March 9. 1877.

My dear Lullie.

In writing to you yesterday, I was so taken up with literature that I forgot a few personal things of some importance.

Your mother arrived home safely Wednesday evening. Her visit must have been a pleasant surprise to you. Glad to hear about that ribbon for politeness, love.

I cannot find that piece about the arab and his steed; nor do I remember the name of the author. Will send to you if I can find it.

My Judge Ames died this morning.
De mortuis nil nisi bonum.
