness is deeply appreciated.

The members of the Class of 1958, for their splendid cooperation and encouragement.

The Faculty and Student Body of the College, for their wholehearted support.

Many Thanks

The Editors
