BOOMERANG—The strangest part of the alleged boycott of the Sunday RECORD is the actual gain in circulation from week to week, last Sunday's sales being several hundred above the highest figures of the pre-depression days of '29.

THE ONLY HOPE—Haverhill is heading for another internecine trade war like that which drove the J. H. Winchell company out of business and nearly wrecked the Knife Brothers at Ward Hill. This time the underdog of that disastrous fight, the Boot & Shoe Workers Union, is on the offensive, while the outlaws are on the defensive, with an army of generals and few desperate privies in the ranks.

The conflicting claims of superior strength sound very much like those heard in a real war. However, the weakness of the defenders of the red flag is now well known, and the deserters from a losing cause continue to flock to the standard of the probable victors.

If the plain people of the country (I mean city) stand behind the well-organized and patriotic Boot & Shoe Workers Union, the battle will be won and the city's chief industry will be saved. In spite of the fact that it has been tottering on the verge of annihilation by the Reds.

Now is the hour for all who would hope for a future happy and prosperous Haverhill to join in putting down this Moscow-dictated revolution which the Red Menace has dictated shall be given its first real try-out in our city.

There is only one hope for us—the encouraging and assisting in every known way the advance of the Boot & Shoe Workers Union into Haverhill shoe factories this month. To pass up this opportunity to revive the industry upon which we all depend may prove a knock-out blow.

With plenty of business in the shoe industry, and prospects of steady employment for our workers brighter than at any time in our history, there is absolutely no sense in letting the devilish plans of the Red destructionists go on any longer. We can make a fair share of the nation's footwear here if we will to do it under the just and principles of the only American Federation of Labor union in the trade—the Boot & Shoe Workers Union.

Brooklyn and New York shoe makers have been prospering ever since they drove out the Red leadership, which has since been living off the cedulous and misled workers of Essex county. Our shoe workers' opportunity to join the ranks of the contented and steadily employed of Brooklyn and other B. & S. W. U. centres is here. Right now is the time to throw off the yoke of exploiters and revolutionists and get on the band-wagon of returning prosperity!

Our citizens should be adequately informed of the flagrant waste in so-called New Deal relief projects. Reaction to this information cannot be anything but unfavorable to the Roosevelt Administration.

The expose will be enough to disgust generations of Americans who will have to pay and pay for the most outlandish schemes for wasting money ever devised by man.

Jobs Johns and other B. & S. W. U. centres here. Right now is the time to throw off the yoke of exploiters and revolutionists and get on the band-wagon of returning prosperity!

FIRE FOR SMITH—Educational forces throughout the state, alarmed at the rumor that Gov. Curley plans to supply a Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, are practically unanimous in their plea to the Roosevelt Administration to fire the man in the most important post, which he has offered to several well known educators, all of whom have refused to take a part in the political plans.

Following close on the appeal of the state association of school superintendents, the executive committee of the Massachusetts Educational Principals' Association sent a resolution last Wednesday to Gov. Curley, asking the continuation in office of Dr. Smith, as state commissioner of education and revolutionists and get on the band-wagon of returning prosperity!

The resolution read:

"Whereas over 500 members of the Massachusetts Educational Principals' Association in convention assembled last spring at which there was unanimously the whole-hearted support of Commissioner Payson Smith for his outstanding leadership in state and national educational affairs,

"Be it hereby resolved that the executive committeee of the Massachusetts Educational Principals' Association reaffirm its appreciation of his untiring efforts in the cause of education and express the hope that our commonwealth may have the benefits accruing from the continued service of Dr. Smith as commissioner of education."

Gov. Curley's obsession to obtain control of every department of the state government through the placing of his political lieutenants in all positions of authority is equalled in its brazenness and audacity only by the late Senator Huey Long's acts in Louisiana. There are no precedents in the history of Massachusetts for the Curley flaunting of the wishes of the people of this state. The damage he is doing to the good name of the state will be incalculable before the voters get a chance to retire him to private life in 1936.

All the factors that make human beings what they are—chemical, biological, nutritional, psychological and physical—may be the true reason for the Curley obsession to obtain control of every department of the state government through the placing of his political lieutenants in all positions of authority is equalled in its brazenness and audacity only by the late Senator Huey Long's acts in Louisiana. WASTE—Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, at Bowdoin College, declared the Passamaquoddy Deal project at Eastport, Maine, "is a typical New Deal project and absolutely inane. He said Quoddy was a waste of $40,000,000 and he "doubted if there would be markets found for power generated there."

He might have said truthfully that "there never will be a market there."

To the uneducated man history began this morning or at the very earliest at the time when he was born, while educated people feel history, whether they know it or not—Newton D. Baker, Cleveland.

BELLOW FOR BELLOW—The correspondent of Editor and Publisher sends this stump-jack:

Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and an outstanding candidate for the Republican Nomination, told the Indiana newspapers what he termed "the hereto secret story of his negotiations with Governor Curley during formation of the newspaper code."

"General Johnson called me and said he would fly to Indiana to have a conference with me," said Col. Knox. "When I walked into his hotel room he bellowed at me and asked me roughly what I thought was wrong with the NIRA. We went into the room and argued, because I had been in the army, too. I could speak and understand his language. I told him that Indiana had no newspaper code unless the specific freedom of the press clause was inserted."

Col. Knox may not have officially announced his candidacy, but nothing now can stop this becoming a candidate for President.

DISAPPROVAL—Organized business as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce of the United States went on record as strongly disapproving what "trends" constituted a mandate to the National Chamber henceforth to oppose laws embracing the policies described.

Questions included extension of Federal jurisdiction into matters of state and local concern, exercise of Federal spending powers without relation to revenue, government competition with private enterprise, and decisions of the Supreme Court on all the laws embracing the policies described.

Politics is puzzling at times. When anyone goes out to buy a bull-pup or a race horse, what he's after, first, is the price, secondarily the breed. Perhaps in the purchase of a bull terrier, for example, that there is not a little Buddhist or creation of God in his lineage, and that he is not the result of a runaway marriage. If he sets out to get the dog, he is glad to tell it to the breeder, if he can, truthfully, and perhaps anyway, that one of his ancestors was laid to the Pocahontas, or that another met the Mayflower on the shore at Plymouth. When he is pursued by high priested critics, they look upon it in these days, when many of the electorate wear their hair pompadour, as not having any ancestors at all. When he can, truthfully or not, he sets out to show that he has been through college, by shining shoes on the street. Fame and prosperity are looked upon as liabilities by the political rube, through assets, elsewhere.

In his campaign announcement, he almost invariably begins with the intimation that, personally and selfishly, he would be paid for public office. If he is a member of the bar, he sets out, that he prefers his profession to any political recognition. He then goes on eloquently to portray, that it is hard for him longer to withstand the great pressure that has been brought to bear upon him, if he set upon him to become a candidate, that it is impossible for him to take any other course. He sets out to show that the popular wave has overwhelmed him. He has succumbed.

Insincerity strikes rampant in the atmosphere of Opposition. Civilization is waiting, hungrily, for someone who will openly and even brazenly admit, that his first aspiration is the public service, and who will abandon all other occupations to secure it. For that is just what the situation is. There is not a candidate who has even appeared for public office, the defeat of whom would close banks or tie up business. It is not that there were plenty of others as fit as he to run, if he did not. But he did.

And now everybody is out to find a candidate for governor and a candidate of a trustee to some of the students who have a mind to stand out, pre-eminently, who are seeking such an exhibit, are one Jay Benton and one Bob Schuster. Mr. Benton is a likable and deserving member of the community. If he should allow himself to be sucked into the pursuit of either of these offices, and were elected, the State might look a little worse. In his zeal, however, his critics loom in legions, against his plan. He has succeeded in finding fifty-two respectable Republicans. It is his proposition that they should select a governor. The intimation is none of the present material measures up to his specifications, possibly with one exception, whom he does not name. All the Republicans, however, who are not on his preferred list are now against his plan, with some mutinous reason, naturally and reasonably. Further than this, all the followers of all the candidates who have been mentioned are also against the Benton plan, who are in favor of it could easily be gathered together in an upper chamber. The situation has made no progress. He suggests that an "ad" be inserted in the papers: "Wanted, a Man.

The sordid and suspicious abound even in as pure pastures as those of politics. They fear the Greek proverb when bearing gifts. Some of these have been brutal enough to suggest that the advertisement of Benton, no progress. And this in the way: "Wanted a man to run for governor. He must be a Harvard graduate. He must be a member of the bar. He must wear "mud-turtle" shell, and he must live in the Parkers House. He must be '50 and not much younger. If this advertisement is not clear enough, there ought to be added to it: "He must have presided over the last primary更像是 typical of the Republican convention, and live in Belmont." If anyone can be found, and it is likely that he can be, to meet the "ad," Insertion of a cruel critics intimate that this choice would satisfy Mr. Benton. And yet no one whispered. There was no whisper that key general has the slightest doubt that he has been actuated by a high purpose. He now sees himself in the ash-can, heels up.

And now comes Counselor Schuster, out of the woods of Douglas, and he, too, has a plan. Here is a young man who, in spite of his own troubles, is an asset to the Republican party, if no more than a net asset. For he is a man who can, be a man to do public office. If he is a member of the bar, he sets out, that he prefers his profession to any political recognition. He then goes on eloquently to portray, that it is hard for him longer to withstand the great pressure that has been brought to bear upon him, if he set upon him to become a candidate, that it is impossible for him to take any other course. He sets out to show that the popular wave has overwhelmed him. He has succumbed.

counselor. He joins in a duet with Mr. Curley, that "the Royal Purple" in the party should be scrapped, and that anyone who can reasonably be suspected of a credible ancestry cannot be considered for recognition by the Republican party. It's funny, for even Jinnie of the Jamaaway has been found, eating caviar and splashing around in private swimming pools, forgetting the plain people whom he pretends to love to madly.

Mr. Schuster forgets that such as these should be the first to be recognized by the Republican party. For the royal purple is the raiment of kings, and hardly any of these now survive. Again, we have been scraped by an on-running democracy. In easy English, they are down and out, and deserving of recognition, and are to be pitied and helped. Mr. Schuster could have taken a more humane attitude. Everyone knows whom he is hitting at. And while there may be much reason that this class ought not to be given everything within the patronage of the Republican party, they surely ought to be given something, otherwise the ticket is not representative of the reason why anyone with a credible ancestry should be disqualified, or one who has been for fun, than there is that those without a lineage should be given everything, and that only those above be recognized for public office who bathe as a religious rite.

Perhaps, by these same tests, Mr. Schuster, also, is out of the running. He says that we want a candidate who is not of "the white collar" class, and one who can command the votes of the working man in the great textile centers. Again, where does this leave Mr. Schuster? It may be that he, too, is ineligible for public office, for even he is to wear overalls and a jumper. In fact, it is very seldom that he per- sires and mops his brow with a bandana handkerchief. No one throws a pail of water over his head at sunrise, but he has been found even in a hotel suite with bath-room attached. The napkin besides his plate is quite as apt to be of linen as of paper. Further than this, he is of a long line of respected and prosperous manufacturers. Even he has a lineage. Even he has a pedigree which put him out of business, as by his own political tests.

I sometimes wonder how much of a vote a man like this would get among the working men of the great textile centers, a manufacturer, or an employer of labor himself, and of a class about as popular as some landlords with their tenants, or as a porcupine in a day nursery. It has been said that it is better to be inconsistently right than consistently wrong. But it is better to be consistently wrong than nothing. Because of which considerations in the party political purifica- tion process that Mr. Schuster suggests, perhaps he, too, should be swept along with those whom he condemns. You may look upon these as rough words, Win, but it is not written in the Scriptures, in substance, that those who take up the sword shall die by the sword, Steady, Schuster.

To the result of anything the governor has done. Indeed, his contribution to the general happiness, if it can be called that, is not much more than an increase in the State debt, a heavier burden of taxation on all the people and a prospect, as reflected in the special commission's recent report, of still greater taxation to come.

All in all, there is no occasion for Republicans to be alarmed by Mr. Curley's decision to seek higher honors. He is not so strong as he was in 1934. Neither is the man whose name he invoked so often in that contest and on whose shoulders he really rode into office. Mr. Curley can be beaten. If the election were to be held tomorrow, we are confident he would be beat- en.
THE CURLEY MACHINE

Governor Curley's latest batch of nominations is one more demonstration of his ability to build up a personal machine that would be expected to be of service to him when he runs for office next year, whether for another term in the governorship, or for the senatorial position. He is playing the game of politics as he played it so successfully in Boston.

The question naturally comes up, whether the state can be run politically on the lines of Boston. If it can, doubtless Mr. Curley is the man for the job; but that has yet to be demonstrated. The voters of the state last year, in spite of what they knew, or at least ought to have known, about Boston politics, were ready to give the Boston mayor a chance at running the commonwealth. Was it because they really approved of these methods, or because a large proportion of the voters had not acquainted themselves with Boston conditions as they should have done when the mayor of the city, they knew, was aspiring to the governorship of the state? Or did they believe that the mayor would broaden out with the widening of his field of action?

The first of the reasons seems the least probable. It is to be guessed that the balance of power was held by a mixed group, some members of which wished to show their confidence in the national administration, while most knew little or nothing about Boston affairs, and some were impressed by Mr. Curley's plausible campaign addresses. We find it hard to believe that the people of the whole state will stand for the political system which has been in operation for Boston during a large part of the past 20 years or more, now that they are beginning to comprehend it.

The state Democracy of New York has shown better political judgment. Although Tammany support is essential to its success in the elections for governor, the state has not been Tammanyized—not even during the three terms of Governor Smith, himself a Tammany man—or, should we say, least of all under his administrations. Generally speaking city politics is one thing and state politics, with the large rural vote to be conciliated, is quite another. Governor Curley is liable to get a lesson on this point the next time he runs for office.

TELEGRAM
Lowell, Mass. DEC 8 1935

Following a two hours' session of the Finance Commission yesterday afternoon, Secretary William Trotter stated that the board approved a payroll of the Street maintenance division of the Street department for the week ending November 30, which should have been paid last Thursday. It amounts to $858.63.

The commission also approved payrolls for the week ending November 23 for $2835.64 for macadam sidewalks. That money will come from Chapter 90 funds, also from the city's share of the State Bond money.

For the week ending Nov. 30, a payroll also for macadam sidewalks was approved. That totals $4496.44 and will be paid from Chapter 90 money and the city's share of State Bond money.

The commission declined to approve a payroll of $1915.80 for the week ending November 23 in the Street maintenance division of the Street department, which it was stated there is no money to meet it. For the same reason, a payroll of about $1100 in Street maintenance for the week ending November 14 was not approved. It was made clear that these payrolls were not illegal, but as far as the commission could see, there was no money available in the division appropriation with which to pay them.

Secretary Trotter likewise stated that special drafts representing $1728.58 in bills owed the Buildings department by any department of the city were held up pending action, which was deferred. The Buildings department billed the School division for work and materials furnished the latter, and it was stated that Business Agent Henry L. Williams of the School department had approved the bills. That sum would help out the depleted Buildings department, and it was stated that Business Agent Henry L. Williams, of the School department, had approved the drafts. Some of the employees of the Buildings department were greatly interested yesterday in whether those drafts had been approved and the money made available for Superintendent William J. Gargan as they expected to resume work.

Secretary Trotter stated further that the Finance board will try to find ways and means by which those payrolls not approved for lack of money, could be paid if money is found available anywhere.

It was further stated by the Secretary that a number of bills against the Street department were received from Superintendent George P. Legrand, but they were not approved by the board as the members were unable to look them over and inspect them. He stated that the commission may find money with which they can be paid.

City Messenger James F. Hennessey appeared before the commission at its meeting and requested that the body change its vote and approve the transfer of about $1,200 from Fire department pensions to meet a pending overdraft in the former division. When Secretary Trotter was asked if in the event the transfer were not made there would be an overdraft in the city hall department, he replied that there would be an overdraft if the division did not shut down. No action was taken on the City Messenger Hennessey's request. It had voted to disapprove the transfer.

Superintendent Legrand of the Street department submitted in person the payrolls and bills of his department and gave whatever information he had to the commission about them.

An intended transfer in the Water department was not presented to the Board.

The payrolls approved yesterday by the commission will be sent immediately to City Auditor Martin and City Treasurer Charles R. Flood for payment as early as possible this week. The men have been without their pay because the commission had not received the payrolls from the Street department.

A special draft for $150 for the Police department was for police officers furnished to the School department on the original field day. Action was deferred for more information.

The total of the bills presented to the commission which the Street department still owes is about $50,000.

Sizable Loan

The estimated cost of the former is $675,700 for 322,011 man hours of work; and on the latter the estimated cost is $84,000 for 88,776 man hours.

May Be Delay in Securing Money

The answer to the question raised last week, when Mayor J. Clun with an order for $26,000 for W.P.A. supplies and materials from the city council meeting came yesterday when City Treasurer Charles R. Flood stated that he will confer with bankers in Boston in an effort to secure $23,671 on an order passed yesterday when City Treasurer Charles R. Flood of the Finance Commission, with an emergency preamble on it, the council last week, making it possible to negotiate its loan.

When His Honor saw that an order had been presented for a larger amount by Chairman Edmund M. Martin of the Finance Commission with an emergency preamble on it, the mayor's order was withdrawn.

The new order was drawn up by City Auditor Daniel E. Martin at the request of Chairman Edmund M. Martin and other members of the Finance Commission, and was approved by the city council. The treasurer says he is anxious to arrange the loan as rapidly as possible so that there will be no interruption in federal work here.

Electoral Expenses

The campaign committee of Mayor-elect Dewey G. Archambault filed its receipts and expenses account in the recent campaign in the office of the Election commission last week. It stated that total receipts were $2973 and its total expenses $40.94. Among its expenditures was $246 to the william j. Burns Detective agency for detectives here on election day.

The committee according to the record filed with the Election commission, was as follows: Chairman William J. White, Jr.; treasurer, Walter F. Thomas; Larkin T. Trull, Hon. Thomas H. Braden, Maurice Harkby, Raymond J. Gendreau, William J. Higgins, Henry Golce, Sotiros Sampatakos, and James Gilet.

Other election expense accounts were as follows:

1. Veronica Sullivan Dodge of 20 July street said she received nothing but spent $20 in her campaign for election to the School committee.

2. Francis J. Tracy, of 11 Llewellyn street, said he received nothing but spent in the campaign $9.50 for the nomination for councillor in Ward 2.

3. Former Councillor Louis J. Lord of 10 Grand street, said he received nothing at all, spent nothing for the nomination for councillor-at-large, but spent $60 in the election campaign.

Councillor Raymond T. Wilde of 724 Cheinm street, said he received nothing at all for nomination but spent $70.75 or the election as councillor in Ward 4.

Francis A. Bourret of 914 Lakeview Avenue said he received nothing but spent $20 in the campaign for the nomination as councillor in Ward 6.

Sidelines on 'Victory Dinner'

It was interesting to note that at the Victory dinner in Boston last week under the auspices of the Republican club of Massachusetts, not a mention or allusion was made of the former or average in an effort to, any candidate for state office and that, as far as could be ascertained, not one of the men mentioned for the gubernatorial nomination was present.

In fact, the only one present who may be regarded as candidates to be chosen by all the voters of the commonwealth, were Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the former an avowed candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, and the latter undoubtedly a candidate to succeed himself as Secretary of State. While no mention was made of them or any other candidate, it was noticed that Representative Lodge made the most of his opportunities by mingling with the throngs that were present, and judging by the talk heard in the corridors and elsewhere, he will have very substantial backing from a majority of those who were present at the dinner.

But the most interesting feature of the dinner was the well-conceived idea of presenting representatives of various racial groups so that there would be no misunderstanding of the part of any one present; yet, at the same time, making it appear that the Republican party does not recognize any such groups other than Americans. Very adroitly did President Robert T. Bushnell introduce the speakers as being the representatives of all the people and not of any one group, and just as cleverly did Senator-elect Sweeney allude to his immigrant Irish father, and Mayor-elect Archambault to the fact that generations back his forbears came from France.

Representing another racial group was Representative-elect Axel Sternhol of Worcester, for whom there was no excuse in the world of having him as a guest at a victory dinner, as he was elected from a solid Republican district, but the Swedish-Americans are a formidable group, hence the recognition given him. It was a splendidly conceived idea but President Bushnell did not hesitate to say that it was about time that the Republican party took recognition of every group and that if they were doing it now, that condition did not always prevail.

That the several hundred men and women present showed enthusiasm is putting it mildly, and that it tended greatly to revivify the drooping spirit of many of the party is certain.

Curley Upsets Some Democratic Plans.

As was to be expected, the announcement of Governor James M. Curley that he will be a candidate for the United States senate is causing quite a stir among the democratic politicians. Ordinarily this announcement should clear the way for State Treasurer Charles F. Curley to make a formal announcement of his candidacy for the democratic nomination for governor as he must retire from his present position at the end of this term, and it is well known that he had aspirations in that direction. But while he may make a tentative announcement, it is understood that he may be selected for an important position in Washington, pending which he will not close the door on the gubernatorial nomination.

However, the Hurley clan will be on the running as Lieutenant-governor Joseph Leo Hurley will seek the chief executive's position, and as he already has the endorsement of Governor Curley, given some time he might seem to be in a commanding position for the positions of State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley and Attorney-general Paul A. Dever are similar. Both are content with their present positions, and ordinarily would be candidates to succeed themselves. Attorney-general Dever, in particular, is making every effort to make his department one of the best of its kind in the union and would like to fill his present position for another term.

However, if conditions arise where it seems to him and his friends that he should be a candidate, he, undoubtedly, will be. In the meantime there is going to be considerable hustling among the democratic leaders in the hope of creating as little friction as possible, so that what may come forth during the next few days is less problematical. However, it may be assumed that, no matter how much controversy one may find among the republicans seeking nominations to the higher offices, the democrats are sure to go them one better.
No Wonder They Believe in "Ghosts"

By Lucius Beebe

I t WILL not tax the memory of the town's oldest inhabitants to recall a time when Ibsen in general, and "Rebecca Gabler," "A Doll's House," and "Ghosts" in particular, were dramatic shockers of the first order. Lord chamberlains, city censors, and civic fathers from St. Petersburg to Boston were adamantly against their presentation and for a time they were closest dramas in the truer sense of the word. When presented at all, it was only by amateur associations in the privacy of London stage clubs or for the edification of the more learned liberals in American university towns. Sedulous and revolutionary were the terms applied to them by the more reticent pious, and Ibsen's genius flourished only like the mushroom, in the vegetable cellars of the theater.

To the generation of theatergoers since the war, however, Ibsen had been very old hat indeed, and about as shocking, say, as the epigrammatic contrivings of Oscar Wilde. His scripts were once more relegated to the dreary attentions of undergraduate players, this time because they were established if somewhat fly-blown, classics, to be digested like the outlines of Victorian furniture, but treated with sophisticated scorn by worldly and knowing folk. Women's suffrage had become an accomplished fact; divorce a convenient and unpromiscuous commonplace, and the sins of wayward fathers became less and less a worry.

The Russians on tour in the hand of the Garrick was sold out during their brief stay, but as the house was promised for the try-out of "First Lady," the company was forced to abandon plans for continuing a prosperous run in that city. From there it toured the South for a fortnight to the tune of the handsomest sort of notices and a leitmotif of "Dixie," for its natural colloquialisms in translation and for the subdued quality, almost amounting to understatement, in the performances of its principal players.

"The Boston Evening Transcript," in the dramatic columns once sacred to "H. T. P." commented as follows:

"To Miss Nazimova and Mr. Ellerbe belong the largest share of the present sense power. Mr. Ellerbe's Os- wald is notable acting. There is an incisiveness to his speech, a shaping of phrases and shading of tones that brings the unfortunate youth to life. He is not a figure from the pages of a classic play, but a suffering human being, haunted by the terror of an inescapable fate, writhing from the unjustified thought that he had brought it upon himself, relieved when he can share his burden with another. Mr. Ellerbe does not overdo it. Through his restraint he suggests more than if he ranted and raved."

It is only a very unprepossessing, person who sees in 'Ghosts' the presentation of a single social problem," she said. "The true ghosts of the play are a whole legion of outmoded and obsolete beliefs and ideals. They are dead ideas of conduct with which we have been brought up, notions of duty and obligation, conceptions of law and order which, in the lines of the play, I characterize as "the cause of all the unhappiness in the world.""

I believe for this reason the play is not concerned with hereditary abuses about which he was concerned, have been remedied. But I have always felt different about "Ghosts." The play is not concerned with hereditary insane insanity only but with far more universal and almost timeless things. I believe for this reason the play is alive and vital in 1935. The translation Miss Nazimova uses for her current production is one she herself made a number of years ago. At the same time she made another translation from the original Norwegian into Russian, but the court officials charged at that time with play censorship refused to permit its presentation, on religious rather than social grounds. Miss Nazimova refers to "Ghosts" as her definitive first love and when, eventually, she obtained permission to play, she chose opposite Or- tensen in Russia, where she was determined that some day she should play Mrs. Alving.

"The same is true of Miss Nazimo-" sured of the more enduring vitality of the play.

“What is my technique, my approach to a part? Very much that of any other actor, even though my company will tell you I am a slave driver at rehearsals,” she said smilingly. “I am of the opinion that the best way to evolve a characterization is while reading the play in the script and to stick to it as you first conceive it. There are so many distractions while in rehearsal, and, besides, the work of the other players around you may tempt you to alter your impersonation of a part when your calm and reflective judgment will tell you not to. I cling, usually, to first impressions and first opinions.”

Mme. Nazimova is an experienced trouper, and few things can surprise her, but opening night in Boston the Commonwealth of Massachusetts spread itself in a manly pop her eyes. It was a performance for charity, the entire house having been taken by the local Red Cross, and Governor James Michael Curley, surrounded by his military staff in full regimentals, occupied the state box.

At the conclusion of the performance Mme. Nazimova was presented with an enormous bouquet of roses fringed with a lace-paper frill and tied with a white silk flag of Massachusetts.

To the Editor of The Standard-Times:

Some few weeks ago, I read a long letter in your paper from Ernest A. Carney, of North Dartmouth.

At first, I could not make heads nor tails of it, and I read it through twice. Finally, I figured out that Mr. Carney thought there was too much buying and selling in the Republican Party, and that it was about time we had a purging in the ranks.

I fully agree with Mr. Carney in this idea, if that was what he excellent paper to explain these meant in the letter, but when I consider the source of this letter I to know what kind of a game Re am somewhat surprised. If my Republican Representative Carney is memory is right, this same Ernest Carney campaigned very vigorously for Frank A. Goodwin, when Goodwin ran for Governor against the nominee of the Republican Convention. If Mr. Carney is now talking about too much irregularity etc., it seems to me that this talk comes a little late from him. He was out on the firing line for a man who apparently was put into the race for Governor solely to knock off Gaspar G. Bacon, the Republican nominee, and he certainly helped to accomplish that end. Therefore, it does not sound well coming from this game.

Mr. Carney, to listen to this talk about reform in the Republican ranks.

Furthermore, I wonder if Mr. Carney would enlighten the Republican voters of the Eighth Bristol District as to some of the activities of his brother, Representative Leo E. J. Carney. We still have in mind the recent action of Councillor Cote in bargaining away his position as Governor’s Councillor and handing it over in a nice little package to the Democratic Governor’s Councillor; to make matters worse, Mr. Curley affronted the people of this district by appointing as new Councillor a man we rejected at the polls a year ago last November.

All true Republicans boiled over with indignation, and not only Republicans, but the voters of this Council District as a whole. Now then, imagine the surprise of some of us on reading in the Morning Mercury the day after the testimonial dinner given to Mr. Russell, the new Councillor, that Representative Leo E. J. Carney, the Republican Representative from the Eighth Bristol District, was present at this dinner. What was a supposedly good Republican doing at a dinner given solely to honor the recent trade between Governor Curley and Mr. Cote?
It seems that the penalty for not having college professors sign the teacher's oath is cancellation of the state charter. It will be a strange day when Harvard University loses its charter and must cease operation because one or more of its professors do not take oath prescribed by Mr. Curley's state government.

Mr. Curley has had strong words for the Nazi government of Germany. It might seem, however, that he is taking a leaf from the Nazi book. If our state can force professors to swear to one oath on penalty of cancellation of the state charter to the University, there is no reason why they should not be forced to swear other oaths. Perhaps there will come the day when they must swear any number of oaths about supporting the Curley administration or something to that effect. It is not impossible.

The point of the issue is the problem of academic freedom. Is a teacher or professor going to be allowed to think his own thoughts, or not? Is he to be allowed to teach according to the unbiased intellectual lights of his university or not? Is he to be allowed intellectual freedom?

There seems no sound reason to stop with teachers if the current theory is correct. Why not make all newspaper reporters, all editorial writers swear allegiance or anything else the state desires? The theory has boundless possibilities, if it is conscientiously followed. It might lead to a very clever way of suppressing the freedom of the press and the freedom of speech.

Raymond J. Kenney, director of the fish and game department, said tonight he had reached no decision as to what would be done, if anything, regarding the four deer slayers, all of whom are Nantucket residents. Anyon said he had heard four other deer were killed today, but had been unable to verify the reports.

The day presented the fish and game department a new technicality. Anyon encountered a man hunting rabbits with hounds. Dogs are banned from the woods during the deer season. The rabbit hunter contended the deer season was closed on Nantucket through the suspension.

Horrible Example, Says WPA Analyst

Writer Terms Curley Project Laughable—Massachusetts, Nevertheless, Is 'Most Progressive State'

By BLAIR MOODY

Boston Dec. 7—Some of the drollest "horrible examples" of WPA and some of its most progressive executive ideas have come out, strangely enough, from the heart of conservative New England, where the political swing started earlier and, to all outward appearances, has gone farthest.

It is typical of the singular mixture of tradition and tunecum that go to make up Massachusetts politics that Gov. C. Whelan Curley, leading Democratic orator of the Berkshire district, a few weeks back seriously proposed a 40-mile "lilac drive" between Boston and Providence as a WPA project without being laughed out of the State House.

Yet he did, and no one so much as cracked a smile. To his fanatical followers, Gov. Curley can do no wrong. To Curley-haters—and nearly every politically conscious person in the state feels one way or the other about him strongly—it came as no surprise. They merely heaved another sigh and put down another black mark in their books opposite the name—"Roosevelt."

There were plenty of black marks there already—it is probably nowhere the erroneous impression that WPA is somewhere between 50 and 60 per cent boodogging gained wider credence than in Massachusetts, and this despite universal respect for Arthur D. F. Rotch, lawyer and his "quotes," to work under WPA, but this did not concern him particularly, because the men were working—115,000 of them—on emergency relief projects and merely had to be transferred. In many cases projects under ERA simply are now continuing under WPA. Now that the logjam is broken in Washington, the transition is speeding up.

Massachusetts has been the most progressive (or conservative, if you will) state in taking care of its own direct relief cases. The idea that Uncle Sam should pay for those who can work and local communities for those who can't has been in effect here long before anyone in Washington had thought of it as a national policy. For months the state has received nothing from the federal treasury for direct relief and has made localities live strictly up to the Massachusetts law that each shall take care of its own poor.

The following table, prepared by the Boston Municipal Research bureau, shows how badly the "home of the bean and the cod" has fared in comparison with the 12 other leading cities of the country in receiving federal funds. Buffalo, the only other city receiving a smaller percentage of federal money, got a large state contribution.
Does anybody imagine that a teacher would be haled into court for ‘perjury’ if he was charged with failing to perform his duties to the best of his ability?

The oath act is an example of law made by politicians to satisfy group clamor. It is not even technically a good act. Educators, however, will probably decide to accept it as a needless infraction, but not one that should disrupt the state’s educational processes. Attention should be centered first on having the act clarified and then, if need be, getting it amended or repealed.

DEER HUNTERS ARE PROBLEM IN BAY STATE

Animals Are Shot Despite Edict Of Governor

Nantucket, Mass., Dec. 7—(AP)—With the Massachusetts deer season ended, Game Warden Ernest P. Anyon tonight reported he had taken the names of four men he said killed deer today and would report them to the state fish and game department.

Whether the four would be prosecuted for hunting out of season—because they, James M. Curley earlier this week had put a ban on deer hunting in Massachusetts—would be for the state department to decide, Anyon said. The season ended today.

Since ordering the suspension, after one hunter was killed and another wounded, the governor admitted hunters who continued the chase violated no law.

Raymond J. Kenney, director of the fish and game department, said tonight he had reached no decision as to what would be done if anything, regarding the four deer slayers, all of whom are Nantucket residents.

Anyon said he had heard four other deer were killed today, but had been unable to verify the reports.

The day presented the fish and game department with a new technicality.

Anyon encountered a man hunting rabbits with hounds and dogs are banned from the woods during the deer season. The rabbit hunter contended the deer season was closed on Nantucket through the suspension.

PAYSON SMITH Praised

Reappointment Is Advocated for Commissioner of Education

By the Editor of The Telegram:

The fact that the question of reappointment of Commissioner of Education Payson Smith has become a matter of newspaper discussion seems to make it proper to present in the newspapers a statement of what has been done educationally in Massachusetts during his service since 1917.

The writer believes the following statements to be indisputably correct:

1. We have much better training of teachers both in state colleges and in private.
2. Teachers in service are better educated and better paid.
3. Schools of Massachusetts have come through the depression in better shape than in most other states.
4. There is better equalization of educational opportunities between rich and poor towns because of state aid.
5. School buildings, both local and state, are much improved in quality and equipment.
6. Opportunities for out-of-school education have been greatly widened, particularly by the State University Extension Service.
7. The percentage of children in school and the length of the average child’s school attendance have increased.
8. The State Department of Education has introduced or improved courses of study; opportunities for the blind, the deaf, the mentally deficient, and the crippled children; school nursing; health work; safety education; conferences on school matters for school officers and school committees.
9. The average child and the average adult have much better educational opportunities.
10. The State Department of Education is giving broader and better service than ever.

Dr. Payson Smith has to a large extent furnished the leadership and inspiration for these advances. His professional ability is recognized throughout the state and nation.

On the basis of past performance and professional standing, who can do better as Commissioner of Education than Payson Smith?

HUGH NIXON,
Secretary, Massachusetts Teachers Association.

Cambridge Solon Files Bill For $2000 Boost

By Telegram State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 7.—A bill under which the salary of Thomas H. Green, Boston City Councilor who was recently appointed Commissioner of Civil Service by Governor Curley, would be increased from $5000 to $7000 a year was filed in the legislature today by Rep. Joseph F. Cleary of Cambridge.

Green began his duties as commissioner this week, following confirmation by the Governor’s Council. Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, Democrat, refused to vote for Green’s confirmation, his break with the Governor on the confirmation attracting wide attention.

Green succeeded James M. Hurley of Marlboro in whose behalf Democrats and others waged campaign for his reappointment, or for rejection of Green’s name by the Council.

also announced yesterday that Judge George F. Leary of Sprin- field will preside at the first session of the Criminal Court, opening Jan. 20, replacing Judge Whiting, who has had the assignment this year.

A District Court judge, yet to be assigned, will preside at the second criminal session opening Jan. 27. Judge Whiting will preside at a three-day jury waived session beginning Jan. 13.
Curley Upsets Applecart

Governor's Decision to Forego Second Term and Seek United States Senatorship Compels Republicans to Rebuild Their Campaign Plans

By BEACON HILL

BOSTON, Dec. 7.—Our most excitable Republican friends in the regions of Beacon Hill are now in about the state of mind of the unfortunate man who said that there were three things he could not remember. For one, he never could remember faces. For another, he could not remember names. As for the third, he could not remember what it was that he could not remember.

Mr. Curley and the rest of the rambunctious Democrats really ought to come to order and say exactly what they are going to do and who is going to do it. Then the Republican strategists could lay out a plan of campaign, and follow it. For some weeks now most of the Republicans hereabouts have been building their 1936 governorship plans on the assumption that they would have the present Governor to combat at the polls; and they have been shaping up a campaign in which Mr. Curley was the issue, and in which Republican victory was to be pursued by a route attacking the Curley administration. The Governor now leaves them high and dry.

There never was any logic in supposing he could prefer re-election, to the Senate contest. This we have pointed out now and again. It is the fact that the Senate was his objective a long time ago—as he himself made plain. It is the further fact that in the last few weeks pressure has been brought to bear on him to change his attitude, and stand for re-election. If he is politically ambitious, the Senate should be his goal—it is a six-year term, with reasonable promise of re-election at the term's conclusion; and the national arena is wider and more stirring than that of the state—especially after one has had two years at the head of the state government. About the only political argument in favor of his continuing in the governorship (assuming his re-election) was that by this means he might be in a more strategic position to aim at a place on the national ticket in 1940; and that thought has been presented to him. Short of that high aspiration, the way to further political power is through the Senate of the United States, rather than on Beacon Hill.

So now what? We are likely to have, on the Republican side, an increased number of candidates for the nomination for Governor, because the going looks a little better; and we are likely to have an increased number of candidates for nomination for the United States Senate—for the opposite reason.

Contrary Mental Processes

There is something about Mr. Curley which seems to make the average Republican perform two contrary mental processes. On the one hand, they fear him as a political opponent. On the other, they heat up at the mention of his name and become obsessed with a furious desire to go out and take a paste at him.

It is futile to try to forecast whom the Democrats will nominate as their candidate for Governor; but whoever he is, he will be regarded by the Republicans as less formidable than James M. The two obvious candidates in sight are the two Hurleys—Joseph L., Lieutenant-Governor, of Fall River; and Charles F., the State Treasurer, of Cambridge. On his own, Charles F. has demonstrated a greater vote-getting persuasiveness than the other; but Joseph L. has, and presumably will still have the support of the present Governor—which is a considerable asset. Yet it may be that neither of these will win the nomination. Mr. Carney, head of the RFC in Massachusetts, received a pleasant little boost at the Fitchburg Democratic gathering last Wednesday, and his name is one to keep under consideration. There will be others.

Bushnell's Pugnacity

On the Republican side, even though the going looks more promising with Mr. Curley out of the way, the thought of Robert Bushnell as a governorship candidate becomes less dramatic by the Governor's retirement from the fray. It
One interesting result of the switch in the political picture this week may be said to be the elimination of former Governor Fuller from the scene—by his own desire. He has no itch for political office, having had his fill of that and in difficult times. He has no illusions about the glory of governorship. There was the possibility that he might have another go at Mr. Curley for the governorship. He defeated him in 1924 and he enjoyed doing so. He likes a fight for the sake of the fight. He is not afraid of Mr. Curley.

Different Propositions

To oppose Mr. Curley's re-election to the governorship and to oppose his election to the United States Senate are two very different propositions. Mr. Fuller does not like legislative work; and he does not particularly like Washington. He does not admire the Senate. Some years ago when there was talk of his running for the Senate he said that he would not take it if it were offered to him on a silver platter, and we find nothing calculated to change his attitude now.

Two names have been played with in the Beacon Hill gossip this week—and they have little in common except that both have come notably into the political talk of the day. One is Mayor Mansfield of Boston, whom some of his admirers would like to see enter the race for Governor or for the Senate. It is not likely that he can be induced or wheedled into either venture.

Boston's Dead Alley

The mayoralty of Boston was long regarded as a political dead alley. Few men have politically survived it. Mr. Curley noticeably broke the tradition. That fact might give encouragement to Frederick W. Mansfield if he liked the thought of going after the governorship or senatorship next year; but at the moment he is not much interested.

The other name tossed into the gossip on the Hill is that of the extraordinary Andrew J. Gillis, alias Bossy Gillis, of Newburyport. There are those who regard him as little better than a gumboil; but even the most supercilious of these must admit that Bossy has a way with him when it comes to getting votes—and that is a quality which every politician respects.

Consider the case of Mr. Gillis: He is the first person ever to be elected to three terms as mayor of his city—though these terms are not consecutive. He carried every ward in his city except the home ward of his opponent. He received more votes than any candidate for mayor ever received in that city before. Consider also this fact: Although he had come into fame, and into the office of mayor, by means of oratorical ground and lofty tumbling, had won political eminence by such contortions as made the old-fashioned folk of Newburyport squirm and lie awake nights—he won this third election by a campaign of dignity and restraint. It is a rare man who can within a short space of years win the highest office in his city by two so widely different methods of campaigning. So the politicians better keep their eye on Bossy Gillis.

Security in House

Just now they are trying to work on Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of North Attleboro, who since he has been in the national House has exhibited a degree of political sagacity and good public service that mark him as a strong figure; but he is powerful and he is happy in his present office, which he probably can occupy for so long as he wishes, and he is not likely to be seduced from it now. The same applies to Platt Andrew, George Holden Tinkham, Allen Treadway and others.
Notes: The report of the special commission on taxation is in. What the state needs is not new methods of taxation so much as new methods of economy. Less taxation and more thrift.

A bill has been filed for a state lottery; and that gives another boost to the new Puritan League which is out to smash gambling.

The commission on uniform state laws wants a rigid ban on machine guns, because “next to the automobile the machine gun has been perhaps the greatest single aid to the gangster.” Next to the automobile? So let’s ban automobiles and clean it all up, what?

The Democrats are looking towards Philadelphia as the convention city—the President likes the idea of being renominated in the City of Brotherly Love. If that won’t work out, there’s Chicago, the Windy City.

ECHOES FROM THE State House

By Telegram

State House Reporter

From now on the files of bills will be busy with a display of industry that would shame the proverbially busy bee. It is anticipated the bills, orders, resolutions and documents will come in the customary pre-legislative session. They have always rolled along in such a deliberate—particularly in recent years—and there is no reason to believe the coming session of the Legislature will be any different than the rest. If anything, it may be worse—or better depending upon the individual viewpoint in such matters.

There probably will be any number of bills on the freak or impossible type. Such proposed pieces of legislation are dumped into the hopper annually and just as regularly dumped out.

One of the hardest of all the hardy annuals which rolls into the office of the clerk of the House or the clerk of the Senate is that resolve dealing with the three hundred-year-old case of Roger Williams. It is said to be readied for still another visit to the Legislature and possibly still another invitation to go back into the mending for another year. In brief, the bill asks that the Legislature revoke the expulsion order of Roger Williams. Three hundred or so years ago—accuracy in history in legislative matters is usually taken lightly—the colony kicked Williams out.

This has since appealed to a lot of people as not exactly cricket and they want something done about it—as a matter of justice to Williams and to establish the state’s reputation for fair play.

Sometimes the impossible bill is passed. For instance, a lot of legislators at the last session never believed it would be possible to push through a bill under which willful neglect would make it possible for recovery under the workmen’s compensation act. Under this bill a person may wilfully contribute to injury and yet the case is recoverable. The bill went into the Legislature, met with plenty of support and despite efforts to beat it was eventually passed and is now one of the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Then there was the Indian Day bill. This was a day to honor the Massachusetts Indian. There not being seven tribes extant in Massachusetts and very little of any tribe, the Legislature passed the bill.

Thomas H. Buckley, the state auditor, has galloped forth as a plumed knight of Massachusetts Democracy. This doesn’t mean that Tom has galloped forth with only noise, racket and display. He has galloped forth with a lance that is tipped with something beside a pink ribbon. He has turned into the National Administration for its treatment of job deserving Democracy. He thought he discovered methods that were dark and mysterious in the Worcester County Democratic League meeting at Fitchburg.

And Mr. Buckley topped off some good fast tilting by cracking down on Commissioner of Education Payson Smith. Too many Maine and New Hampshire people getting jobs in Massachusetts, averred Mr. Buckley.

The Governor did say, however, that it was evident that real estate must have some relief and added that this was particularly true in the case of the home owner. He claimed that third-fourths of the taxation burden is borne by this class of taxpayer.

The Massachusetts Women’s Republican Club is one of the most active political groups in the state. It has almost daily meetings of one sort or another at its Beacon street headquarters in Boston. There are instructive lectures, speakers and round table discussions. Everything tends toward arousing enthusiasm in party ranks and putting a more effective organization into the field in the state and national elections next year.

The activity of this group is typical of other Republican organizations which for some weeks have been preparing for the crucial election tests next year. None is dormant.

The report of the special commission on taxation, sweeping in scope and character, undoubtedly will be the center of extended discussion in the 1936 Legislature. Comment already made concerning the report indicates that Authors of the report claim it is designed primarily to help the home owner and to protect industry in Massachusetts, two topics that were debated under several bills in the last Legislature. The commission apparently doesn’t expect that unanimous approval will greet its recommendations, but seems to believe it has done a good job.

Rep. Tom Dorgan of Boston, after a severe illness, returned to the State House during the week. He was still pretty weak from the ravages of grip, but not too weak to take a crack at opponents of his teachers’ oath law.

The storm beats about the special taxation commission which soared to the heights and plunged to the depths in devising new forms of taxation in a report to the 1936 Legislature. In the report many see nothing more or less than an added tax burden, and there have been some emphatic assertions from many quarters that the real study should be not more taxes, but means to stop spending money which makes more and more taxes necessary.
Is Curley Senate Boom Just Re-election Move?

Work and Wages Issue Seen Source of Trouble If He Sought Renomination; on Offensive Against Coolidge; Report on Taxation Likely Battle Center

By CLINTON P. ROWE
Telegram State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 7.—The reasons back of Governor Curley's decision, as it now stands, to run for the U. S. Senatorial nomination, are a matter of extended discussion. A variety of reasons for his announcement that he will not seek renomination and re-election as Governor have been advanced. There is always one good sound reason that motivates a practical minded candidate for any office and that is the chance of winning it, with the elements that would enter into the question of victory or defeat carefully weighed.

It can hardly be disputed that the success of the Governor's work and wages program is highly debatable. It is costing the state thirteen million dollars on a bond issue. On the word of many a Democratic legislator the unemployment relief results have not been notable and, therefore, charge, least of all have Democrats benefited. Here is dissection and dissatisfaction in party ranks over administration moves, Republicans have hammered the bond issue, purposes and its results with such uncanny effort that an audience has been gained.

Source of Trouble

If the Governor were to seek renomination his work and wages issue would be a source of probable trouble. On top of that, with the bond issue financed out of the gas tax money, the cities and towns of the state next year face an added state tax burden, unless new sources of revenue are discovered. If they are discovered it means more taxes, anyway it is figured, Republicans would not be slow in directing attention of voters to this matter. They would not be slow—they would not do it in fact. Assuming the state to be a thirteen million dollar increase in the state debt. As a candidate for Governor, Mr. Curley was practically bereft of slogans and convincing catch phrases. Work and wages put him in large sums no longer has the appeal that it did in the emotionism of the period when he held it out as a vote lure. A tax collector has come to the conclusion that it is their pocket book which is hit. They are convinced there is no Alladin's lamp.

Appointments that he has made, reappointments that he didn't as his platform in general, or the general lack of jobs, the increase in the state debt, the more or less wholesale sweep of public office holders, conversion of the Governor's Council from a Republican to a Democratic body in a couple of the outstanding Curley administration moves, Republicans have hammered the bond issue, purposes and its results with such uncanny effort that an audience has been gained.

Thus, the situation sums itself up to where the Governor would have to defend himself, and his best efforts in a campaign are not on the defensive. As a candidate for United States Senator he would go forth, judging by what his friends say and light into Sen. Marcus A. Coolidge for the nomination. He would attack Mr. Coolidge on the ground that he has ignored the interests of Massachusetts, has been inactive and hasn't done one thing or another. The exact line wouldn't be so important, but the Governor would be on the offensive.

On the Offensive

One of the outstanding Curley administration moves, Republicans have hammered the bond issue, purposes and its results with such uncanny effort that an audience has been gained.

The report of the special commission on taxation, with its many recommendations covering what the members term new sources of revenue and which critics call an other clip at the taxpayer, will be the center of a bitter battle in the 1936 Legislature. In the comparatively short time since the commission, created by the last Legislature to study and report on taxation, made its report the general volume and general trend of comment has been such as to leave no room for doubt regarding opposition which greets and will continue to greet the recommendations.

If recommendations of the commission were adopted about $17,000,000 in new taxation would result. While some critics of the report do not object to some of the recommendations, may even approve them, there is a well defined trend of thought in nearly everyone they are considered. Perhaps the first consideration and first effort should be toward reducing expenditures.

It is pointed out that energetic moves toward reduction of governmental expenditures would be of more downright solace, material comfort and aid to the taxpayers than energetic efforts to impose additional taxes. While the signers of the commission report emphasized that their recommendations would equalize tax burdens and offer relief to real estate and industry in the aggregate it all amounts to added taxation, however distributed.
The report faces a raking attack when it comes before the Legislature for consideration and action. It is probably sensible, however, to remember that it also will have considerable backing from a considerable legislative bloc. The argument of relief to home owners and industry will be held up in the hope that it will be of sufficient weight to drug along with it some of the other recommendations that may not be popular.

The demand for a curtailment of expenditures—more effort toward paring them down and less effort bent on discovering new sources from which money may be obtained for public expenditure. If the seventeen million dollars additional revenue were assured it would be spent, in all probability, as an addition to present state expenditures, according to freely expressed views. And, according to these three views, it would not be used as a basis for any material reduction in present expenditures. It is all too generalize-ly that way when new revenues are discovered.

The so-called games of skill, which the more blunt and direct term gambling, have been introduced into the revenue picture. But the quest for revenue goes beyond the boldly designated games of skill. It goes so far as to propose the setup of a state lottery and at a time when U. S. Atty. Francis J. W. Fee and other Federal men are cracking down on lotteries in a state-wide sweep.

Recommend License Fee

In its report, the taxation commission recommended a license fee for bagatelle, pinball and similar games. It even recommended that "vending machines" be licensed. Reduced to colloquial terms, "vending machines" may on occasion be identified as slot machines. The memory of a charge in the Senate by Sen. Joseph A. Langone of Boston that twenty thousand dollars had been raised to protect a bill to license bagatelle has not been entirely forgotten. Some Senators said harsh things about the volcanically verbal Mr. Langone. Some ad-vised him to say he was "misquoted." Mr. Langone said, in substance, that the accuracy of reporters who quoted him was at the very least 100 per cent. The bill was killed.

Aside from the commission recommendation, Rep. Raymond F. O'Connell of Springfield, a commission member, has filed a bill to provide for a state lottery, the proceeds of which are to be used for the benefit of cities and towns, and the thing to be run under direction of a board composed of elected state officers.

There should be a battle on this one that will wrinkle the visage of the Sacred Codfish, which hangs in the House chamber and which was painted for the modest sum of 12 shillings, without introduction of a special revenue bill or a colony lottery.

Devastating Experience

The experience which preceded a similar bill in the 1935 Legislature was a devastating one. The presumption that it was an enlightening experience has been premature, for the bill is back in the hopper again, to dangle as a tempting bit for cities and towns which labor constantly with the question of revenue. Not only labor with it, but look longingly to kindy paternalistic treatment and consideration from the Commonwealth.

In the last Legislature a similar lottery bill appeared to be making rather remarkable progress, progress of such a nature that some considered its passage either indicated as a fact or with the startlingly close vote. At this juncture, Mr. Langone, in a public state-ment, lashed the bill in a stinging denunciation. And shortly afterward the attempt to pass it lapsed with hollow sounding flop.

It has been noted by many that lottery bills, not entirely new as proposed legislation, have gradually in the matter of votes obtainable in the Legislature. Receiving practically none at the outset, such legislation has gained more and more, although never securing the amount actually neces-sary to put the state into such a business.

Studies 1936 Measure

Governor Curley has apparently begun preliminary study of his annual message to the 1936 Legislature. For one thing, it will undoubtedly contain a recommendation for a new prison building to replace the present State Prison at Charlestown. Commissioner of Corrections Arthur T. Lyman will add his recommendation for a new prison building to that of the Governor.

The agitation for a new prison was revived during the last week as a result of a break at Charlestown. Governor Curley recommended, unsuccessfully, a new State prison last year. He said he expected to make the 100 million dollars recommendation to the incoming Legislature.

In the minds of some this forecast another bond issue for public building construction. A building bond issue was beaten in the last Legislature, although the now much-discussed thirteen million dollar highways issue, attacked heartily by Republicans and center of a rising storm of criticism in Democratic ranks on the job or the labor issue, was finally pushed through.

Sees Building Need

On the surface it would appear that a majority of the Legislators, some in both parties, remembering the last bond issue and its consequences, would shy nimbly away from another one, especially in an election year. But yet the Ways and Means Committee, touring public institutions, professes to be finding need of a building program, al-though not committing itself to any recommendations.

Since the Governor is running for the Senate on a broad program of social security and his efforts to establish it as mayor of Boston and as Governor, it is anticipated that his annual message may delve deep-i into the subject.

With the opening of the 1936 session of the Legislature, less than a month away, a com-pared very small number of bills, petitions and resolves have been filed - a fact watched with grateful and hopeful interest by that legislative group which is still sagging under the strain of the last session's record breaking deluge of bills and other matters. Something around 100 items have been filed for legislative con-sideration.

Time for More Bills

This is viewed as gratifying by legislators and they hope it is real-ly indicative of a rising general interest. But there is still plenty of time and it is not improbable that the bills, petitions and other documents will be dropped into the clerks' offices in a sufficiently abundant measure.

Many of the legislators are aiming for a short session, if it is an election year and they don't want to be tied up at the State House when it behooves them to be out on the hustings, telling their epic story to a constituency and building for re-election. The last record breaking session aroused criticism for its length. The present is patriotically expressed disgust over the rambling, fighting, argumentative protracted session of last year.

The public got a bit overfed on it and its disgust was rather apparent. Many of the legislators fear that another protracted session would intensify this disgust and that disgust, ordinary, intensified or in any other form, is an unhealthy diet on the part of the great body politic at election time.

Governor Curley to Attend Festivities; Dinner and Dancing Are Included in the Program

Fun in charity's aid is yours at the Club Mayfair tonight.
Noted entertainers, singers, dancers, stage and radio stars, Governor Curley and other dignitaries—tonight at the Mayfair, for the Christmas Basket Fund.

In the swanky night club in Broadway, just off Stuart street, there will also be dining and dancing in philanthropy's name.

Tonight brings the second Sunday benefit for the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund, now in its 23rd year.

Benny Ginsburg, the "Young Maestro" of the Mayfair, is presenting a brilliant two-hour program of entertainment, to be preceded by a de luxe dinner, from 8 to 10 o'clock, at $2.50 a person.

SPARKLING CARD

An avalanche of appeals, all sounding the same note of sorrow and hopelessness, jams the Christmas Basket Fund Editor's mail daily.

Never in any previous year has the need been so great, it would appear, in unfortunate families of Greater Boston. Never have contributions to the fund been so welcome—even contributions of pennies, nickels or dimes.
Send in your contributions NOW. Within the coming week the food to go into the Christmas baskets sent out by the fund must be ordered and deliveries arranged.
Address contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund Editor, 5 Winthrop square, or call at Basket Fund headquarters, 294 Devonshire street, just off Summer street.

From 10 to 12 midnight there will be two solid hours of sparkling entertainment, followed by dancing until 2 a.m. Altogether, six hours of dining, dancing and big-time entertainment for Christmas Basket Fund patrons who may be assured that they are contributing substantially to the 23rd annual Christmas charity of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser—while having the time of their lives.

Headed by the internationally known dancing duo, Frank Lischeron and Evelyn Adams, the Club Mayfair floor show will be augmented by a long list of stage, radio and vaudeville artists.

Through the generosity of Mr. Ginsburg a substantial share of all proceeds of the evening's entertainment will be turned over to the Christmas Basket Fund.

In addition a host of stage and radio stars will be present. The Three Variety Boys have been added to the Mayfair show program headed by Lischeron and Adams, who came to Boston direct from the Congress Hotel Josef Urban Room in Chicago. Adrian O'Brien, Larry Thornton, Carl Moore and Alice O'Leary are other featured performers on the program.

Gov. Curley, who purchased the first ticket for the Mayfair's Christmas Basket Fund benefit from Miss Ann Marsia, feature writer for the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser, has promised to be present. Any number of state officials and other well known figures in civic, social and political circles will also attend.

From 12 to 2 a.m., there will be dancing to the music of Joe Rine's Mayfair Orchestra. Reservations will be accepted through Sunday, Maestro Ginsburg announced, Telephone Liberty 0700.

ANOTHER SHOW

Next Thursday evening—December 12th—another big Basket Fund Night will be held in the Hotel Brunswick's beautiful Casino Room. Managing Directors L. Marshall Thompson and Ernest Borden of the famous Boston hotelery at Boylston and Clarendon streets will present a sparkling program of entertainment with the music of Eddie Elkins' Radio Orchestra. A nationally famous comedian of stage, screen and radio has been invited to preside over the program as master of ceremonies and there will be a long list of theatrical celebrities on hand to entertain the Christmas Basket Fund diners.

As in the case of Club Mayfair, the Brunswick directors will contribute a generous percentage of all proceeds derived from the de luxe dinner to be served throughout the evening at $2.50 per person. Not only will the 1935 Christmas Basket Fund benefit from the dinner checks but also from all other business done in the beautiful Casino Room lounge and cocktail bar.

Thursday evening.

Two nights following the Brunswick party, the annual Gala Skaters' Frolic at Boston Arena, St. Botolph street, Back Bay, will be held. The Christmas Basket Fund will derive a share of the proceeds of the affair which takes place Saturday evening.

HOME ON GRANGE
TUNE FOR MURPHY

The Senator Finds Council
Ready to Whistle It

THE SENATOR!

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American.

We all say we will have the same and while Timmy is mixing another round, The Senator begins laughing inside himself until finally he is going all over like a relieved Santa Claus the day after Christmas.

"Leave us in on it and spare the premises," suggests Timmy, rolling the bitters in a little glass.

"I was going to do that because it is too good to keep," says The Senator, and he bursts into song. It is very bad when The Senator sings and usually he doesn't have any tune at all, but this time he has a tune and you can recognize it and this is how he is singing:

"Home, home on the grange,

"Range," says Timmy.

"Grange," says The Senator. "Don't you get it?"

"I am just a thick bartender," says Timmy, "but maybe it is not in the guidebook yet. I was after thinking it was the White House favorite song but I do not remember no Murphys in it. There was a Murphy on our street. Paddy Murphy his name was . . ."

This is not Paddy Murphy (begins The Senator) but a fellow named Howard Haines Murphy who is a big shot in the grange and I don't mean range. That is, the Governor thinks he is a big shot in the grange, and if you remember a couple of weeks ago the Governor nominated Howard Haines Murphy to be commissioner of agriculture in place of Edgar L. Gillett.

The Senator

The bad thing about Gillett is he once had a farm up in Westfield beside Joe Ely's house and Joe Ely gets him the job. The Governor, some how does not take to those Joe Ely appointments, and he does not think that Gillett could ever raise a beard.

Anyhow, the Governor's Council is getting ready to give Mr. Murphy the well-known leg next Wednesday and if you think the Governor will be feeling bad about it, you got another think.

Remember a year ago last summer when the Governor was campaigning along the Cape and suddenly a story comes that he has been elected a member of the State Grange at Hyannis and all those salt-hated farmers from the canal to Truro are with him up to the tops of their turnips?

NOMINATED FOR GRANGE

Well, it was Mr. Murphy, of Osterville, who sponsored the Governor for grange membership and you can be sure the Governor is deeply grateful, especially in November when the returns start rolling in to show that all his fellow grangers — Republicans mostly — have done very nobly by him, indeed.

So when Gillett's term is about up December lst, the Governor decides he will do very handsomely at one fell swoop by both Howard Haines Murphy and the fellow grangers by nominating Mr. Murphy for the job. This looks like a smart repayment of political debt and one that will put the Governor in very strong with his farming constituents and the Governor, I hear, is even thinking of starting a little garden out in his Jamaica-way backyard just to show the grange it means it.

First trouble comes when the Republicans on the council start asking who is Howard Haines Murphy and they are told he is not only a farmer but an engineer and a mail truck driver and also the guy who sponsors the Governor for the grange.

Right away there is some expression of doubt as to Mr. Murphy's qualifications, but everybody thinks this is just natural coming from the Republicans who are trying to make off the only thing Mr. Murphy raises is dust with a mail truck. (The same all around, Timmy.)

TAKES TUMBLE TO MURPHY

I hear the real trouble starts last Tuesday when the Lieutenant Governor ducks in to see the Governor and says: "Jim, who is this fellow Murphy who you are palming off on us as commissioner of agriculture?"

And the Governor says: "Joe, he is a farmer down on the Cape and a prominent member of my grange and I think he might make a good commissioner."

"Maybe he would," says Joe, "only you will have to convince the grange first because here are a lot of telegrams from the grange and they do not seem to want him. In fact, they are positive about it. And here are some more from the Massachusetts Farm Bureau and they do want him either. Do you suppose there is a slight error somewhere? Have you got the right Murphy?"

Well, Timmy, maybe it was Paddy Murphy the Governor meant. Anywhere, it is agreed there was a slight error and Howard Haines Murphy's appointment was tabled for a week. From what I hear he will get the leg Wednesday and it will all be marked up to profit and loss.

Who'll get it? I've got a sneaking idea Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert may be the man. For three reasons. First, he was commissioner for a long time and did a swell job. Second, Joe Ely dropped him. Third, the State Grange thinks he's okay, and we grangers have got to hang together. The same thing, Timmy. All around.
Bay State ‘Charm Queen’
Makes Her Own Clothes

‘Her Majesty’ Barbara Keith’s Taste in Dress ‘Perfect’;

Now they call her, “Her Majesty, Queen Barbara Keith, of Brookline.”

For the news has spread around that Miss Keith became “The Queen of Charm” when she won the “State of Massachusetts Charm Contest” only a week ago.

Now, everywhere she goes, there’s an approving smile of recognition for this lovely, sleek-haired girl.

She is always strikingly dressed, and every detail of her costume is in perfect taste. Certainly she has an unusual talent for wearing clothes.

Because there are so many people who would like to know more about “the girl behind the picture,” she was induced to talk about herself.

MAKES OWN CLOTHES

And the first surprising admission she made was that she makes and designs all her own clothes. “That’s the only way,” she said, “that I can afford to have clothes that really suit me.”

“And I like very extreme, yet simple, styles.”

“I think all women should study their type, and dress accordingly. For the clothes you wear should be an expression of the sort of world you are.”

So Barbara Keith has studied her type and has very wisely decided that frills and fussiness would be quite incongruous with her smooth beauty.

When she can’t think of an original design for a new dress, she peruses the better fashion magazines for ideas.

“Sometimes,” she said, “I combine several ideas in one dress. And I’ll forever ripping up my old dresses, changing them around and making them look like new.”

At the moment, she was wearing a dubonnet woolen tunic trimmed with a matching shade of metallic cloth about the sleeves and collar. She had made a turban of the same material as her dress.

TELLS OF AMBITIONS

She talked, then, of her ambitions which are, “To be a dramatic actress, a singer, a dancer, or a radio star.”

“Or perhaps all four,” she said.

Speculation is Rife on Curley Senate Stand

Junior Senator Coolidge May Demand the Administration Support on Post of Envoy

By Bernard J. Doherty

Gov. Curley's decision to run for senator instead of for re-election to his present office continues to be the outstanding topic of conversation among the politicians.

Despite the fact that the Governor had stated directly, in answer to a point blank question, that he regards his declaration in Rockland to be a formal announcement of his candidacy, speculation is at fever height.

"Does he mean it any more than he did when he practically made the same statement several months ago at the Fall River banquet to Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley?"

That is the question that is agitating the politicians, Republicans and Democrats alike.

BETS LAID ON OUTCOME

Interest, in fact, is so intense that bets are being laid on the outcome.

Those close to the governor are positive that the die has been cast. One official has backed up his inside knowledge to the extent of taking a 50 to 1 wager. This official is generally "right."

Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley was forced into his open declaration for the governorship by newspapers. He happened to be present in the governor's office when the governor was asked if he meant the Rockland statement.

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley has made no secret that he would run for governor or senator, depending upon the governor's own choice.

When told of the governor's positive stand for the senatorship, he reiterated that he "would seek higher office."

SEN. COOLIDGE POSITION

In the light of his announcement, the position of Senator Marcus A. Coolidge of Fitchburg is not a pleasant one. The junior senator can of course challenge the Curley ambition. Coolidge, however, is quoted as saying that "the game is getting tough for the elders" and from his attitude shows little inclination to joust with the energetic chief executive.

There are many who believe that the Democratic banquet in Fitchburg City Hall was originally intended as a vehicle from which to launch a second term boom for the senator. If this supposition is correct, the night before announcement of Governor Curley for the senate brought about a quick change in plans.

Senator Coolidge can now go to Washington and ask administration backing against the Governor. Failing to get this he will be in a position to demand appointment to a diplomatic post.

Curley Asked To Keep Smith

Governor Curley was urged to reappoint Dr. Payson Smith as commissioner of education, in a resolution unanimously passed yesterday by the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools yesterday concluded its 50th annual meeting in Hotel Statler.

The resolution in support of Dr. Smith was drawn up by a group of the Association members headed by President William A. Nelson of Smith College and read to the assembly by Principal William C. Hill of Springfield Classical High School.

It read in part: "We wish to go on record as expressing our appreciation of the services rendered to New England education by Dr. Payson Smith. We recommend that he be reappointed."

After unanimously adopting the resolution, it was handed to George Stewart Miller of Tufts College to be delivered to the governor tomorrow.
NORTON RAPS MANSFIELD FOR CURLEY THRUST

Councillor Charges Mayor Violated Own Promises to Reduce City Expenses

Rallying to the cause of Gov. Curley, whose administration as mayor of Boston was attacked by Mayor Mansfield as extravagant, City Councillor Clement A. Norton yesterday charged that Mansfield has violated his own promises to reduce city expenses.

In a letter to the mayor, Norton said:

"You blame the present financial condition of the city on your predecessor. Don't you think you have had a little something to do with putting Boston in the situation it now faces?"

"You were elected on a solemn promise to the people of Boston to reduce city expenses. You claimed that 65 per cent of every $1 spent at City Hall went to 'waste, graft or corruption.' That was the outstanding claim of your campaign. You promised to remedy conditions. What do we find?"

RAPS CENSUS HIRING

"You violated that promise to reduce city expenses. More money is spent today by the city than ever before. None of your predecessors dared to put on 400 political friends to take a city census at a cost to the city of over $65,000. The police always did this work in the past.

"With 100,000 men, women and children in Boston not getting enough to eat, you are to spend $60,000 for architects' fees for a new City Hall, ask for $430,000 in order to put marble floors in the cellar of the Quincy Hall Market along with other unnecessary work that the market men rightly object to.

"Never in the history of this city has the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation refused to bid on city ferryboats until today. Never was there such waste as in our million-dollar snow removal storm, the highest ever.

"When you took office you knew what the situation was. You promised to remedy conditions, to reduce expenditures. You increased them. You went back on your word to the people of Boston."

Governor Curley had already replied to the mayor's charge, and had called upon Mansfield to resign his office, the governor stating:

"Mayor Mansfield has been whining since he entered office. He is still whining. The best service he can render to the city of Boston is to resign from the office in which he has proven himself so incompetent."

In connection with alleged extravagances of the city, a protest mass meeting will be held in Tremont Temple at 3 p.m. today, sponsored by the Real Estate Owners' and Tenants' League of Boston.

Nantucket, Dec. 7—Nantucket's one-week deer season ended tonight, but not the legal problems which it occasioned.

A week of controversy and contradictory orders was climaxcd today when Game Warden Ernest P. Anyon booked four hunters for killing deer in violation of Governor James M. Curley's order which suspended the season last Tuesday.

This act was a puzzle to the booked hunters because this morning, posters bearing Anyon's name, announced that the governor's ban had been lifted.

Anyon refused to say if the posters bearing his name were posted by him. Fish and Game Commissioner Raymond Kenney denied the governor's ban had been lifted.

The trouble started when the governor, at the request of local selectmen, suspended hunting last Tuesday, following the death of one hunter and the serious wounding of another.

Probate Judge George M. Poland, a summer resident of the island who came here to hunt deer, said the Governor's ban was illegal. He defied the authorities to arrest him and promised to defend without costs any other hunters who were charged with hunting out of season.

According to posters issued today, the Governor's ban was lifted.

According to Game Warden Anyon's actions in booking both deer hunters and a rabbit hunter, the season was both open and closed at the same time.

According to Judge Poland, the Governor could not suspend the season.

According to Commr. Kenney, the season was closed since last Tuesday night and had not been reopened.

So, when darkness fell tonight, the harassed deer were safe for another year and the harassed hunters were, to say the least, perplexed.
POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

By JOHN D. MERRILL

Mayor Bates of Salem

There is a growing sentiment in favor of the nomination of Mayor George J. Bates of Salem for one of the leading places on the Republican state ticket. A few years ago the Republican organization was willing to do its best to nominate Mayor Bates for State Auditor, but that place was not attractive to the Salem Mayor and he refused to run. His friends say now that nothing lower than a place on the ticket would be acceptable to him, and they are not certain that he cares under any circumstances to try for a state office.

Mr Bates has made an outstanding record as Mayor. Although a Republican, he has been reelected several times in a city which is strongly Democratic. He had no opposition this year. Before he became Mayor, he served several terms in the Legislature and consequently is familiar with affairs on Beacon Hill. Democrats as well as Republicans say he would add greatly to the strength of the Republican ticket.

No one has yet definitely offered himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor. Winfield A. Schuster of Douglas, who has served for some time in the Governor’s Council, would like, it is said, to be promoted, but he has made no statement as to his intentions. Mr Schuster also has been a determined opponent of Gov Curley, and that record is worth something in a Republican primary. The Douglas man was very friendly to Gov Ely while the latter was at the State House.

Senator Theodore R. Plunkett of Adams has been suggested as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Unfortunately for him, because he voted for Hems in Curley’s appropriation bills, some of his critics have put the Adams Senator in the group of Curley Republicans, so-called. Mr Plunkett’s offense, however, if it was an offense, was mild, as he merely voted for a larged appropriation than the Republican leaders wanted, although they agreed that smaller sums should be spent. In the coming session of the Legislature he may “live down” those charges.

But Mr Plunkett has another obstacle in the way to the nomination for Lieutenant Governor. Ex-State Treasurer John W. Hellig is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, and the politicians say the western part of the state must not expect too much from the Republican voters in the primary.

Congressman Martin

In all of the gossip about candidates for places on the Republican state ticket, one very prominent member of that party has almost entirely fallen through the cracks. "continued"
STATE S. P. C. A. ENTERS NANTUCKET DEER ROW
Urges Extermination of Animals Due to In-Breeding Diseases

While four more deer were shot on Nantucket Island yesterday despite Gov. Curley's ban, the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals entered the argument last night by urging complete extermination of Nantucket's herd of 400 odd deer.

Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the S. P. C. A., said that the herd, through inbreeding, was developing a diseased and definitely inferior type of animal, and that the society felt they should be killed in the most humane manner possible.

The Governor has admitted that he ban on hunting could not be legally enforced but urged Judge Poland to respect the ban as a "duty to the community."
PUBLIC TO HAVE CHANCE TO INSPECT CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL NEXT THURSDAY

These bright-faced youngsters at the Children's Hospital are helping (left to right) Mrs Gordon Abbott Jr, Mrs John Hallowell and Mrs F. Wadsworth Bisk address invitations for the open house which both the Children's and Infants' Hospitals will hold Thursday from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock during "Come-and-See-Go-and-Tell" Week, sponsored by the Women's Crusade on behalf of the 100 health and social agencies in the Community Federation of Boston.

An unusually interesting opportunity for the public to see the work of the Children's Hospital will be afforded at the hospital open house next Thursday afternoon, starting at 2:30.

Graduate nurses in cap and starched uniform will enact a little sketch written by Miss Stella Goostray, head of the hospital training school, which shows how a baby is received at the out-patient department of the hospital and traces it through the steps leading to diagnosis, treatment and cure of its malady in the hospital.

Wards and laboratories of the hospital will be on view, with nurses and staff members as guides. Tea will be served at the end of the tour.

Heading the committee of patronesses of the hospital arranging the affair are Mrs Edwin Kane and Mrs Bartlett Harwood of Commonwealth Ave. Pourers at the tea tables will include Mrs George P. Gardner, Mrs Philip Stockton, Mrs Edwin S. Webster, Mrs Gordon Abbott, Mrs George Monks and Mrs Edward C. Donnelly.
BRITISH CHARITY BALL ATTENDED BY 800 GUESTS

More than 800 guests enjoyed the 26th annual British charity ball in the ballroom of the Copley-Plaza last evening. The room was decorated with British and American flags. The ball benefited the British Charitable Society and the Woman's Auxiliary charity work.

Among the patrons and patronesses were Gov. James M. Curley, Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Jealous, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Carnegie Steele, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart, Mrs. Stuart Tod and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Wyde.

The reception committee included: Mrs. Herbert C. Gruber, Mrs. Herbert J. McMillan, Mrs John Lyon, Mrs. Mary E. Pappano, John H. Prentice, Mrs. Orlo Kastner, Mrs. Henry F. Riley, Mrs. William A. Operetta Tomorrow
Will Benefit School
Many new names have been added to the already long list of patrons and patronesses for the operetta, "The China Shop," to be given at the Repertory Theatre tomorrow evening for the benefit of the Boston Speech School for Crippled Children. Among them are Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Tuckerman, Judge Emma Fall Mahoney, Miss Deborah, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin O. Gilman, Mrs. H. Lawrence Southwick, the Hon. John J. Murray of Boston University, the Hon. Dr. Alexander McGregor, Prof. Murray's nomination was held up at last week's council meeting, probably because he still is being considered as a prospective successor to Maj. Cronin. No difficulty is expected to be confronted in obtaining Murray's confirmation for associate commissioner of labor and industries to succeed Edward Fisher of Lowell.

FARMERS WAGE
WAR ON MURPHY
Aroused by Gov. Curley's Choice for Agriculture
Post—May Get Hearing

The protests of the farmers are based on the charge that Murphy is not sufficiently well versed with their needs to fill this important state post in a competent manner.

One feature of the evening was the singing of popular college songs of New England by alumni of the colleges present. Another was the singing of a Harvard song by the oldest football end of the university, Leo H. Leary, and the youngest, Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr.

Short addresses were given by Judge George C. Sweeney of the United States district court; Judge John C. Mahoney of the United States district court at Providence and Postmaster Tague.

The Governor is expected to reappoint Arthur T. Lyman of Westwood as commissioner of public safety. His predecessor, was originally sentenced to a year. He appealed, received a new trial, and the case was not pressed. Ralph B. Goldsmith of Beverly, a plumber, received a year, and Gordon Hambrecht of Salem, 18 months.

Shaub, the only man in prison in connection with the burning of the Amdur-Limon leather plant for its destruction by fire.

Despite the fact that he served only about a year, Limon was pardoned by Gov. Curley. Osman never went to jail. Godsmith and Hambrecht served a part of their sentences and both were paroled.

Limon and Hambrecht pleaded guilty. During the trial Hambrecht testified that Goldsmith was his assistant on the job. He said he carried casks of alcohol and oil to the third floor of the plant and placed them under a pile of skids, on one occasion being assisted by Osman.

Hambrecht testified he and Shaub received $1750 each for their part.

Shaub pleaded not guilty and steadfastly asserted his innocence. But despite these facts he is the only one of the five still behind the bars.
LOCAL POLITICS

By W. E. MULLINS

The Huey Long theme is somewhat shopworn as a political topic, yet there is a striking analogy in many respects between the public career of the late Louisiana senator and Gov. Curley's public career as he outlined it in retrospect last week.

The Kingfish first became Governor of his state, transformed the Democratic party there into a personal machine and used the great power of his office to get himself elected to the U. S. Senate, whence he operated the state government by remote control.

In the upbuilding of the Long party in Louisiana, Democrats like Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans, not parts of the great machine, were destroyed, and the state service was filled with Long satellites while Gov. O. K. Allen became his chief marionette back home in the cane brakes.

In Washington, Long's visions of establishing an empire with every man a king through the operation of his incredible share-the-wealth scheme of distributing property and money grew to such proportions as to strike fear into the heart of President Roosevelt as he viewed the mischievous possibilities.

Massachusetts, once one of the great conservative states of the Union and a bulwark of Democracy, has a Governor now proceeding toward the construction of a Curley party from which are excluded even those lifelong Democrats who supported Brig. Gen. Charles H. Cole against him only last year.

With his numerous appointments thus far and with a full year to go, he has the opportunity of filling the state service with men of his own personal choice who have been under obligation to him rather than to a political party.

HURLEY FOR GOVERNOR

As he prepares to drag Senator Marcus A. Coolidge out of his seat without so much as a by-your-leave, he also decides to name Lt. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley as his successor, undeniably with the intention of running Massachusetts from Washington.

In the use of violence there is no analogy. Long countenanced strong arm methods; but Gov. Curley does not resort to violence. True, there are the isolated instances in which he cracked Fred Enwright on the noggin and slapped down Gael Cockley; but these were the indignant outbursts of a red-blooded, two-fisted man.

The Governor's appeal for election will be made with an issue based on social security. As discussed by a man of his eloquence, such an appeal, with its rosy promises of security for the aged, the weak and the unfortunate in the great army of the unemployed, can sway thousands.

This appeal, however, differs only slightly from that employed by Huey Long. The difference between social security and share-the-wealth is only the difference between tweedledee and tweedle dum. It is taking from those who have and giving to those who have not.

The prospect is not bright that any one can persuade the great masses of the people that his promises for social security can no more be redeemed than have been his recent promises to provide work and wages for the jobless.

That he has failed to provide work and wages in abundance, as he promised, is demonstrated any morning in the week by the crowds that assemble outside his home to appeal for work and wages.

EXTENT OF FAILURE

Add to these unfortunates those nearby who do not go to the Jamaica way and those in every city in the commonwealth lacking the opportunity to journey there to add their appeals to those who do see the Governor, and one has only an idea of the extent of his failure and an explanation of why he has begun to crack under the strain of hopelessness from which he now decides he must escape.

It is probably true that no Governor could have solved the unemployment problem; but it is also true that no other candidate, date promised he would solve it. Work and wages, worn threadbare last year, can be cloaked next year in terms of social security to give his Republican opponent an idea of the sort of campaign he must wage.

The Governor's declaration that he proposes to go to the Senate, while not accepted generally as genuine in his own party, has resulted in creating an attitude of indifference toward the contest for the governorship. Its importance is not now so great as it was.

In the contest for the Senate Mr. Curley will be opposed probably by Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton or Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Beverly. Without casting any reflections on the various men seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, this shift on Mr. Curley's part means that he will be given more vigorous opposition, because either Weeks or Lodge is equipped to make a stand-up fight.

If the Governor has a better campaign issue as a candidate for senator, he also will have a sturdier opponent. The opponent, however, should be prepared to discuss the Townsend plan, old age pensions, a 30-hour work-week, unemployment insurance, and—possibly—work and wages again.
Warden ‘Between Horns of Dilemma’
Over 4 Who Shot Deer on His Advice

NANTUCKET, Dec. 7—Confusion as to whether the deer hunting season was on or off today in Nantucket reached a climax early tonight, when Ernest P. Anyon, district game warden, admitted that he did not know how to proceed with the prosecution of four men whose names he took for killing deer today.

Anyon was faced with dilemma, he said, because he took the names of the men after he had posted upon the walls of the postoffice a notice reading: “All right to hunt deer today, Saturday, Dec. 7. Signed, ‘Anyon.’” Anyon said he was authorized to sign his name to the notice by Carl G. Bates, chief game warden.

Whether the four would be prosecuted for hunting out of season—because Gov. Curley earlier this week had put a ban on deer hunting in Nantucket—would be for the state department to decide, Anyon said. Since ordering the suspension, after one hunter was killed and another wounded, the Governor admitted hunters who continued the chase violated no law.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I think the article in Sunday’s Herald by Mr. Mullins on the political situation contains unjust criticism of Mr. Cote and Mr. Baker, former councillors, and Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles. The article suggests that they, together with other renegade Republicans, are ungrateful in failing to come to the rescue of the Democratic war chest. This is not fair. Apparently they each made a bargain with the Governor to swap their support and assistance in exchange for appointment to jobs. They have their jobs; the Governor has accomplished his ends; the transaction is complete; the full price has been paid. Mr. Cote, Mr. Baker and Mr. Goodwin cannot be expected to put up their good cash in addition.

S. P. C. A. FOR KILLING OF DEER HERD

Dr. Rowley Sees Need of Such Action in Nantucket

BY LESTER ALLEN

Post Staff Correspondent

NANTUCKET, Dec. 7—Total extermination of the deer of Nantucket Island is advocated by Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the American Humane Educational Society, one of the most influential protectors of wild game, it was revealed here today as a conflict of opinion raging between two factions on the island.

The opinion of the head of the M. S. P. C. A., the organization always in the forefront of the fight to protect wild animals from hunters, is based upon an exhaustive study made of the Nantucket Island deer herd of 500 slowly decimating animals, practically all suffering from the effects of deficient forestage and interbreeding.

"Our study of the deer of Nantucket Island prompts the society to advocate the swift extermination of the deer to put an end to their sufferings," said Dr. Rowley in response to a query from a group of Nantucket citizens who sought to protect the helpless and harmless deer. "Some humane means should be found of killing them, perhaps by shooting them with a weapon of sufficient accuracy that none of the animals would drag themselves off wounded to die by degrees."

In Bad Physical Condition

This stand of the M. S. P. C. A. was taken as a result of the report of an autopsy on a deer that died at Angel Memorial Hospital in Boston. The deer was sent to Boston by Game Warden Ernest P. Anyon, when the animal was found in the State Forest in a state of complete helplessness.

Dr. Rowley reported that the autopsy conducted on the deer after its death at Angel Memorial Hospital showed that the animal suffered from rickets, callouses on both eyes, complete paralysis of its hind legs and starvation. The condition was due to deficient diet and interbreeding. It was reported.

The herd of deer that attracted a host of hunters from all points in Massachusetts, when over 150 arriving for the one-week season, are undersized, and lacking in the natural caution that most deer display when stalked by hunters.

The method of hunting them is to drive the animals into the waiting guns of the nimrods and shoot them down as they emerged from the cover of the scrub pine.

Most of Them Helplessly Blind

Most of the deer are so blind that they travel in small herds, keeping their heads to the withers of the deer ahead so that they will not stray from the main body and starve to death.

Throughout today a controversy raged between the hunters who favor keeping the season open until all the deer are exterminated, and those who favor protecting the deer from the incursion of hunters from the mainland.

The town fathers appealed to Governor Curley to close the season, they stated today, solely because of the loss of a human life, when George Sylvia, a local huntsman, was shot. They agreed that the deer are a nuisance and an expense to the island, and that it would probably be better to kill them off.

Game Wardens in Quandary

But, it was pointed out, the presence of so many hunters in the scanty forests of the island is a constant menace because of the ever-present danger of shooting parties crossing one another and firing at the sound of crashing branches and twigs in the thickets in the belief that deer are passing.

Game wardens sent here from Vineyard Haven and from the mainland to reinforce Game Warden Anyon, were at loss today to know just what to do in the face of Governor Curley's command that there is no law to compel the closing of the season before sundown tonight. Gunners were out in the woods in force, and tonight it was reported that a dozen deer had been killed.

A checkup at the steamboat wharf showed that no deer have been shipped off the island since Wednesday. But it is believed the carcasses of at least 24 are waiting to be shipped tomorrow or Monday. Not until Monday or Tuesday will it be known how many deer were killed in the week open season.

At that time the Division of Fisheries and Game will have received the hunters' reports on their kill.

Undecided on Court Action
Court action was undecided tonight as game wardens were at a loss whether they could prosecute for shooting deer out of season in view of Governor Curley's reversal of his closed season opinion. Allen Holdgate, an islander, had volunteered as a test case, and Judge George M. Poland stated he would represent him if the matter came to court.

But, at the same time, Winthrop Ellen and Norman La Fountaine stated they would sue the game wardens to recover for the loss of a deer which they found wounded and which was shot and killed by Game Warden Anyon, who then confiscated the carcass. Because of uncertainty of the legal status of the game law violations it was not decided tonight whether court action would ensue.

LEGAL TANGLE

Four Deer Hunters Booked for Violation of Governor's Edict Closing Season in Nantucket—Possibility of Prosecution Shrouded in Doubt

NANTUCKET, Dec. 7 (AP)—With the Massachusetts deer season ended Game Warden Ernest P. Anyon tonight reported he had taken the names of four men said killed deer today and would report them to the State Fish and Game Department.

Whether the four would be prosecuted for hunting out of season—because Governor Curley earlier this week had put a ban on deer hunting in Massachusetts—would be for the State department to decide, Anyon said. The State season ended today.

Since ordering the suspension, after one hunter was killed and another wounded, the Governor admitted hunters who continued the chase violated no law.

Raymond J. Kenney, director of the Fish and Game Department, said tonight he had reached no decision as to what would be done, if anything, regarding the four deer slayers, all of whom are Nantucket residents.

Anyon said he had heard four other deer were killed today, but had been unable to verify the reports.

The day presented the Fish and Game Department with a new technicality. Anyon encountered a man hunting rabbits with hounds and dogs that are banned from the woods during the deer season. The rabbit hunter contended the deer season was closed on Nantucket through the suspension.

DEFIED GUBERNATORIAL BAN
Judge George M. Poland of the Nantucket Probate Court, clad in hunting garb. He defied Governor Curley's right to end the season on the island.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN'S CLUB TO MEET

The All-Boston Women's Democratic Club will hold their regular monthly meeting at the Hotel Brunswick next Tuesday evening at 6 p.m. The speaker of the evening will be State Representative Michael J. Ward. There will be a musical under the direction of Madame Shari de Lys.

It is expected that the announcement of Governor Curley's candidacy for Senator will be unanimously approved by the club members and plans will be formed at this meeting to assist him in his campaign.

This meeting will be presided over by its president, Sheila O'Donovon Rossa.

When "Buck Is Passed" to Last Man, Civil Service Boss Has to "Hold the Bag"

"Tommy" Green of Charlestown Gets Most Thankless Job

Which Makes Appointee of Important Post Servant of 43,000 State Employees and Butt of Attacks

BY CHARLES P. HAVEN

If anyone wants to pin a war cross on a brave lad, let him step up and present one to Ex-President of the Boston City Council Thomas H. Green, veteran of three decades of Charlestown politics, which is to say veteran of the Marne, the Gallipoli campaign and the Chemin des Dames, at least.

For "Tommy" Green has stepped into the hot spot of Massachusetts politics, the civil service commissioner's berth. "Wishing 'Tommy' no had luck, I can offer him no congratulations. "Grief in large chunks is indigenous to the office. The head of the Civil Service Commission in the Bay State is blessed by neither his master nor his master's brother. "Which makes appointee of important post servant of 43,000 State Employees and butt of attacks.

"Protests Civil Service Commissioner's Ruling" may be a standing headline in the daily papers. "Tommy" Green has already been protested. Even before he was confirmed by the Governor's Council the headlines told of the "protests."

Evils creep into the civil service just as they creep into every other public office. Even I've got a protest against the administration of the civil service laws and the civil service commissioner. Any civil service commissioner.

One of the greatest evils is seen in circumventing the law in the matter of vacation appointments. All civil service employees are entitled to vacations of from two weeks upward. After a few years they get a month's vacation every year.

Persons need not have civil service ratings to be appointed to these vacation jobs. And they are appointed by the Governor. Any Governor may make such appointments. Few other votes to control can be kept busy most of the vacation time by filing in on several vacation jobs.

Arthur H. Brooks, attorney for the Civil Service Association, has several protests against the way the office of civil service commissioner is run.

"Tommy" Green will get little moral support from either Mr. Brooks or his organization.

Mr. Brooks sees, in the appointment of Curley's friend "Tommy" Green, another Kingfish-like grasp upon the State government. Nothing against Mr. Green, you understand. Certainly not the thousands of poor and unfortunate that "Tommy," his brothers and his father before him, added in their misfortunes.

But in failing to reappoint ex-Mayor James M. Hurley of Marblehead to the job, Mr. Brooks and his associates see Mr. Curley selling their beloved Civil Service organization down the river. Mr. Hurley didn't vote "right" when Mr. Curley was fighting for the gubernatorial nomination, and he failed to vote "right" at election time, too. Therefore, Mr. Hurley was doomed to do an "Uncle Tom" down de Massapoo.

The League of Women Voters think about the same thing, it seems. They hold that it takes a man at least three years, and in terms of term, to get to be a China hand at the job. Throwing a three-year man out and putting in a new man keeps the department under the administration of a tyro, the league holds.

The Civil Service Association, as Mr. Brooks outlined its point of view during a chat the other day, is that the three great evils attaching to the administration of the system in Massachusetts are the veterans' preference clause, the clause that governs provisional appointments and that which allows vacation appointment without Civil Service ratings.

The association, Mr. Brooks said, regards the veterans' preference clause as the worst kind of class legislation. The Civil Service laws as they now stand, he said, make it impossible for any man but a veteran to get a job in the government employ, except those not under these laws.

Young Man Barred

There's one exception to this rule, he pointed out. That is seen in the appointment of policemen and firemen when the maximum age for recruits is 35 years. He gave several examples to substantiate his claim. One of them was the situation in which 127 veterans were listed for appointment as inspectors under the Alcoholic Beverage Commission and only a few jobs to be given out.
Three hundred and four veterans are waiting for jobs as janitors, 44 as inspectors of barbers, 18 as machinists, and so on. This situation, Mr. Brooks holds, bars civil service jobs every man in Massachusetts who was too young to be called for service in the last war, except in police and fire departments.

Mr. Brooks pointed out what he believes to be another evil in the civil service policy. He said that politicians in cities have an uncanny ability creating new titles for jobs and thereby evading civil service laws.

Cook to Monkeys

A classic in the tradition of the association is the appointment made by former Mayor of Boston. It was to get a job for the widow of a man who was killed in the city's service. He assigned the special cook to the monkeys in the Franklin Park Zoo. Mr. Brooks smiled that he believed the former Mayor's efforts to place the widow of a man killed in the city's employ in an admirable one, but thought his ingenuity in creating titles rather remarkable.

Mr. Hurley, during a call I made on him the other day, said that he would like to see the commission given power over the removal of the allegedly inefficient service employment. Now the district court is the place of appeal of those who are dismissed from civil service employment.

Mr. Brooks thinks the commission is unpopular enough now, without adding another grievance to its functions. At the present time the district court is supposed to be the last resort in such matters. The district court is an admit attorney untrained, and some legal technicality under which he can appeal a case that goes against his client to the Supreme Court.

Because the head of a State, city or town department must justify his removal of inefficient employees in court, few such employees are ever fired. Mr. Hurley told me that many times he has heard Mayors, selectmen and State department heads declare that they would rather put up with an inefficient employee than get "into the mess" of prosecuting removal cases in court.

Where such cases are appealed to the Supreme Court, a civil service employee, Mr. Brooks pointed out, who wins his case, may be granted, in effect, a vacation with pay for two years. Also, the employee may have earned as much from some other source of employment as his civil service job pays. The employee would be on two payrolls for the two years his case was pending.

All efforts to deduct the amount of income the deposed employee earned during the term of his "vacation" from the back pay the government must give him have proved futile.

More Virtues Than Vices

With all the shooting about the civil service situation, no one, as far as I can see, has got the system. Its evils are slight, of course, compared with its manifest virtues.

The idea to get the civil servant out of the spoils system, a President of the United States had to be sacrificed. It was the assassination of President Garfield by a disappointed office seeker that gave the movement its first great impetus. But its measurably strengthened by Theodore Roosevelt when he was a member of the New York Assembly.

It was Theodore Roosevelt who caused New York to adopt civil service. Massachusetts followed New York's example the next year, making the Bay State the second to do so, New York being the first. The federal government led the way.

Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and John Adams paid little attention to the political faith of government employees. But, history tells, when Andrew Jackson beat down his foes and became President, he turned the entire kit and caboodle of federal employees into the street and appointed a new group of his own.

Webster's the First Voice

Daniel Webster was the first voice to be raised in the United States Senate for some plan to wipe out the evils of what was then dubbed the "spoils system." Webster said:

"The theory of our institutions is plain. It is that government is an agency created for the good of the people, and that every person in office is the agent and servant of the people. Offices are created not for the benefit of those who are to fill them, but for the public convenience." This policy is the basis of civil service to this day. But it wasn't until President Garfield was shot down by a disgruntled would-be office holder that much was done about Mr. Webster's grand enunciation of this democratic policy. The first civil service law was passed in 1883.

At the present time, and for many years, veterans have been placed ahead of all others on Massachusetts civil service lists. Ahead of the sturdy veteran is placed the disabled veteran.

Of course, all veterans must be able to pass the examinations, just like any other applicant, both physical and mental. That is, the disabled veteran must not be disabled in such a way that he is unable to fill the job he seeks.

This is true in Massachusetts. In some other States veterans receive boosts in their marks up to, in Maryland, 20 per cent. If he gets 50 per cent in his marks, he is automatically given a passing mark of 70 per cent.

In Massachusetts, however, all veterans are placed ahead of all other applicants, both physical and mental. If he gets 50 per cent in his marks, he is automatically given a passing mark of 70 per cent.

Examinees who believe that their papers were marked incorrectly, that they did not receive the proper credit for their answers to the examiner's questions, may protest to the board, have their answers re-examined and their credits revalued.

If they are still of the opinion that they have not been treated justly they are given a hearing before the full board. At this hearing the examiner must justify his marking of the answer, or answers, complained about by the petitioner.

All examination papers are open to the examiner, or his representative, All records, for that matter, of the commission are open to the public under rules laid down by the Governor and his council.

And so, the "spot job" of the State government is now to be occupied by "Tommy" Green of Charlestown. The Charlestown boys have a reputation of being able to take it.
CURLEY SUPPORTERS WORRIED OVER 'SOCIAL SECURITY' PLEA

BY ARTHUR W. WOODMAN
(Daily News Staff Writer)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, Dec. 9—Governor James M. Curley in sounding the call for "social security" is now worrying his loyal bond issue supporters as to the future of the much heralded "work and wages" program he promised 12 months ago.

Today House and Senate members gathering in the corridors of the State Capitol were questioning their political future which necessarily depends upon the governor's 1936 program:

"Is the 'social security' cry a means of sidestepping his promise of affording 'work and wages', to ease the unemployment crisis facing our constituents?" one Senate member challenged.

"Is Governor Curley going to abandon his program of 'work and wages' for the more philanthropic slogan of 'social -security?'" was the Yankee response made by a colleague.

Fear National Control

National control of state affairs through a broadened welfare program is feared.

Surrender of home rule by cities and towns to state governmental agencies, through the adoption of an all-absorbing bureaucratic program anticipated in the New Years' day recommendations of Governor Curley is foreseen by city and town officials.

Today's easy chair conferences reveal conclusive proof that experienced followers of state government are spending the next three weeks in expressed fear that further control of municipal welfare disbursements will be sought by the state.

Selectmen to Protest

Selectmen of the many cities and towns in the commonwealth are unified in preparation for bitter protest against further seizure by the state of their powers of home rule.

One thing appears certain today namely that Governor Curley has completely tossed overboard his "work and wages" slogan and will depend upon the "humanitarian" cry of "social security" to build his political defenses for 1936.

Whether or not his repeated statements that he will relinquish his gubernatorial chair for a Senate seat is true, is still a matter of conjecture among Beacon Hill observers.

Despite his many statements that the United States senatorial seat is his aim, the rumor still persists that the governor will amend his plans and seek re-election.

Opening Shot

His social security plea is expected to be the opening shot of a new campaign for state-wide approval to his forthcoming proposals for further aid for Massachusetts workers.

It would not be the least surprising if after the legislature is given the Curley "social security" measures for consideration a statement would be made by the Chief Executive that "to preserve the humanitarian program established in the past two years for the insurance of a more abundant life for Bay State workers, it is with consideration for the best interests of my fellow men, I place aside personal ambition to return to the Governor's office to insure fulfillment of a program of social security in Massachusetts, to be carried on in cooperation with the benevolent leader of our nation."

And today, which course of action will be followed by the Governor, with the pre-primary convention seven months removed, still a matter of conjecture.
The ice is thinner than the thin dime they talk about.

When a fellow buys a couple of quarts now it's for the car radiator.

One trouble the Republicans have in framing issues is they are not sure themselves just how much of the New Deal can be made an issue.

Gov. Curley, at the first showing of a motion picture in Worcester, was introduced as the next president. That would please Mr. Roosevelt, if he were listening.

Brockton can consider itself really on the road to recovery when it joins those few other communities which can't fill their quotas for relief jobs because private industry has absorbed the workers.

State Curbs / Auto Deaths

BOSTON, Dec. 9, (AP) — Proud of Massachusetts' decrease of almost 200 highway fatalities from last year's total, Governor Curley today urged even greater effort for a better record next year.

A highway report submitted to the Governor by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin showed 787 persons were killed in Massachusetts in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, as compared with 921 the previous year and 48,324 injured, as compared with 53,055 in 1934.

Goodwin said "Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only States in the Union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only State having a better record than Massachusetts."

Rigorous inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police brought the decrease, Curley said, as he announced appointment of a committee to devise means of cutting the death and injury rate even more.

Twenty persons were killed in Massachusetts the first week of December Goodwin reported. This was five more fatalities than in the week preceding and 12 less deaths than in the corresponding week of 1934.

Seeks Answer On Ferry Lane

Letter Says Members Know Curley Politician, But Clear Reply Wanted.

A request for definite information concerning his intentions relative to the organization's request that he take steps to have the Ferry Lane school reopened, has been forwarded to Governor Curley by Mortimer A. Sullivan, secretary of the Amalgamated Club.

Mr. Sullivan's letter to the Governor is as follows:

"At a meeting of the Amalgamated Club of Fall River, the secretary, by a unanimous vote, was instructed to write to you, on behalf of the amalgamation, and ask you point blank, what you intend to do in reference to the petitions regarding the Ferry Lane School at Fall River.

"Do you feel that the said school should be reopened to take care of the little children of school age in that district?"

"On many occasions, you have been referred to by your lieutenants as the 'Great Humanitarian'. "Now you have the opportunity to put that to test. Would you recommend to the Fall River Finance Board that the said school be reopened?"

"We fully realize that we are dealing with an experienced politician and we are entitled to a definite reply, and not an ambiguous one.

"Have you at any time been told by the Superintendent of Public Schools at Fall River that the city could get along without the said Ferry Lane school?"

"Please answer that question, as we should get the facts as both you and he are public servants and we are calling upon you to answer. It was further voted that a copy of this letter be given to The Herald News for publication.

"Awaiting your prompt reply, as our next meeting is to be held on Friday night, December 13, 1935."
Here and There

Governor Curley's recent statement that he will seek the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator next year was about as positive as he could make it, and yet some of the boys are expressing a contrary belief. He has, they say, not infrequently changed his mind before, for him so to do again. And then again, a politician of the Curley stripe of all-around ruthlessness can make the governor's job such a satisfying post that many observers can't see why he would relinquish it, even for a seat in Washington. That was an idea we at one time held, but it has faded. In contract, in golf, in prize fighting and in many other fields of sport and endeavor, timing is highly important, in many cases containing the elements of victory. If you don't think timing has its place in politics, listen!

Governor Curley is starting in on his 62d year of life's journey. That's not young for a novice in the Senate chamber, even though there has been previous experience in the House, and in other high political seats. Unless he makes the try in 1936, and wins it, he might as well pass up the whole business. There will not be another senatorial election until 1940, and even then there will be standing in Curley's path Senator David I. Walsh. Daring and tough as the governor is, strong as he may be with the file of the Democratic party, he would be as ineffective in seeking to beat Senator Walsh for the party nomination as an armless boy in trying to beat a drum. There's the timing element. Few will question the burning zeal of Curley for the highest place in political life; it's meat and drink to him. A Senate seat, beyond question, is his heart's desire, and it is 1936 or almost never for him.

A further factor, a highly important one, is that he will be in the governor's seat during the primary campaign, and the election period as well. As leader of his party, and an iron-willed one at that, he will have a tremendous advantage over Senator Coolidge or any other possibility. Even if there should be against Curley such a combination of forces as to deprive him of the pre-primary endorsement at the party convention early in the year, that would to him mean nothing. What he did to Gen. Cole, who had the convention endorsement in 1934, is something that the Democratic party leaders will not soon forget. The governor has, speaking after the manner of the athletic world, reached the fine edge of his training period. It would be a miracle if he could hold it for four years, to say nothing of six, and those are the magic numbers in this political problem.

"Politics and publicity." That, in brief, is probably the story behind the recent New Jersey flare-up in the Hauptmann case. As you know, Ellis Parker, veteran county detective for Burlington county, N. J., is now saying that he has an idea of his own as to the slaying of the Lindbergh baby, and that the convicted Hauptmann didn't do it. His self-projection into the situation on the eve of highest court action on trial issues has been met with sharp challenge from the forces which prosecuted the Bronx carpenter. They rather smear the detective by producing official records. And yet, Governor Hoffman of New Jersey presents a wobbly appearance, too. It is such an unusual development that all its angles are not clear, but many New Jersey newspapers have not hesitated to stamp the governor as in a political mood in regard to it. He is having about his first real brush with bitter newspaper comment.

The publicity angle comes into it in this fashion. Parker recently contracted with a big publishing house for a series of articles in his famous cases of crime detection. The first appeared in a long list of papers on Sunday, Dec. 1, and the series will continue weekly for a considerable time. All this ballyhoo about Parker's new ideas on the case is, of course, duck soup for the syndicate, for Hauptmann and for the papers that buy the service. You can believe, if you are so minded, that there was no "timing" in connection with the break of the Parker story and the appearance of the syndicated series; but if you are that way, you know little about the range of the publicity idea. It possibly is just a co-incidence that the Boston paper that uncovered a Hauptmann's mare's nest in Ashby is running the Parker articles. The truth of the matter probably is that something has gone to "Detective Parker's head.

It's strange, but the very people who want free speech preserved are afraid the future will find it in an excellent state of preservation.

Renews Highway Safety Drive As Gains Reported

Drop of 15 Per Cent in Fatal Accidents Puts State Near Top

BOSTON—Cheered by a 15 per cent drop in the number of fatal accidents on Massachusetts highways this year, giving the state the best record of any large industrial state in the union except Rhode Island, Gov. Curley yesterday appointed a large committee to make plans for the most intensive safety drive ever conducted in this state, which will be held in March, 1936.

Naming Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, chairman, he ordered Goodwin to summon the committee into session as soon as possible. In the group are leading representatives of the public schools system, churches, press, radio, theatres, police departments, safety and civic organizations and state departments.

With 11.7 deaths per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline sold and 16.2 deaths per 100,000 population for the first nine months this year, Massachusetts now leads New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Michigan, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and practically all of the smaller states, according to figures compiled by the national safety council. Goodwin said in a report to the governor.

There were 788 persons killed in Massachusetts during the statistical year 1935, a reduction of 133 from the 1934 toll of 921. In 1935 there were 48,324 injured, a reduction of 4731 from the previous year’s toll of 53,055.

In his weekly report, dealing with the record for the first week of the new fiscal year beginning on Dec. 1, Goodwin said that 20 persons were killed. While this was five more than in the preceding week, it was 12 fewer than in the same period a year ago.

There were 20 persons killed by motor vehicles last week, five more than in the week before, and 12 fewer than in the same period last year.

One hundred and five operators were convicted last week of driving while under the influence of liquor, eight more than in the preceding week. Of these eight, were committed to jail, six from district courts and two from superior courts. Six persons were convicted for the second time within six years in district courts for operating while under the influence of liquor. Two were sentenced to jail and appealed, three were committed to jail and one paid a fine.

There were 896 licenses and registrations suspended or revoked, 78 more than in the week before and 133 fewer than in the corresponding period of last year. Of these 123 were for drinking after drinking intoxicating liquor and 286 revocations resulted from insurance cancellations.

EDITORIAL NOTES

These are the days, and the nights, when, with heating plants being used to capacity one sleeps better who knows that his chimney has been cleaned and that other precautions against fire have been taken.

And now it is discovered that the State cannot stop what it permitted to start—deer hunting on Nantucket. Our lawmakers are constantly having found for them defects in the laws they make.

United States Marshall John J. Murphy, who long ago announced that he would be a candidate for United States senator, has changed his mind. Now he plans to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. We cannot help wondering just how many objectives would be changed if the Governor decided to again seek the dictatorship of Massachusetts. It would be funny.

Another advantage in having a state job and driving a state car is that when you are involved in an accident the state pays the damages. It has just settled with a Waltham woman for $4100 for an accident in which the official car of Adjutant General William I. Rose was involved last April.
Governor Curley will not seek reelection. Instead, he will go after the Democratic nomination for the seat in the United States Senate now occupied by Marcus Coolidge.

This is the decision that he announced in a speech at Rockland and formally confirmed the next day at the State House. Making up his mind about his political plans and saying so increased the clarity of the political atmosphere which had been obscured by doubt of his intentions.

Unless Coolidge decides to seek reelection, Curley probably will have little opposition in his quest for the nomination to the Senate. Other potential candidates, notably Congressman Connelly, were making their aspirations to the Senate contingent on Curley's plans. What Coolidge will do is not known at the moment. There have been reports that he did not enjoy the Senate and there have been reports that he wanted another term. And there have been reports that he would be given a diplomatic post.

Sensible procedure for him would seem to be to take a diplomatic post if he can get one, unless he wants to retire to private life, because he does not appear to have much chance against Curley in a contest for the Democratic nomination. Coolidge is a colorless senator without potential personal appeal. He is not at all in Curley's class as a campaigner. And he lacks the organization at all comparable to that which Curley has developed in the governorship.

Curley's announcement enabled Lieutenant Governor Hurley to prepare to go after the nomination for the governorship, a quest in which he may be expected to have vigorous opposition, probably from State Treasurer Hurley. And there might be others.

Curley's announcement and the probability that he will get the nomination that he wants enables the Republicans to start now with their senatorial campaign.

A Democratic nomination in 1936 will not be synonymous with election as it has been for several years, because of the declining favor in which Massachusetts holds Democratic leaders and policies. No leader has declined more in favor than Curley himself, his performances in the governor's office most of the time being anything but those that win public applause.

He will be fought, of course, on his record, and that means that there is a limitless supply of ammunition available for use against him. While these munitions would be more effective against Curley in a fight for the governorship, they will be mighty useful in a fight for the senatorship. Curley's record shows that he is a dangerous and irresponsible public servant and it can be used against him during a campaign for the senatorship as well as during a campaign for the governorship, although it is true that he would be less harmful to Massachusetts in the Senate than he is in the State House.

About the only argument for support of him for the Senate must be based on the assumption that he can't be removed from public life and, therefore, should be kicked upstairs where he will be less of a nuisance. And this is an argument of mean degree, based on an unproved assumption.

NOTRE DAME STARS TO PLAY IN BOSTON

Will Face Collegiate Team Wednesday at Garden

The All-Notre Dame eleven, featuring Frank Carlone, Marty Brill, Tom Yarr, One-Play O'Brien, Bucky O'Connor and a galaxy of football satellites who received their tutelage under the late Knute Rockne, will arrive in Boston early tomorrow and later that afternoon engage in a signal drill.

The Notre Dame team will oppose the Collegiate All-Stars in an indoor game at Boston Garden Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

Leo Curley, son of Gov. James M. Curley, will get in late Monday from Georgetown University and will be tackle in the Collegiate lineup. Joe Alvarez, chairman of the committee staging the contest, has invited Gov. James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield to be his guests at the game.

If Wednesday's game is successful, Alvarez plans other indoor attractions next season. The game will have all the frills of a college contest. Alvarez has made arrangements for a band to furnish the music. There will be music and parades before the game and between halves.

More than 400 truckloads of dirt have already been obtained and will be emplaced in the Garden Wednesday morning. During the day a large crew of workmen will roll and pack the dirt and mark off the playing field.

Alvarez has promised the winners a trip to Bermuda. Gold footballs and sweaters will be awarded to losers. A percentage of the gross receipts will be donated to charity.
Bay State Auto Deaths
200 Below 1934 Total

BOSTON (W)—Proud of Massachusetts' decrease of almost 200 highway fatalities from last year's total, Gov. James M. Curley today urged even greater effort for a better record next year.

A highway report submitted to the Governor by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin showed 788 persons were killed in Massachusetts in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, as compared with 921 the previous year and 48,324 were injured, as compared with 53,055 in 1934.

Goodwin said "Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only states in the union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only state having a better record than Massachusetts."

Rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police brought the decrease, Curley said, as he announced appointment of a committee to devise means of cutting the death and injury rate even more.

Twenty persons were killed in Massachusetts the first week of December, Goodwin reported. This was five more fatalities than in the week preceding and 12 less deaths than in the corresponding week of 1934.

Curley Boom Started in Worcester

WORCESTER, Dec. 9—This city has taken the lead in the organization of a "Curley-for-Senate" club, when preliminary steps were taken at a meeting of 100 Democratic men and women in the Jeffersonian club yesterday.

The meeting was presided over by Maurice V. O'Toole, and the question of Curley's candidacy was discussed and the meeting was adjourned until next Sunday afternoon at which time it is believed permanent officers will be elected.

BIG DECREASE IN AUTO DEATHS

Gov. Curley Names Committee for Safety Drive.

BOSTON, Dec. 9—Last night Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin filed with Gov. Curley his report for the year on automobile fatalities, as the statistical year for the department closed Nov. 30, yet there may be other fatalities resulting from injuries during the period to be included in later reports. However, the report shows a marked decrease in deaths for the present statistical year over that of 1934 with 921 persons killed in 1934 as compared with 788 for the 1935 period, a decrease of 133 or 15 percent below that of the preceding year.

Encouraged by this drop in fatal automobile accidents, Gov. Curley has named a large committee including leading representatives of schools, the press, radio, police departments, state departments and civic organizations, with Registrar Goodwin as chairman, and has instructed him to call the committee into session to get an intensive safety drive under way as soon as possible, and the meeting probably will be held in March. In his report to the Governor last night Mr. Goodwin said:

"Last February you appointed me registrar of motor vehicles, with a request that I administer this office strictly, impartially and free from political influence, to the end that there might be a reduction in the number of persons killed and injured by motor vehicles on the highways of Massachusetts.

"This splendid result has been made possible by the whole-hearted co-operation of the police of Massachusetts, including the state, metropolitan district and Boston police. The Massachusetts safety council has also rendered a splendid service.

"Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only states in the union where a reduction has been made. Rhode Island is practically the only state in the union having a better record than Massachusetts.

"On receipt of the report from the registrar Gov. Curley said:

"The noteworthy part of this report is the large decrease in the months of September, October and November." In praising Goodwin's report last night. "I am informed that this was brought about by means of an intensive work on inspection of equipment, particularly brakes, during these months.

"As demonstrated, if 93 lives can be saved during three months by a rigorous campaign of checking brakes, I believe that many more lives can be saved if we have a campaign of education accompanied by stricter enforcement."

Gov. Curley appointed the following committee to draw up a plan for an even more comprehensive campaign during the month of March, 1936: Frank A. Goodwin, as chairman; Police Commission McSweeney of Boston, Commissioner of Public Safety; Kirk, Edward M. Wood, superintendent of metropolitan police; Gen. John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts safety council; Lewis E. Macbrayne, manager of the Massachusetts safety council; Commissioner of Education Payson Smith, Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCellos, Adjt.-Gen. William I. Rose. Chief Arthur P. Bliss of Needham, president of the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association, Judge Philip S. Parker of Brockline, Judge Nathanial R. Jones of Newburyport, Judge Charles H. Hibbard of Pittsfield, Supt. of Schools Patrick T. Campeol of Boston, all police chiefs in cities with more than 100,000 population, Rev. Michael J. Ahearn, S. J., Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams, Joseph H. Brennan of Allied Theatres and representatives of the press and radio.

There were 23 persons killed by motor vehicles last week, five more than the week before, and 12 fewer than the same period a year ago.

Record Encouraging

"This record is for the first week of our new fiscal year 1936, and shows a substantial reduction among both pedestrians and occupants as compared with the same week of December last year," said Goodwin. "This auspicious beginning for our new year is still further emphasized by the fact that 11 of the 20 fatalities resulted from accidents that occurred in the month of November, and are included in our 1935 figures.

"In reality, then, there were only nine deaths that occurred as the result of accidents during the first five days of December this year and compared with 15 during the same number of days a year ago. I re- gret to note, however, that during the past week double deaths were reported from Revere, Sudogus and Worcester.

"One hundred and five operators were convicted last week of driving while under the influence of liquor, eight more than in the preceding week. Of these, eight were committed to jail, six from District courts and two from Superior courts. Six persons were convicted for the second time within six years in District courts for operating while under the influence of liquor. Two were sentenced to jail and appealed, three were committed to jail and one paid a fine.

"There were 866 licenses and registrations suspended or revoked, more than in the week before and 135 fewer than in the corresponding period of last year. Of these 123 were for driving after drinking intoxicating liquor and 286 revocations resulted from insurance cancellations."

Some Statistics

Some of the statistics show that 11.7 deaths per each 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline sold and 16.2 deaths per 100,000 population for the first nine months of the year. This state leads New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Michigan, New Jersey, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont and about all the small states, Rhode Island alone being ahead of the Bay State.

In the year 1934 a total of 53,085 persons were injured in automobile accidents as compared with 40,224 this year, a reduction of 4,731 less than a year ago. The state of California, 41.6 deaths per 100,000 population, had the worst record and Rhode Island, with 10.6, had the best. This state was next with 16.2, and New York and Pennsylvania next with 19.6 each. Ohio, with a record of 32.2 was next to California.

GOV. CURLEY PLANS TO VISIT PARTY

A monster program of entertainment and dancing will be presented Monday evening, December 30, in Recreation ballroom on Hampshire street for the benefit of St. Mary's boys school. The proceeds will be turned over to the fund being raised to renovate the school building. The affair is being staked under the direction of Rev. Charles F. Hart, O. S. A.

Father Hart has already received assurance that His Excellency James M. Curley, Governor of Massachusetts will attend the affair. Governor Curley has a deep feeling that the I. J. Fox fur trappers will make a tremendous hit with the audience. Several of the members of this group appeared last year for a parish affair and they scored a tremendous hit with the audience. Several new stars will attend the coming event. The complete program will be announced in the near future.

Very Rev. Patrick J. Campbell, O. S. A., pastor of St. Mary's church, is deeply interested in the success of the coming affair. He is mindful of the need of renovating the school building and is hoping that the members of the parish will give their assistance to the event.
MASS. SHOWS REDUCTION IN HIGHWAY FATALITIES

Rhode Island Only State in Union to Close Year With Better Record—788 Persons Killed in Bay State

BOSTON, Dec. 8 (AP)—A highway fatality record unsurpassed in the entire country, he said, except in Rhode Island, was submitted to Gov. James M. Curley tonight by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

The figures, compiled up to the end of the fiscal year, Nov. 30, Goodwin reported, showed 792 persons had been killed, against 921 in the year previous and 48,324 injured, compared with 53,039 in 1934.

"Massachusetts and Rhode Island," Goodwin asserted, "are practically the only states in the union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only state having a better record than Massachusetts."

Goodwin said the "splendid results" had been accomplished by full co-operation of state and local police with registry officials.

Gov. Curley, commenting on the report, said the decrease in fatalities in the fall months, usually the period of severest reports, indicated much could be done to lower still the annual toll.

The decrease in those months, he ascribed to a rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police.

At the same time he announced he had organized a committee "to devise every means of effecting a more substantial decrease to fatalities and injuries that result from reckless driving and driving while under the influence of liquor."

The committee, he said, comprised Goodwin, as chairman; Eugene M. McSweeney, police commissioner of Boston; Lt. Col. Paul G. Kirk, state commissioner of public safety; Edward M. Wood, superintendent of the metropolitan district police; John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts Safety Council; Lewis E. MacBrayne, manager of the Massachusetts Safety Council; Payson Smith, state commissioner of education; Francis J. DeCelles, state commissioner of insurance; Adjutant General William T. Rose; Chief Arthur P. Bliss of the Needham police, representing the Massachusetts Police Chiefs' association; Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., Rt. Rev. Henry K. Sherrill, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams and several representatives of the judiciary, press and radio.

In the first week of December, Goodwin further reported, 20 persons were killed in highway motor accidents, five more than in the week preceding and 12 fewer than in the corresponding week in 1934.

He reported that 105 operators were convicted last week of driving while under the influence of liquor, eight more than in the preceding week. Of these eight were committed to jail.

There were 896 licenses and registrations suspended or revoked during the week, 75 more than in the week before and 135 fewer than in the corresponding period of last year. Of these 123 were for driving after drinking intoxicating liquor and 288 revocations resulted from insurance cancellations.
The All-Notre Dame eleven, featuring Frank Carideo, Marty Brill, Tom Yarr, One-play O'Brien, Bucky O'Connor and a galaxy of football satelites, who received their tutoring under the late Knute Rockne, will arrive in Boston early Tuesday and later that afternoon engage in a signal drill.

The Notre Dame team will oppose the Collegiate All Stars in an indoor game at Boston Garden Wednesday at 8.30 p.m. Leo Curley, son of Gov. J. M. Curley, will get in late Monday from Georgetown University and will be at tackle in the Collegiate lineup.

Joe Alvarez, chairman of the committee staging the contest, declares the advance sale has been exceptionally large. Among early ticket seekers were several owners and coaches of teams in the National Professional Football League. They will attend hoping to find talent out of the army of stars for their 1936 elevens.

Chairman Alvarez also has invited Gov. James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Curtis to be his guests at the game.

If Wednesday's game is successful, Alvarez plans other big indoor attractions next season, and will use his influence toward getting the Notre Dame varsity team on the schedule of a local college. Officials of Notre Dame will watch attendance figures on this game. It will be the first appearance of an all-Notre Dame team, or a group of players who received their training under the immortal Rockne, in Boston.

The game will have all the frills of a college contest. Alvarez has made arrangements for a band to furnish the music. There will be music and parades before the game and between halves.

More than 400 truckloads of dirt have already been obtained, and will be emptied in the Garden Wednesday afternoon. During the day a large crew of workmen will roll and pack the dirt and mark off the playing field.

Alvarez has promised the winning players a trip to Bermuda. Gold footballs and sweaters will be awarded the losers. A percentage of gross receipts will be donated to charity.

Tickets are on sale at the Boston Garden, Boston Arena and the Jordan Marsh Company.
Local Sportsmen Not Keen About Double Licenses

Nantucket Controversy Recalls Strenuous Protests Made By Lowell Delegation When Present Law Was Passed.

By Warren M. Power

The controversy between Judge George M. Poland, Wakefield's fighting sportsman and Governor Curley, still stirs up memories in the minds of Lowell men who fished and hunted in these parts years ago. Voicing the sentiment of old-time sportsmen here, Harry L. Gonzales said to the writer yesterday that Judge Poland has the right side of the argument relative to deer hunting regulations.

"When I came to Lowell over 40 years ago," Mr. Gonzales said, "there was no such thing as a hunting or fishing license. One of Lowell's well known fishermen, the late assistant city clerk, William P. McCarthy, said that when the license to hunt was introduced it was intended as a check on the licensees to assist in locating a hunter in case he committed a misdemeanor. It was not a permit to do something otherwise unlawful. The hunting and fishing seasons were regulated, of course, and while hunters knew they must refrain from the sport in a very dry season, they did not have to wait for the ban to be officially lifted after a rainfall of sufficient volume to banish all fear of fire.

"In after years when the laws became what the hunters considered unnecessarily severe, I went to Boston in company with Mr. McCarthy and Simon B. Harris. We had an audience with the assistant attorney general and while he was of the opinion that our grievances were well founded, he said we might win if we cared to carry the matter through the courts, but he doubted if the expense would warrant it.

"There has been no doubt in my mind as to the soundness of the stand taken by Judge Poland to the effect that there are no statutes authorizing the governor to close the hunting season except in cases of extreme drought. There is no danger now because of the snow on the ground. When it came to a snowdown Governor Curley admitted that the ban on deer hunting could not legally be enforced. I see, however, that he urged the jurist to respect the ban as a 'duty to the community.'

"But another hunter, one Allen Holdgate, will be arraigned on the charge of shooting a deer out of season and I understand that Judge Poland will defend him. That will be interesting to those of us who are interested in fish and game, bans and licenses.

"Messrs. McCarthy and McCarthy and myself, backed by the Fish and Game Association and others interested in the sport, had another interview with the assistant district attorney general when the joint fishing and hunting license was issued. This was an obviously unfair proposition. If a fellow wanted to go fishing he had to buy a double barrel license which included fishing and hunting, and at an extra cost, of course. Personally I never cared to hunt and I knew that others of our gang didn't want to hunt, and so it was that we sought the conference in Boston, and while the two licenses were separated a year later, we never claimed full credit for bringing it about inasmuch as complaints had been sent in from all over the state.

Simon B. at His Best

"Simon B. Harris was at his best on the day of the conference, or hearing, or whatever you may choose to call it, and while he drew a simile that was decidedly far fetched and perhaps bordering on the sacrilegious, it went over big, just the same. 'Our Savior,' he said, 'approaching the fishermen on the shores of Galilee, which is a widening of the river Jordan on its way to the Dead Sea, and they behooved their poor luck, would not have been able to invite them to accompany him across to the other side of the river where the fishing was good, if it had been necessary for them to have a license. He would not invite men to disobey the laws of the land, but no license was required and they went with him. The waters of Galilee were wholesome and abundant in fish. Its shores were thickly peopled in the time of Christ. His own home lay on its shores; many of his miracles were performed around and upon it; he taught the multitudes that followed him on the heights over it, along its pebbly beach, and from a boat on the surface; men of the sea were fishermen, who gained their daily bread by fishing, and it would not have been very pleasant if had they been obliged to have a license to fish.

"Of course, these are different days and men, I presume, are different. But the fact remains that in those days, men were not burdened with the laws that restrain us from the pleasure of a few hours at the sport that is our dearest hobby. And not content with obliging us to have one license, now we must have two; one to lure the denizens of the deep and the other a hunting license. I will not call it an outrage, but it has the effect of a wish might prevail that we had lived in the days when the disciples fished in Galilee.'

Tribute to Dan McCarthy

Joe Haggerty has dropped me a few lines of tribute to our mutual friend, the late Daniel E. McCarthy, well known here for many years as a conductor on the Boston & Maine railroad. Joe Haggerty and myself, as telegraph operators, came in contact quite frequently with Dan and his was a friendship to be cherished. He was a good friend, a good citizen and a good railroad man, in politics Dan was a Democrat of the first water. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors, and a staunch Elk. Dan always had a good word for everybody and when a friend was in trouble Dan helped him out of his difficulties. He was never known to say a mean thing about anybody and his friends were legion.

Joe Haggerty's note to me reads:

"May I say a word about our old friend, Dan McCarthy?

"A wonderful railroad man of the old school, who knew his business and who knew how to treat, other men. All of the railroad boys were fond of him, he was my friend, Dan Helped me out of my difficulties as many others. He always said that there was never a word of fault to find; always easy going and with a cheerful willingness to perform his duties, which endeared him to all of us.

"We will never forget the early mornings at the telegraph office when he awaited his order for the work train. Dan would roll a cigar and tell one of his original stories, and that always started the day right for all hands.

"No one had more friends and trust than modest Dan McCarthy. Peace be to him and may his soul rest in the hands of our blessed Saviour."

"Of course, these are different days and men, I presume, are different. But the fact remains that in those days, men were not burdened with the laws that restrain us from the pleasure of a few hours at the sport that is our dearest hobby. And not content with obliging us to have one license, now we must have two; one to lure the denizens of the deep and the other a hunting license. I will not call it an outrage, but it has the effect of a wish might prevail that we had lived in the days when the disciples fished in Galilee."
CURLEY PLEASED AT REDUCTION OF AUTO DEATHS

BOSTON, Dec. 9, 1935—(AP)—Proud of Massachusetts' decrease of almost 20 highway fatalities from last year's total, Governor James M. Curley today urged even greater efforts for a better record next year.

A highway report submitted to the Governor by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin showed 788 persons were killed in Massachusetts in the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, as compared with 821 in the previous year and 48,324 were injured, as compared with 53,003 in 1934.

Goodwin said "Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only States in the union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only State having a better record than Massachusetts."

Rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police brought the decrease, Curley said, as he announced appointment of a committee to devise means of cutting the death and injury rate even more.

Twenty persons were killed in Massachusetts the first week of December, Goodwin reported. This was five more fatalities than in the week preceding and 12 less deaths than in the corresponding week of 1934.

Curley Moves For Prevention Of Rail Strike

Narrow Gauge—Curley Intercedes in Proposed Strike

Governor Curley today interceded to prevent the strike of employees on the Narrow Gauge Railroad scheduled for midnight tonight.

James H. Valhey, counsel for the Narrow Gauge union workers appealed to Governor Curley just before noon to enter the case and prevent the strike which he said the union had voted following refusal of Narrow Gauge officials to meet with them and discuss differences.

The Governor called Charles F. Weed, trustee of the Narrow Gauge and an official of the First National Bank, on the telephone and asked him to talk with Mr. Valhey. This Mr. Weed agreed to do. The Governor said he told Mr. Weed that a strike at this time would be without justification and "foolish and stupid."

The strike threat was said to have its origin in refusal of the road to recognize the strike which it called would affect trainmen, guards and ferry men employed by the line which serves Boston, Lynn, Revere Beach and intermediate North Shore points.

Gas—Higher Rates Protested at Hearing

Fighting against higher gas rates in Boston, Louis Weinstein, assistant Boston Corporation Counsel, appeared before hearing of the Department of Public Utilities today and submitted four reasons why rates should not be altered to give the company more revenue as the company has requested.

The reasons:
1. Book values of the company's holdings are excessive.
2. Depreciation of property is greater than is allowed.
3. Operating costs are higher than is justified.
4. The rates would be excessive for masses of small users.

The Consolidated Gas Company filed a new schedule of rates with the department last August. The schedule increased rates on the first 1000 feet of gas consumed from $1.50 to $2.10. A drop of 20 cents from $1 to 80 cents per 1000 cubic feet was scheduled on gas used in excess of the first 1000 feet. This schedule, it was charged by the city, would place undue burden on those using small amounts of gas.

Dispersed—Job Hunters/Who Haunt Governor's Office

It was strangely quiet around the Governor's office in the State House today. Usually 25 or so men start grouping around the entrance of the Governor's office about 9:30 in the morning. They are on hand to bow and greet "His Excellency" when he arrives.

The ceremony serves double purpose. It permits giving vent to a penchant in some for hero worship, and an opportunity to get in a word for a job on the part of others.

When the practice first started, the Governor didn't mind so much. But recently he admitted that the pressure from job seekers was so great that it influenced him to seek a place in the United States Senate where he might secure respite from such的压力.

The Governor has disclosed that it is necessary for him to leave his house an hour earlier these mornings because of the small group of job hunters who throng around his car at his Jamaica-way home in the morning, and block his egress. Then when he gets to his office he meets the same problem.

"Today, however, things were different. State House guards firmly sent loiterers on their way. Explained Fred Kimball, superintendent of the State House, "The Governor ordered it. He got tired of being bothered."

A Shorter Session

Massachusetts legislative eyes are set on the session clock during 1936. Mindful of public wrath over the length of the 1935 session, which lasted through Aug. 15, many Representatives and Senators are aiming for a short 1936 session.

Indicative of the short session objective is the number of bills already filed in the House and Senate. They total not more than 50, the largest number submitted in 1936. They will be filed in 1935. They will be well below 100.

The present legislators are eager, on the whole, for re-election. They will make every effort to court public favor. A long session would act against them in reverse, for the public has learned to despise the stalling tactics of 1935. The taxpayers are aware that a long session brings danger of higher taxes, caused by more legislation.

Stalling as an Issue

Stalling tactics could well become a campaign issue in some sectors and prove uncomfortable to various candidates for re-election.

Regarding possible legislation this year, labor will not file near the number of measures it did last session. Therefore, the labor committees should not be tied up as long as they were in 1935. They will be a little more closely on state business, they could be through their work within three months.

Representative Leverett Saltonstall, Speaker of the House, can be relied upon to goad the House into a gait faster than a crawl, inasmuch as he is a Republican gubernatorial aspirant. And undoubtedly Representative Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., candidate for the United States Senate, will hasten labor matters.

Curley and Coolidge

Political attention at the moment is divided between Governor Curley as a senatorial candidate and the future road to be traveled by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., as a Republican gubernatorial aspirant.

Despite all the arguments favoring Governor Curley's move toward the Senate, many politicians refuse to believe the Governor will take the Washington highway. Right up to the convention wire, they will be listening for a Curley announcement "neaming the public demand that I seek re-election.

As for Senator Coolidge, the question is, "Will he seek re-election or be satisfied with a diplomatic appointment" which will carry honor without the necessity of fighting Curley, one of the most powerful campaigners in Massachusetts politics.

Senator Delays Stand

The Senator, himself, has said that he would not speak about his ambitions until late January. By that time he might have the real inside information regarding the Curley senatorial candidacy. Also by that time, he might possess an undercover promise from the Roosevelt Administration to support him against Curley.

Such a promise is not too far fetched, some politicians believe, inasmuch as Curley has received few favors from Roosevelt and might not meet presidential approval as a Senator. However, it must be remembered that the Governor recently reaffirmed his political allegiance to the President. The next few months are certain to be politically interesting.

State Convention Dates

The pre-primary state conventions undoubtedly will be held in June. At any rate they must be held by June 15. In 1934 the Legislature attempted to complete its work before the conventions started, inasmuch as many of the legislators were delegates. However, the session dragged on to June 30, while the conventions were held on June 9 for the Republicans and June 14 and 15 for the Democrats.

This year, there is some indication that a real drive will be staged to end legislative operations before the conventions. If the legislators slip their machinery into high gear, they can do it easily. More than once the claim has been made that if the legislators concentrated a little more closely on state business, they could be through their work within three months.

Insurance—Election Of Commissioner Sought

"I'm in favor of a short ballot." So commented Francis J. De Celles, State Insurance Commissioner, today when he was informed that Representative Owen Gallagher of South Boston had filed a bill with the clerk of the house today calling for the election of the commissioner by the voters instead of his appointment by the Governor.

Representative Gallagher's legislation would give the public a chance to retaliate against an insurance commissioner. But in view of the unpopular activities required of the office, observers questioned today whether any commissioner could remain in office for more than one term.
Grafton—It Sees Itself in the Movies

Twelve hundred Grafton people today were recounting to less fortunate neighbors the thrilling details of their expedition to Worcester Friday night, when, as guests of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company, they witnessed at Pollis Theater the premiere showing of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" which was filmed in North Grafton.

Once again they marveled at the portions of the picture shot in Hollywood on sets which duplicated North Grafton's main street so accurately that they were often unable to tell which was the true and which the false location. Great was the laughter when they recognized townspeople who had had important bits in the picture.

After the showing a public celebration was held in the theater during which these "bit" players were introduced to the audience. The Grafton Legion drum corps rendered several selections. During the course of the showing the front of the theater was illuminated as in a "Hollywood premiere." Speeches were made by Governor Curley and other notables who came to attend the showing.

Oath—Dr. Smith Allays Alarms of Teachers

Some teachers in Massachusetts may have experienced some trepidation after reading reports of the summary action they might expect if they failed to properly sign the new Teachers' Oath. But to Dr. Payson Smith, Commissioner of Education, such reports brought only a puzzled smile today.

"There is no deadline," he said, "every teacher may have a reasonable time to ponder the oath." This statement definitely spiked reports that dismissal of teachers would result if they did not file their oaths by today.

The Commissioner also repeated his belief that the law contains no penalty to be applied against those not signing.

 Today Mr. Smith faced an odd situation. His refusal to become exercised over the oath law enforcement brought criticism from the Armenian Democratic Club of Massachusetts last night. The Commissioner's term expires this month and his reappearance to the $6,000 a year job which he has held since 1917, is now being debated by Governor Curley. The Armenian Club charged the Commissioner with not being sufficiently strict in enforcing the oath law and asked the Governor not to reappoint him. Thus, it would appear, Mr. Smith is placed in a rather difficult position. That's why the puzzled smile.

CURLEY LAUDS SAFETY RECORD

Urges Drivers Point for Even Greater Mark Next Year

BOSTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—Proud of Massachusetts' decrease of almost 200 highway fatalities from last year's total, Governor Curley today urged even greater effort for a better record next year.

A highway report submitted to the Governor by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin showed 758 persons were killed in Massachusetts in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, as compared with 951 the previous year and 48,824 were injured as compared with 53,065 in 1934.

Rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police brought the decrease, Curley said, as he announced appointment of a committee to devise means of cutting the death and injury rate even more.

Twenty persons were killed in Massachusetts the first week of December Goodwin reported. This was five more fatalities than in the week preceding and 12 less deaths than in the corresponding week of 1934.
Goodwin Hails Record Drop in Auto Deaths

Year's Decline from 921 to 788 Surpassed Only by Rhode Island—Curley Names Highway Safety Committee

BOSTON, Dec. 8 (AP)—A highway fatality record unsurpassed in the entire country, he said, except in Rhode Island, was submitted to Gov. James M. Curley tonight by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

The figures, compiled up to the end of the fiscal year, Nov. 30, Goodwin reported, showed 788 persons had been killed, against 921 in the year previous and 48,324 injured, compared with 53,055 in 1934.

Few Reductions

"Massachusetts and Rhode Island," Goodwin asserted, "are practically the only states in the union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only state having a better record than Massachusetts."

Goodwin said the "splendid result" had been accomplished by full cooperation of state and local police with registry officials.

Gov. Curley, commenting on the report, said the decrease in fatalities in the Fall months, usually the period of severest reports, indicated much could be done to lower still further the annual toll.

The decrease in those months, he ascribed to a rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police.

At the same time he announced he had organized a committee "to devise every means of effecting a more substantial decrease in fatalities and injuries that result from reckless driving and driving while under the influence of liquor."

Goodwin Chairman

The committee, he said, comprised Goodwin, as chairman; Eugene M. McSweeney, police commissioner of Boston; Lieutenant Colonel Paul G. Kirk, state commissioner of public safety; Edward M. Wood, superintendent of the Metropolitan district police; John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts Safety Council; Lewis E. MacBrayne, manager of the Massachusetts Safety Council; Payson Smith, state commissioner of education; Francis J. DeCelles, state commissioner of insurance; Adjutant General William E. Rose; Chief Arthur P. Bliss of the Needham police, representing the Massachusetts Police Chiefs' Association; Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S.J., Right Rev. Henry K. Sherrill; Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams and several representatives of the judiciary, press and radio.

In the first week of December Goodwin further reported, 21 persons were killed in highway motor accidents, five more than in the week preceding and 12 fewer than in the corresponding week in 1934.

Gov. Curley starts to avert strike

Governor James M. Curley "has started to avert the strike of 200 employees of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad," James H. Vahey, general counsel of The Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, said to day after a conference with the Governor.

WHO BETTER
The question of reappointing Payson Smith as commissioner of education has not yet been determined by Gov. Curley, who is reported to have a dozen other men in mind for the position.
Perhaps nothing which a newspaper may suggest will have any particular effect on the governor's action. But it may do no harm to quote a few statements from a letter received from Hugh Nixon, secretary of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, regarding what has been accomplished educationally in this state during the service of Commissioner Smith since 1917. He writes:

"We have had better training of teachers, both in state colleges and in private. Teachers in service are better educated and better paid. The schools of Massachusetts have come through the depression in better shape than in most other states. There is better equalization of educational opportunities between rich and poor towns because of state aid. School buildings, both local and state, are much improved in quality and equipment. Opportunities for out-of-school education have been greatly widened, particularly by the State University Extension Service. The percentage of children in school and the length of the average child's school attendance have increased. The state department of education has established or improved courses of study; opportunities for the blind, the deaf, the mentally deficient, and the crippled children; school nursing; health work; safety education; conferences on school matters for school officers and school committees. The average child and the average adult have much better educational opportunities than ever. The state department of education is giving broader and better service than ever. Dr. Payson Smith has to a large extent furnished the leadership and inspiration for these advances. His professional ability is recognized throughout the state and nation. On the basis of past performance and professional standing, who can do better as commissioner of education than Payson Smith?"

MASS. AUTO DEATH TOLL 133 LESS THAN IT WAS FOR PREVIOUS YEAR

Year's Death Total 788 With 48,324 Injured—20 Killed Last Week—Gov. Curley Names Committee To Devise Means of Bringing Further Decrease

BOSTON, Dec. 9—Massachusetts closed its 1935 fiscal year with a reduction of 132 in the number of deaths caused by motor vehicles and a reduction of 4751 in the number of motor vehicle accidents as compared with 1934. The total deaths this year were 788 and the total of accidents amounted to 48,324.
Gov. Curley, gratified at the year's record, yesterday congratulated the law enforcement agencies of the State for their cooperation with Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin and announced that to further the good work he was naming a committee of public officials to devise means of effecting an even more substantial decrease in fatalities and injuries. To this committee from Western Massachusetts the Governor named Chief of Police John L. Mahoney of Springfield and Judge Charles L. Hibbard of Pittsfield.

The commission will meet and formulate plans for an extensive safety campaign and the Governor will designate the month of March, 1936, "to demonstrate that with the complete coordination of all agencies and sufficient and adequate personnel, that we may save 40 lives a month and upwards of 2000 injuries a month in Massachusetts."

The reduction in motor vehicle fatalities under the Goodwin regime from an all time high of 221 in 1934, was made possible, according to Registrar Goodwin through the wholehearted cooperation of the police agencies of the Commonwealth and the Massachusetts Safety Council.

Massachusetts and Rhode Island, he points out, are about the only States in the Union where a reduction has been made. In Massachusetts the percentage of deaths per 100,000 population this year up to Oct. 1 was 18.2. Rhode Island was low with a percentage of 10.6.
Maine came in third with a percentage of 19.4. California had the worst record with a percentage of 41.6.

Last Week's Toll
The Commonwealth of Massachusetts started off its 1936 fiscal year auspiciously with only 20 motor vehicle deaths as compared with 32 for the first week in 1935. It was reported today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin. One of the fatalities was in Springfield.

The Registrar issued the following comment on the first week's record:
"This record is for the first week of our new fiscal year 1936, and shows a substantial reduction among both pedestrians and occupants as compared with the same week of December last year. This auspicious beginning for our new year is still further emphasized by the fact that eleven of the 20 fatalities here reported resulted from accidents that occurred in the month of November, and are included in our 1935 figures. In reality then, there were only 9 deaths that occurred as the result of accidents during the first five days of December this year and compared with 15 during the same number of days a year ago. I regret to note however, that during the past week double deaths were reported from Revere, Saugus and Worcester."

One of the tests of a man's ability and efficiency is the way he is regarded by his subordinates. If they speak well of him, and the public also finds he is capable, one may be pretty sure he is doing a good job. This testimonial from the state federation of teachers speaks for itself. Probably not all the credit for educational advances in the past 18 years should be given to Commissioner Smith, and he would be the last to claim it. But his record and his capabilities would seem to qualify him pre-eminently for reappointment.
CURLEY ACTS TO PREVENT STRIKE ON NARROW GAUGE

BOSTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—Steps to avert the threatened strike of 200 employees of the Boston, Revere and Lynn Railroad were taken today by Governor James M. Curley. His action was reported by Attorney James H. Vahey, general counsel for the employees' union, after a conference with the Governor attended by President Eugene Mitchell of the Union, the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees.

"He is going to try to get the parties together," Vahey said. "I was surprised to find he knew as much about the situation as he did."

The lawyer said the Governor probably would issue a statement on the situation later in the day.

Later Curley arranged a conference this afternoon between the union officials and Charles F. Weed, vice president of the road.

Gov. Curley and the Senatorship

CURLEY VS. THE FIELD
(Worcester Telegram)

Governor Curley's announcement that he will seek the United States senatorship next year and the circumstances in which it is made cannot but be of good cheer to the Republicans. Senator Coolidge has been hoping to be renominated and re-elected. He must now either put aside that hope or fight. If he fights, as surely he must, he should be able to count on the support of the Walsh-Ely organization and the anti-Curley forces in general. Even friends of the Governor admit that the anti-Curley forces have been growing during the past year.

Thus the Democrats of Massachusetts are heading for a renewal of that old internecine strife—Curley against the field. It is inconceivable that the Walsh-Ely element has become reconciled to the terrific wallopit has received in the hands of Mr. Curley in the 1934 primaries. That was a monumental pasting. The strength exhibited by the Curley faction on that occasion amazed behold-ers. That strength, however, has ebbed considerably since then; ebbed enough, there is ground for thinking, to encourage the Walsh-Ely old-line Democrats to have another try at top-ping the Boston statesman.

"ORIGINAL ROOSEVELT MAN"
(Hartford Times)

Governor Curley will seek the seat now held by Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, whose reactions to the Curley announcement will have much to do with the size of the undertaking which the Governor has carved out for himself. Governor Curley is burning his bridges as he goes. His term as Governor expires next November and he is leaving that stepping-stone to high honors free for another to occupy.

As one might expect, seeing Mr. Curley is the so-called "original Roosevelt Man" in the Bay State, he will go into the Democratic primary, and if nominated, before the whole electorate, on a platform of vigorous espousal of Federal security legislation. Something has been accomplished in that respect, he points out, "but I have made up my mind to be part of the movement to change the economic conditions of the country to provide for social security." He believes it will be the "vital issue" in next year's national and congressional elections.

HANDS OFF
(Boston Post)

Governor Curley shows his political shrewdness in deciding that he will make his Senate fight in 1936. If next year is not a Democratic year then 1940 will not be. A fight for the Senate should really be somewhat easier than a gubernatorial contest.

But the Governor will make a grave mistake if he attempts to dictate the choice of a successor. In a moment of enthusiasm a few weeks ago he designated Lieutenant Governor Hurley as "the favored son." Democrats generally will resent any interference by the Governor with their free choice of a man to succeed him.

AS TO SPORTSMANSHIP
(Springfield Republican)

From the point of view of sportsmanship it is to be regretted that Governor Curley will not be a candidate for re-election to his present office, but will seek the honor of representing Massachusetts in the United States Senate. For who is there next year to answer criticisms of Governor Curley's administration? There have been and will continue to be criticisms enough, and voters are not wont to overlook anything in the campaign. If Mr. Curley is to be a "New Deal" man he will go into the Democratic primary, and he is such a sharp contrast to various party leaders in the eastern section that he would not be a negligible figure in the convention or the post-convention primaries. The same forces which now indicate the probability of Republican victories in the senatorial contest would tend to make him formidable in an intra-party fight. Massachusetts is rather a state in which the choice of party leader is being made by party leaders. He has even picked out his issues—social security.

SENIOR COOLIDGE
(Boston Herald)

Those hopeful Democrats who believe that they can obtain a senatorial nomination by a snap of the fingers appear to be overlooking Senator Marcus A. Coolidge. It is not a certainty that he will be disqualified to run again. He is not in disfavor at the White House. The Democrats of western Massachusetts are fond of him, and he is such a sharp contrast to various party leaders in the eastern section that he would not be a negligible figure in the convention or the post-convention primaries.

The same forces which now indicate the probability of Republican victories in the senatorial contest would tend to make him formidable in an intra-party fight. Massachusetts is rather given to renominations when there is not a positively bad record which makes such a course advisable.

Senator Coolidge has supported the Administration of his party to the limit of his conscience. He has not become involved in any squabbles with his leaders, and he could probably count on considerable under-cover support from Washington. It is doubtful that he could be re-elected to the Senate, but it is also doubtful that his would-be successors for the nomination would have any better chance than he.
CHALLENGE AND OPPORTUNITY
(Manchester Union)

American ingenuity is well demonstrated in American toys. Just now, when store windows are filled with Christmas offerings that primarily are intended to appeal to youngsters but that also engross adults, the thought occurs that the depression has not prevented designers and manufacturers from exercising this ingenuity. Electric trains are of the articulated type. Automobiles not only are streamlined, but some are equipped with music boxes, which, without much play of the imagination, become radios. Dolls resemble real babies; Lilliputian perambulators are faithful representations of the kind that baby brother rides in; and so on all through the list of offerings that have been so painstakingly prepared for the pleasure of Young America. Ingenuity and resourcefulness also are evident in this range of selections. There are toys for all ages of children, toys that instruct as well as give pleasure, and toys that reflect all phases of modernity. But old standbys are not conspicuous by their absence. Again this year, for example, toylands are filled with soldiers, cannon and other instruments of war. It was this emphasis in past years, it will be remembered, that brought anguish to the pacifists. Since they always are looking for arguments, more laments can be expected.

There is reason enough for the popularity of American-made toys. They represent high manufacturing standards. Moreover, great thought is put into their development. Here we create. Other nations, particularly Japan, are quick in attempting to copy.
The decision of Gov. Curley to become a candidate for the United States senate means a wild scramble among Republicans and Democrats for the nominations of their respective parties. For some time the Republicans have been making plans upon how they would attack Curley's expected attempt to run again for governor. The G. O. P. plans have not gone to waste, however, because they feel that the issue will be mostly "Curleyism" of the Democratic party vs. the new liberal ideas of the Republicans. No one expect a pol who is willing to offer wild guesses. As now who will have the nominations of governor from the parties.

Salem's city officials and employees who are not protected by civil service have much to make them happy. If they lived in some other communities where mayors come and go, year after year, they would be living in perpetual fear of the so-called "political axe." Fortunately for them they are serving under a fair-minded mayor and as long as they behave they can continue on their jobs. I'll bet city workers in Newburyport wish they were as lucky as those in Salem. Wholesale resignations and discharges are expected any time from city jobs in Joppa city.

A horse was so many "hands" high. A few old Salemites are familiar with the term. A "hand" was a hand's breadth. The common standard of it was four inches. Doubtless the "hand" standard of measurements was used back in the days before tape measures and yard sticks were common. Some housewives continue to use the arm as a standard for a yard measure. The foot standard doubtless originated in days when measurements were footed, heel to toe, and the average human foot was about 12 inches long. A palm, a standard of measurements in the Bible and other ancient literature, was the breadth of the hand, or a "hand" as the homemaker said.

Here and There—The arrival of cold weather brings the usual but necessary warning to use care in thawing out frozen pipes. Ban the open flame fire chiefs urge. More advice, find out about the thickness of the ice before enjoying skating. The sudden death of Harry P. Doherty of Beverly, while driving his car in Salem, is a distinct loss to the Salem Oratorio society. Atkin of the Pliver League in Hamilton does very well in that sport. His average this year is listed as slightly over 106. Few women take more interest in political affairs than Mrs. Clarence Phipps, a resident at the Willows. Principal Cornelius F. Dunn of the Danvers High school in awarding sweaters to football players reminds them that "More lasting lessons are learned from defeat than victory." The recently organized North Shore Camera club will have no officers. The members hope to make it very informal and devoid of routine. There is a delightful Christmas atmosphere in the shopping district of our city.

A stiff examination before driving licenses are issued in the neighboring states might make a big difference. Police have arrested so many Maine and New Hampshire motorists for speeding and reckless operating that a wage has been paid the other day. Are only two people left in the states who have not yet fallen into the toils.

Those drivers who refuse to "dip" their long-range headlights when they meet other cars on country roads, ought to be blacklisted. The lights are blinding, especially if encountered after traveling along for any distance without meeting any cars, so that the eyes have become accustomed to the dark. In most cases it is simply laziness on the part of operators who won't "douse" their lights, because practically all the cars that have come out in recent years are equipped with buttons to shift the lights from long to short range with just a touch.

A person who walks along the road at night is risking his life. This applies to outlying district, more than within the city limits. Almost all of the miles of new sidewalks already constructed throughout the state, there is no need of persons walking in the road today. I would suggest that folks who are compelled to travel by shank's mare and who live in dark areas such as Highland and Loring avenues, wear something white so they can be seen by motorists, and that there will be no excuse for an accident.

While on the subject of sidewalks that have been constructed, it seems in many instances, to have been a waste of money building them. Of course it has given work to a great many of the jobless, but in my travels around the county and other parts of the state I have yet to see any of the "boofers" walk on these suburban road sidewalks. Of course their construction has provided a means of safety and if the plodders do not take advantage of them, and get hit, it isn't the government's fault. There are many who feel that the money could have been put to a more practical use in rebuilding and making new sidewalks in the cities where they are used a great deal more. Take for instance the area around the new postoffice where dirt sidewalks prevail. When it storms, these sidewalks are in a deplorable condition.

Winter does not arrive until the end of the third week of December. This year, but that does not seem to mean much so far as the weather man is concerned, since he has already given us some near zero temperatures, snow and a number of freezing days. Each year we can expect a fall of snow or a cold wave in the first week of December. Anyone who does not remember this only has to check up with political candidates who have suffered from the elements while making the rounds for the early December voting days.

Gov. Curley Cheered by Good Showing This Year, Plans Intensive Safety Drive in March of Coming Year

ONLY R. I. LEADS

Practically Only States in the Union Where Reduction Made: 788 Killed in Year Drop of 133

Boston, Dec. 9—Cheered by a 15 per cent. drop in the number of fatal accidents on Massachusetts highways this year, giving the state the best record of any large industrial state in the union except Rhode Island, Gov. Curley yesterday appointed a large committee to make plans for the most intensive safety drive ever conducted in this state, which will be held in March, 1936.

Naming Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, chairman, he ordered Goodwin to summon the committee into session as soon as possible. In the group are leading representatives of the public schools system, churches, press, radio, theatres, police departments, safety and civic organizations and state departments.

With 11.7 deaths per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline sold and 18.2 deaths per 100,000 population for the first nine months this year, Massachusetts now leads New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Michigan, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and practically all of the smaller states, according to figures compiled by the national safety council, Goodwin said in a report to the governor.

There were 788 persons killed in Massachusetts during the statistical year, 1935, a reduction of 133 from the 1934 toll of 921. In 1936 there were 48,324 injured, a reduction of 4,731 from the previous year’s toll of 53,055.

In a report to Gov. Curley last night Goodwin said: "Last February you appointed me registrar of motor vehicles, with a request that I administer this office strictly, impartially and free from political influence, to the end that there might be a reduction in the number of persons killed and injured by motor vehicles on the highway.

This splendid result has been made possible by the whole-hearted co-operation of the police of Massachusetts, including the state, metropolitan districts and Boston police. The Massachusetts safety council has also rendered a splendid service. "Massachusetts and Rhode Island are Practically the Only States in the union where a reduction has been made. Rhode Island is practically the only state in the union having a better record than Massachusetts."

The figures of fatal accidents by states for the first nine months in 1936 were as follows:

"The noteworthy part of this report is the large decrease in the months of September, October, and November," said Gov. Curley, in praising Goodwin’s report last night. I am informed that this was brought about by means of an intensive drive on inspection of equipment, particularly brakes, during these months.

"As demonstrated, if 93 lives can be saved during three months by a vigorous campaign of checking brakes, I believe that many more lives can be saved if we have a campaign accompanied by stricter enforcement."

CURLEY WILL RENAME LONG TO TAX POST

Governor Describes Him as a "Very Efficient Man Who Has Been Doing Good Job."

(Special to The Springfield Union)

BOSTON, Dec 9—Gov. Curley will reappoint Henry F. Long as Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation.

The nomination will go before the Executive Council on Wednesday. The Governor indicated this afternoon that the former-secretary to Calvin Coolidge when the latter was governor would be reappointed, contenting himself with saying that he would make a definite announcement concerning Commissioner Long tomorrow. He described the tax commissioner as a "very efficient man who has been doing a good job." This remark was construed as a sure sign that Mr. Long will be reappointed.

The Governor went on to say that he would have more to give out tomorrow regarding other major appointments to be submitted to the Executive Council on Wednesday.

The question of reappointing Commissioner Arthur W. Lyman as head of the State Department of Corrections, Commissioner Paul G. Kirk as head of the State Department of Public Safety, and Director Raymond J. Kennedy of the State Division of Fisheries and Game are among the major matters which the Governor can bring before the council if he chooses. It is believed that Commissioner Lyman will be continued in office and probably Commissioner Kirk.

The fate of Director Kennedy is unknown. There are a host of applicants for his job and the Governor may decide to hold him over until he can decide on a man to replace him.

The Governor said in connection with his nomination of Howard W. Gillett as the successor to Commissioner Edgar L. Murphy of Osserville as the successor to Commissioner Howard W. Gillett as the State Department of Agriculture that he had no way of knowing at this time what the council action would be on the question of confirmation. Mr. Murphy’s appointment was one of three held over last week.

Today the Governor received a visit from a group of agriculturists now meeting in convention here. This group he said had originally inquired of Dr. Arthur W. Gillett, former Commissioner of Agriculture, for appointment to his old position but now were inclined to favor the appointment of Shaun Kelley, father of this year’s captain of the Harvard football team. Kelley is a gentleman farmer in Richmond, the Governor said.

The Governor informed the delegation that he did not know what the Executive Council would do with the Murphy Council but would be glad to consider any recommendations that the agriculturists had to make.
Gov Curley's Candidacy for The Senate, and Other Political Mention

By R. M. WASHBURN

Philip Griggs Bowker is a state representative from Brookline, 36 years old, and in his second term in such capacity. He is a member of the committees on metropolitan affairs, and labor and industry. He is in the House of the Legislature, and in the late Charles Dickens would say so.

William Frye Garcelon, a native of Maine, but an adopted son of Massachusetts, is the best Republican tactician that I know in the Massachusetts House in my day. He is president of the Massachusetts club, the oldest Republican organization in Massachusetts. Its quality keeps step even with its age. John Davis Long, also once governor of Massachusetts, was president of the club, and he, as a gentle wit, was the best after-dinner speaker that Massachusetts has ever seen, and as such a staccato stepper. It's a good show that Garcelon gives at his luncheons at the Parker house on Thursday in parts of the year.

Here he billed Bowker to speak. There I went for my first close-up of the man, Bowker, and to test his courage. I asked him what he would do, if he could, with two prominent officeholders in this state. Each is a pocketbook Republican putting his bank account ahead of his party. There is an ethical cancer on every square inch of their epidermises. They are indeed "the gold dust twins" of the party. I asked Bowker what he would do with these men in the impending struggle, where virtue will be the issue. He did not dodge this question, as most politicians would have done. He met it, head-on and to the point. He said that he would fire them, if he could, as Jonah was to be thrown overboard. I asked him if I could print this, and he replied that what he said could be printed by anyone, anywhere, and at any time, adding: "You can name them, if you wish." But why should I, for they have wives whose respect they are trying to encourage.

I voted for Gaspar Bacon for governor, and among the many mistakes that I have made is not one of them. Why did I vote for him? Because I am one of the plain people, and as a voter of my own type. I studied the two candidates carefully, Gaspar and that bucking broncho, James Michael Curley. I made up my mind clearly that the latter was not one of my own. I went out and examined the villa in which Jimmie lives, and then, on an adjoining hill, where Gaspar lives, in a simple, old-fashioned, wooden-frame building. It cried out for paint. I found the Curley villa quite luxurious. It was impossible to look through the windows, for they were crowded with flowers, the place a conservatory. One or two Hesseans were in propelling lawn-mowers over the premises. While at Gaspar's I had to struggle up through the long grass to get to the house.

Then I studied the two gentlemen. I found that Gaspar was on his job here at the State House all the time. Whenever, during the summer months, he sought avocation and recreation, it was at a simple resort, not far away, sometimes described as "the glades," sometimes as "the Woods Hole." Once he ventured out onto the ocean, it was in a cabin, and not in a well-equipped steam yacht. As I sat on a settee by the frog-pond, and hungry, it hurt me to feel that Mr. Garcelon was the mayor of Boston, at a salary of $25,000 a year, which looks good to me, Mr. Curley was not on his job at the City Hall. As long as he sat at a table, while I was starting and freezing, this same mayor, and now governor, who had promised me work and wages and who had done neither, was sunning himself on the banks of the Riviera, in patrician duck and lapping up soda-lemonades, or other beverages of a less innocent sort. Again, at a later day, I read that he was at Nassau, either as mayor or as governor, forgetting my vicissitudes as he lay supine on its aristocratic sands.

It was Madam Roland who cried out on the scaffold in Paris when she was about to lose her head: "Oh, Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!" So, too, many of the books hereabout who lost their heads and voted for James Michael Curley will not come to until they find that the price of eggs has doubled and their rents have multiplied. For it is the plain people who pay the pipe, and get it in the neck. I wonder why Gaspar ran for governor. It was perhaps because he wanted to live as well as James Michael Curley, on a salary of $16,000.

James Michael Curley, with a modesty which is all his own, and after a council with his advisors, if there are any, may say that he is going to the Senate of the United States. He admits his virtues. Nevertheless, it is a matter of some satisfaction that there will be an election before the people can vote in which the discriminating and those that are not will take part. In years past, this man has owed his official distinctions not to this quality but to the quantity of the voters.

He proposes, again, to put on the same old vaudeville show which at one time made him mayor for a number of terms and in no manner. His platform, as in the past, will be based not on performance but on promise. The work and wages which he has promised to all have been seen by none. Nevertheless, he should not dispair. He is an adept in the way that he can play on the passions and the prejudices of the people. No one knows better than that the toulsey-headed ones are quick to lap up a hook, whether there is bait on it or not.

It is an amazing spectacle to study another man. He has hitherto been his own tugboat. He is now at the end of a tow-line, in which way I describe the new found loyalty of Daniel H. Coakley to the governor. Here is a man, Dan, who has hitherto managed his own path, but is now following the trail which has been cut by another. Yet there are good qualities in this man. Coakley, too much forgotten. They may qualify him to sit in Paradise with many, even of the pious. He is not solvent ethically, that is not. He has a keen and stimulating mind. But his career has been in many respects chameleonic. It was his first delight to fall upon any of the most gentle of the governors, tear off his waistcoat-buttons and submit him to other indignities. Now he finds happiness sitting in his own parlors with all the sort delight of a proud potentate. Mr. Coakley has dented himself on the sands of time, first, perhaps, not in history, but in romance. He says that the governor and this governor that Massachusetts has had. Perhaps he hopes to live to say that he is the best United States senator that Massachusetts has had.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty and the Rescue league ought now to combine, perhaps for their greatest service. The Don James and the Don-Knightson go to Washington, that is so. The governor proposes to take up the policies of present Senator Marcus Coolidge. This ought to be very easily done. For Mark, in his stay upon the banks of the river, has been no more than a senator ditto to Dave. It is said by the political dopesters that Mr Coolidge will stand about as much above the Curley juggernaut as a hair-cloth sofa before the advances of an up-to-date interior decorator.

And yet Mr Coolidge has many admirable qualities, as well as his unfaith and perhaps disqualify him for a political campaign. He has shown enough ability to make a success of his own private business, thereby reaching a degree of prosperity which would make him a tempting target for the governor in these days when only the pure are political. Nevertheless, he is subject to another disadvantage, that is that Jim. He is subject to another disadvantage, that is that Mr Butler, in 1930, because the electorate in its omniscience thought that he was voting for Calvin Coolidge. The latter is now dead.

The societies herebefore set out ought to intervene as James Michael Curley does hereby toward Fitchburg and upon Marcus A. Coolidge.
For it will be a brutal spectacle when he falls upon him, as when a starved bull terrier sets sail for a blue-ribbon skyte terrier, or as when a blue-ribbon exhibit of the ring crawls up onto a second-story back porch and beats into a pulp the inmate of some home for old ladies. And yet, should it all come to prevail, there would be some solace in the situation, in that he would depart for Washington. On Beacon hill he is the whole show, with his own council. On Capitol hill, 500 miles away, he would find 95 colleagues who may be able to sit on his neck. In these eloquent facts, Jimmie, there may yet be some hope for us at home. For the farther we are apart, the closer we are together. And hope, like the captain of the ship, is the last to leave.

AUTO DEATHS DECLINE DURING YEAR IN MASS.

Total of 788 in Fiscal Period
Is Decrease of 133; Chief Maloney on New Committee

(Special to The Springfield Union)
BOSTON. Dec. 8 — Massachusetts closes its 1935 fiscal year with a reduction of 133 in the number of deaths caused by motor vehicles and a reduction of 47 in the number of motor vehicle accidents as compared with 1934. The total deaths this year were 788 and the total of accidents amounted to 48,324.

Gov. Curley, gratified at the year's record, today congratulated the law enforcement agencies of the State for their cooperation with Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin and announced that to further the good work he is naming a committee of public officials to devise means of effecting an even more substantial decrease in fatalities and injuries. To this committee from Western Massachusetts the Governor named Chief of Police John L. Maloney of Springfield and Judge Charles H. Hubbard of Pittsfield.

The commission will meet and formulate plans for an extensive safety campaign and the Governor will designate the month of March, 1936, "to demonstrate that with the complete coordination of all agencies and sufficient and adequate personnel, that we may save 10 lives a month and upwards of 2000 injuries a month in Massachusetts."

The reduction in motor vehicle fatalities under the Goodwin regime from an all-time high of 921 in 1931, was made possible, according to Registrar Goodwin through the whole-hearted co-operation of the police agencies of the Commonwealth and the Massachusetts Safety Council.

Massachusetts and Rhode Island, he points out, are about the only States in the Union where a reduction has been made. In Massachusetts the percentage of deaths per 100,000 population this year up to Oct. 1 was 16.2. Rhode Island was low with a percentage of 18.4. Maine came in third with a percentage of 19.4. California had the worst record with a percentage of 41.6.

(Special to The Springfield Union)
BOSTON, Dec. 8 — The Commonwealth of Massachusetts started off its 1936 fiscal year auspiciously with only 20 motor vehicle deaths as compared with 92 for the first week in 1935. It was reported today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

One of the fatalities was in Springfield.

The Registrar issued the following comment on the first week's record:

"This record is for the first week of our new fiscal year 1936, and shows a substantial reduction among both pedestrians and occupants as compared with the same week of December last year. This auspicious beginning for our new year is still further emphasized by the fact that eleven of the 20 fatalities here reported resulted from accidents that occurred in the month of November, and are included in our 1935 figures. In reality, then, there were only 9 deaths that occurred as the result of accidents during the first five days of December this year and compared with 16 during the same number of days a year ago. I regret to note, however, that during the past week double deaths were reported from Revere, Saugus and Worcester."

GOV. CURLEY MOVES TO PREVENT STRIKE

Will Endeavor to Get Interested Parties Together

Boston, Dec. 9—(UP)—Governor Curley has "started steps to avert the strike" of 200 employees of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad, it was announced today by a union attorney.

A delegation representing the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America conferred with the governor. The strike on the "narrow gauge" was scheduled to start at midnight.

James H. Vahey, general counsel for the union, was accompanied by P. J. O'Brien of Springfield, a member of the executive board, and Eugene Mitchell, president of the narrow gauge union. Vahey said the governor probably would issue a statement on the threatened strike later today.

"He has started steps to avert the strike," Vahey said after the conference. "He is going to try to get the parties together. I was surprised to find that he knew as much about the situation as we did."

The chief difficulty, according to Vahey, is the failure of the road owners to recognize the union. The road is nearly 100 per cent organized, Vahey said.

Curley Club to Elect Officers on Sunday

Officers of the newly formed "James M. Curley Senatorial Club" will be elected at a meeting of the members in the Jeffersonian Club this Sunday afternoon. Alderman-elect Maurice V. O'Toole was named temporary president at the organization meeting yesterday afternoon. Miss Catherine Mulrey was named temporary secretary.

In addressing those present, Mr. O'Toole urged the organization of more Curley clubs in the city. Councilman Charles K. Scott spoke on organization work.

Fatalities Lower In Massachusetts

200 Less Deaths On Highways Recorded This Year Than In 1934

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Proud of Massachusetts' decrease of almost 200 highway fatalities from last year's total, Governor James M. Curley today urged every effort for a better record next year.

A highway report submitted to the governor by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin showed 765 persons were killed in Massachusetts in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, as compared with 921 the previous year, and 48,324 were injured, as compared with 55,055 in 1934.

Goodwin said "Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only States in the Union where a reduction has been made and Rhode Island is practically the only State having a better record than Massachusetts."

Rigid inspection of automobile equipment by the registry and local police brought the decrease, Curley said, as he announced appointment of a committee to devise means of cutting the death and injury rate even more.

Twenty persons were killed in Massachusetts the first week of December Goodwin reported. This was five more fatalities than in the corresponding week of 1934.

Political Circles Scanning Safety Drive Choice

By Telegram State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—The appointment of Commissioner of Education Payson Smith to a committee of citizens and public officials, under chairmanship of Frank A. Goodwin, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, to promote a safety campaign was viewed with interest in state official and political circles today.

Ordinarily, such appointment would be largely routine to give representation to educational interests. With the Smith reappointment still "under study by the Governor" the committee designation was noted with interest, particularly in view of the fact that the Governor said that March, 1936, would be selected as a period in which to show what could be accomplished in saving lives by reducing automobile accidents.

There has been considerable discussion over the Smith reappointment. The United Democratic Women of Massachusetts at a recent meeting, under inspiration of a terrific attack on Mr. Smith by State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, voted to ask Governor Curley not to reappoint him. With a possibility that he might not be reappointed was suggested recently, Massachusetts superintendents rallied to his support in a campaign of public opinion.

APPOINTMENT OF SMITH STUDIED
O'Hara May Run For Governor's Council

Ex-Mayor Says Schuster Not to Be Candidate

Declaring that he had received information that Governor's Councillor Winfield A. Schuster of East Douglas would not seek renomination and re-election next year, Former Mayor Michael J. O'Hara yesterday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination in the Worcester council district.

However, Mr. O'Hara made it clear that he would not oppose Mr. Schuster if the incumbent seeks renomination.

The former Mayor, one-time considered as a potential Lieutenant-Governor candidate, indicated that his information concerning Mr. Schuster's plans came from "close friends of Mr. Schuster." He did not name them.

Mr. O'Hara's statement brought neither a denial or affirmation from Mr. Schuster.

"Do you plan to retire at the end of your term?" Mr. Schuster was asked.

He answered: "I don't think that this is the proper time to make a statement. I think it would be premature to say the least."

Mr. O'Hara was eight years mayor of Worcester, serving from 1924 to 1931 inclusive.

Before becoming mayor, he served many years in the City Council, in both branches and the year before his election as mayor, was alderman-at-large.

He lost the Republican nomination to Roland S. G. Frodigh in 1931 and has not held public office since.

At various times he has been mentioned in state political circles as a candidate for lieutenant governor. Once he was spoken of as a gubernatorial candidate.

Mr. Schuster was appointed to the executive council by Governor Joseph B. Ely on June 22, 1932, filling the unexpired term of his father, who died while in office. At the next Republican state primaries Mr. Schuster defeated Matthew P. Whittall.

His career in the Governor's Council has been frequently marked by heated clashes with Governor Curley and the Governor's policies.

F. E. Kelley Out For Lieut. Gov.

Withdrew In '34

State Auditor Buckley Is Mentioned Also by Party Leaders

By Telegram State House Reporter
BOSTON, Dec. 8.—Francis E. Kelley of Boston, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor last year, tonight announced that he would again seek the nomination.

Kelley is a former member of the Boston City Council and was a delegate to the last Democratic national convention.

His name went before the Democratic state convention at Worcester last year, but was withdrawn from the field before the roll was called.

Mr. Kelley is the first avowed candidate for the nomination which, for the time being, is open through announcement of Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Buckley Mentioned

The lieutenant governor made his announcement soon after Governor Curley, speaking at a Rockefeller banquet, had declared for nomination for United States Senator against Sen. Marcus A. Coolidge, in the event Mr. Coolidge runs—but in any event a candidate.

Leading figures of the Democratic party have suggested that State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley be a candidate for second place on the ticket. It is not known whether he will enter or seek renomination. Mr. Buckley, in the past few months, has gained a dominant position in party councils and could undoubtedly command heavy support for the place.

Mr. Kelley said:

"Last year in my second try for this office," Mr. Kelley says, "I was runner up to Lieutenant Governor Hurley. If I received only thirty-eight thousand more votes of those cast for lieutenant governor last year I would have obtained the Democratic nomination and, as results show, the sufficient election to this office. When figures show, with an expenditure of only seven hundred dollars, I gained one hundred and thirty thousands votes last year over my first attempt in 1932 it is fair to assume that I can increase thirty-eight thousand votes on my third attempt this coming year."
By Gazette State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Governor Curley today indicated that he would reappoint Henry F. Long as Commissioner of Taxation and Corporations, but at the same time professed to be a little uncertain regarding confirmation by the Governor's Council of Wednesday of his appointment of Howard H. Murphy of Osterville as Commissioner of Agriculture.

Terming Mr. Long a very efficient man who was doing an excellent job, the Governor declined a definite statement that he would be reappointed, but said he would say more concerning it tomorrow.

As for the Murphy appointment, made last week, the Governor said he had no way of knowing definitely whether the council would confirm him.

At the same time he revealed another possibility for the position now held by Edgar L. Gillett, an Ely appointee, one of the several to be levelled under the Governor's sweeping axe blow.

A delegation of agriculturists, meeting in Boston, today called on the Governor and, according to him, were inclined to favor Shaun Kelley, gentleman farmer, of Richmond, and father of the 1935 Harvard football captain.

While this same group previously had endorsed Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, former commissioner, who was replaced by Mr. Ely, it now is inclined to favor Mr. Kelley, the Governor said.

Murphy, who lives on what is described as a 40-acre farm and has a contract to carry the mail, has been the subject of opposition by farmer groups which have indicated they want bigger and better farmers for the place.

There were reports today that the Governor might not exert all his persuasive powers for the confirmation of Murphy. There was another report that Lieut. Gov. Joseph A. Hurley, who bucked his party chief on the Civil Service commissioner appointment, was not too cheerily singing the praise of Murphy.

"I told the delegation I didn't know what the council would do with the Murphy appointment, but that I was glad to receive any recommendation it had," the Governor said.

Another important appointment pending is that of Col. Paul G. Kirk, Commissioner of Public Education, also Commissioner of Education Finance. Either must be reappointed or replaced. So must Director Raymond J. Kenney of the Division of Fisheries and Game. The Governor said he would have comment concerning these positions tomorrow.

Long and H. F. Hohr of Worcester is a candidate for the Kenney post.

President Garrity, in accepting the presidency thanked his fellow lawyers for their support and said he believed the association, due to the untiring effort of past officials, would report to them any evidence of solicitation or other methods of violation of the by-laws.

He asked the members of the bar for their assistance and said the work of the committee would be much easier if lawyers made it more difficult for outsiders to practice law.

Secretary Wahstrom said he would proceed against any action of outside interest if proper complaint was made to him that banks or others were encroaching on the work which should be done by lawyers.

A discussion of the benefits to the legal profession of Chapter 346 of the Acts of 1935, pertaining to a checking of the practice of law by collection agencies, automobile associations, and other organizations, was a feature of the report of President Robbins.

In referring to this legislation President Robbins declared that in his opinion it was one of the most helpful laws passed on the statute books for years.

After reading the law, the president said: "The attorney-general has already taken prompt and effective action under this act and has driven out business of numerous collection agencies and automobile associations. It has been ruled that the language of the statute includes title companies and individuals who give certificates of titles. These certificates must now be signed by an attorney."

In his report President Robbins also spoke of the employment situation and the fact that employment had been very good during the past year, and that ten lawyers who had suffered diminution of their incomes.

He asked Messrs. Robbins and Garrity to touch on a recent statute passed which made it more difficult for outsiders to practice law.

In some instances hearings were held and adjustments were made satisfactory to the complainants and the lawyers concerned.

In 1937 ends the term of Mr. Marcus Allen Coolidge, junior Senator from Massachusetts. He is a quiet and useful Roman. Perhaps he is a little slow for these giddy-paced times. Tuesday Governor Curley said that he was going to run for the Senate next year. He told the world the same thing last February. He recommends as his successor, with particular reference to instructions which accompanied his appointment, was made tonight to Governor Curley by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, who said that at the end of the statistical year, Nov. 30, automobile fatalities had been reduced by 133, as compared with the preceding 12 months.

In the 1934 period 921 persons were killed by automobiles, the report said, while for the 1935 period the total was 788. There was a notable reduction in injuries. Mr. Goodwin reported that the 1934 figure of 53,055 dropping this year to 48,324, a reduction of 4731.

Governor Maps Campaign

After receiving the report, Governor Curley announced appointment of a committee, including Adjt. Gen. William I. Rose and Chief of Police Thomas F. Foley of Worcester, under the chairmanship of Register Goodwin, "to devise every means of effecting a more substantial decrease in fatalities and injuries that result from reckless driving while under the influence of liquor."

"This commission will meet and formulate plans for an extensive campaign, and I shall designate the month of March, 1936, to demonstrate that with the complete coordination of all agencies and adequate personnel that we may save 40 lives a month and upwards of 2000 injuries a month in Massachusetts," the Governor's statement said.

Decrease in Auto Fatalities Continue

In his weekly report dealing with the record for the first week of the new fiscal year beginning on Dec. 1, Mr. Goodwin said that 20 persons were killed. While this was more than in the first week of last year, it was 12 fewer than in the same period a year ago. Commenting on the record, the Register said he regretted the figures that "during the past week double the number were reported from Revere, Saugus and Winthrop."

The weekly report said in part: "There were 20 persons killed by motor vehicles last week, five more than in the week before, and 12 fewer than in the same period last year."

Here he bided Bowker to speak. There I went for my first close-up of the man, Bowker, and to test his courage.
I asked him what he would do if he could, with two prominent office-holders in this State.
Each is a pocket-book Repub-ican, putting his bank account ahead of his party. There is an ethical cancer on every square inch of their epider-ises. They are indeed the gold dust twins of the party.
I asked Bowker what he would do with these men in the impending struggle, where virtue will be the issue. He did not dodge this question, as most politicians would have done.
He met it, head-on and to the point, and to the President Woodrow Wilson may have made that is not one of them. Why did I vote for him? Because I am one of the plain people, and I vote for the plain type. I studied the two candidates, carefully. Gaspar and that bucking broncho, James Michael Curley. I made up my mind, severely, that the latter was not one of my own. I went out and examined the villas in which Jimmie lives, and then, on an adjoining hill, where Gaspar lives, in a simples, old-fashioned, wood-frame building. It cried out for paint. I found the Curley villa quite luxurious. It was impossible to look through the windows for they were crowded with flowers, the place, a conservatory. One or two Hessians were occupied in propelling lawn-mowers over the premises, while at Gaspar’s I had to struggle up through the long grass to get to the house.

Then I studied the two gentlemen. I found that Gaspar was on his job here at State House, all the time. Whenever, during the Summer months, he sought avocation and recupera-tion, it was at a simple resort, not far away, sometimes described as Woods Hole. When he ventured out onto the ocean, it was in a cat-boat, and not in a well-equipped steam yacht.
As I sat on a settle by the frog-pond, cold and hungry, it hurt me to feel that as Mayor of Boston, at a salary of twenty-thousand dollars a year, which looks good to me, Mr. Curley was not on his job at the City Hall. As long as a month at a time, while I was starving and frightened, this same Mayor, and now Governor, who had promised me work and wages and who had done neither, was sunning himself on the banks of the Riviera, in patronizing duck lair, and lapping up sodalemonades, or other beverages of a less innocent sort. Again, at a later day, I read that he was at Nassau, either as Mayor or as Governor, forgetting my vicissitudes as he lay supine on its aristocratic.

It was Madam Roland who died on the scaffold, in Paris, where she was on the point to lose her head: "Oh, Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name, and, many of the boobs, hereabouts, who also lost theirs and voted for James Michael Curley, will not come to until they find that

and their rents multiplied. For it is the plain people who pay the Piper, and get it in the neck. I wonder why Gaspar ran for Governor. It was, perhaps, because he wanted to live as James Michael Curley, on a salary of $10,000.

Mr. James Michael Curley, with a mediocrity which is all his own, and after a council with his advisors, if there are any, now says that he is going to the Senate of the United States. He admits his virtues. Nevertheless, it is a matter of some satisfaction, that there will be an election before this is possible, in which the discriminating and those that are not will take part. In years past, this man has owed his official distinctions not to the quality but to the quantity of the voters.

He proposes, again, to put on the same old vaudeville show which at one time made him mayor for a number of terms and later, Governor. His platform, as in the past, will be based, not on performance but on promise. The work and wages which he has promised to all have been seen by none. Nevertheless, he should not despair. He is an adept in the way that he can play on the passions and the prejudices of the people. No one knows better than he that those tinsel-headed ones are quick to lap up a hook, whether there is bait on it or not. • • •

It is an amazing spectacle to study another man. He has hitherto been his own tugboat. He is now at the end of a tow-line, in which way I describe the new found loyalty of Daniel H. Coakley to the Governor. Here is a man, Dan, who has hitherto blazed his own path, but is now following a trail which has been cut by another. Yet there are good qualities in this man, Coakley, too much forgotten. They may qualify him to sit in Paradise with many, even of the pious. He may be solvent, ethically, that is, net. He has a keen and stimulating mind. But his career has been, in many respects, chameleon-like. Once it was his first delight to fall upon the present Governor, tear off his watercoat-buttons and submit him to other indignities. Now he finds happiness, sitting in his lap and purring with all the soft delight of a proud pussy-cat. Mr. Coakley has dented himself on the sands of time, first, perhaps, not in history, but in romance. He says that the Governor is the best Governor that Massachusetts has seen. Perhaps he hopes to live to say that he is the best United States Senator that Massachusetts has had.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, and the Rescue League ought now to combine, perhaps for their greatest service. The Don Jamies and the Don-Nelleys are going to Washington, that is so Jamie says. The Governor proposes to take up the policies of present Senator Marcus Coolidge. This ought to be very easily done. For Mark, in his stay upon the banks of the Potomac, has been no more than a Senator Ditto to Dave. It is said by the political despersers that Mr. Coolidge will stand about as much show before the Curley juggernaut as a hair-cloth sofa before the advances of an up-to-date interior decorator. • • •

And yet, Mr. Coolidge has many admirable qualities, which unfit and perhaps disqualify him for a political campaign. He has shown enough ability to make a success of his own private business, thereby reaching a degree of prosperity which would make him a tempting target for the Governor in these days, when only the poor are pure, that is to Jim. He is subject to another disability, in that he was elected a Senator over Mr. Butler in 1930, because the electorate, in its omniscience, thought that it was voting for Calvin Coolidge. The latter is now dead. • • •

The Societies, hereinbefore set out, ought to intervene as James Michael Curley looks hungrily toward Fitchburg and upon Marcus A. Coolidge. For it will be a brutal spectacle when he falls upon him, as when a starved bull-terrier sets sail for a blue-ribbon sky-terrier, or as when a blue-ribbon exhibitor of the rings crawls up onto a second-story back porch and beats into a pulp the inmate of some home for old ladies. And yet, should Jimmie prevail, there would be some solace in the situation, in that he would depart for Washington. On Beacon Hill, he is the whole show, with his own Council. On Capitol Hill, five hundred miles away, he would find ninety-five colleagues who may be able to sit on his neck. In these eloquent facts, Jimmie, there may yet be some hope for us, at home. For the farther we are apart, the closer we are together. And hope, like the captain of the ship, is the last to leave.

Five In Row for “Irish”

By Jack Conway

SPARKING of news: The All-Notre Dame eleven, which will clash with the Collegiate All-Stars at the Garden on Wednesday night, has won five straight games this fall.

Four of these contests were held in Chicago, the fifth in New York.

Frank Carideo, Marty Bril, Tom Yarr, "One Play" O'Brien, "Bucky" O'Connor and the other great members of the All-Notre Dame team are rated with the real greats of football.

Carideo is one of the most brilliant stars ever to catch a pigskin. You will get a close-up of this wonder player at the Garden on Wednesday night.

Leo Curley, son of Governor Curley, will arrive in Boston from Georgetown late tonight and will play tackle for the Collegiate All-Stars. Governor Curley has been invited to attend the game as the guest of Chairman Joe Alvarez.

Mayor Frederick Mansfield has also been invited to be the guest of Chairman Alvarez at Boston's first indoor football game.

The success of the Winter Sports Carnival, with its thrilling ski-jumping on the first indoor chute ever built, proves the Garden is large enough for most any kind of a sports attraction.

The football players will be able to cut loose with sweeping end runs, while they will be able to toss forward passes for 80 yards if they are that good.

GREAT ELEVEN

The All-Notre Dame team is probably the greatest football outfit ever got together. It would be able to defeat the majority of the college or professional teams.

It will be the first time an All-Notre Dame team has ever shown in Boston. You will see football as played by Rockne and the immortal George Gipp. It is expected that the Garden will be jammed to capacity to see the opening kickoff.

Something new, something different. That is what sports fans are always seeking. Now indoor football, with some of Notre Dame's former players setting the pace, will furnish them with another.

The Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will receive 10 per cent of the gross receipts after payment of federal amusement taxes.

The game will not lack for color. There will be a band, which will play Notre Dame and other college music, while Joe Alvarez may even obtain a detail to pull down the goal posts after the game.

Joe says he would object, however, if a drunk should try to bust his way into the lineup as occurred in the Princeton-Dartmouth game.

O’MAHONEY

DAN O'Mahoney returns to the Boston wrestling wars at the Garden on Friday night to risk his heavyweight championship in a finish bout. He has two falls out of three against Ray Steele of California.

There will be a two-hour time limit on this match in view of the recent ruling of the American Wrestling Association. The wrestling powers felt it was asking too much of the fans to sit through matches that lasted for three to four hours.

Strangler Lewis and Joe Stecher went to a draw in a five-hour bout in Kansas City. The referee halted the contest when wrestlers and spectators were thoroughly exhausted. Neither Lewis nor Mal-cawizek had been able to count with a fall.

Steele planned to open his training quarters in Boston today. He is anxious to be in the best possible condition when he engages in action against the champion. Steele contends he will leave the ring as champion on Friday night.

O'Mahoney has been so active in the ring since he came to the United States last January that he is liable to have an off night at any time. The wrestler who happens to be Danno's opponent at the time will be in a fine spot to lift the title.

NARROW GAUGE STRIKE OFF

The will be no strike tonight on the Narrow Gauge Railroad, the Boston Evening American was reliably informed today.

Governor Curley plans to step in personally as mediator and his first move will be to ask a postponement of action until he can ascertain the facts, it was learned.

When they emerged, Vahey said the Governor knew as much about the circumstances surrounding the proposed strike as did the potential participants.

DIFFER ON PARTICIPANTS

The Narrow Gauge officials had stated today that only about 10 workers would answer a strike call.

"It is my information that 90 per cent will walk out, If a strike is called," Vahey said.

Meanwhile, uncertainty caused anxiety among the 30,000 patrons served daily by the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad along the North Shore.

For Nelson M. Powell, manager, said his company would not "treat with outsiders," obviously referring to O'Brien.

He further stated the company has made no money for two years, nor has it paid a dividend to its stockholders for five years.

PAY BOOST COSTLY

A ten per cent pay boost would cost the company $44,200, he said, and the 20 per cent believed demanded by the workers would cost twice that much.

Nelson said that service would continue "if at all possible."

If Winthrop town officials attempt to line up El buses to accommodate the Winthrop townpeople during a possible strike, the bus operators will refuse to work, it was reported.

Bus operators, it was said, are strongly unionized, and one of the main tenets of their union is not to assist any move toward "breaking a strike."

A long line of applicants appeared today at the offices of the railroad for work in the event of astrike.
THE SENATOR SAYS:

Ted Glynn Always Was One-Alarm Ahead of Gene

Political Wise Man Sips Ruminatively on Public Safety Job

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that’s going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The Senator comes in just as Timmy is doing the trick of making the dead fly come to life in the salt.

Up to then it is very dull. Timmy has swiped the fly too hard with the towel and it looks deader than a cold storage haddock. We are all pretending a great interest and hoping Timmy will forget that nobody paid for the last round.

So Timmy pours the quick one and draws the long ale for The Senator, and goes back to stirring up the fly in the salt.

“What are you up to?” asks The Senator.

“A bit of the avvis davvis,” says Timmy. “The fly is long since dead and I am bringing it to life. Watch it closely.”

“I will not watch it closely,” says The Senator, “or even at all. Because I have seen too many flies come to life in the salt.”

The fly flutters its wings in the salt and Timmy croons to it, but it falls back dead again.
"Well," says The Senator, "as I was saying, I just come from the Parker House. How does Public Safety Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn sound to you?"

Timmy leaves off stirring the fly. "I know where you were in the Parker House," he says. "Eight steps down off the lobby."

"That is not only untrue but unkind," says The Senator.

He sandwiches the quick one between two swallows of the long one.

"The same again," he says, "and look after the boys."

They Don't Always Coincide

The fly gives a little buzz and collapses again.

"I hear," says The Senator, "that your next public safety commissioner and head of the state police will be your present clerk of the Roxbury court. Of course, what I hear and what takes place don't always coincide, but that isn't because I'm not trying. And in this case the works are in.

"Colonel Kirk is a nice boy, a nice boy. But there are those who think that Colonel Glynn should have the job. No less a person than old Colonel Glynn himself thinks so, I understand.

"Teddy, it seems, figures he was kind of farm out to the minors in that appointment and a lot of his friends think the same thing, although it is very handy, I can tell you, to have a friend at court. Take it by and large, the job has its good points and is not such a one as should be sneezed at.

"I will have the very same, Timmy, and see about the boys."

The fly flopped over in the salt and then goes into another swoon.

It's a Matter of Alarms

"Of course," says The Senator, "there's something to be said from Teddy's viewpoint. The man used to be Boston fire commissioner, which is a big job, and you can say what you want about Teddy Glynn but the fire engines never shone to greater advantage than when he was at the helm, and he always went to all the fires on the second alarm. Take Gene, now: when Gene was fire commissioner before he was police commissioner, Gene never turned out until the third alarm was in and then he was always yawning. Teddy was always there on the second alarm, being a lighter sleeper."

The fly buzzes again and gives a little hop and crawls off the salt onto the bar and washes its face, like a cat, in a drop of beer.

"Me," says The Senator. "I am all for it. Colonel Teddy Glynn, commissioner of public safety and head of the state police. Stokes can do the work under Teddy Glynn just as well as under anybody and Teddy has a lot of good ideas of his own."

The Fly, He Circles Around

The fly gives a hop into the air and hops back onto the bar, and then hops off again. He circles around The Senator's ale looking for a landing place.

"I do not want the fly," says The Senator with great dignity, covering his ale with his hand.

"And if Teddy gets Colonel Kirk's job," he goes on, drinking from a little hole under his hand while the fly is buzzing around the glass. "I can tell you who will be the next clerk of Roxbury court.

"That will be young Jimmy Tobin, brother of Maurice Tobin of the school committee. It's not a bad setup."

The fly makes a forced landing back in the salt pile. Timmy looks at it closely and stirs it up a couple of times. The fly is really dead," he says.

RESIGNATIONS
BEFORE BOARD

Resignations of two Tufts professors, who declined to sign the teachers' oath law, was up to the board of trustees of that institution today.

Trustees will meet to decide what action to take of the move of Dr. Earle M. Winslow, head of the department of economics and Dr. Alfred Church Lane, head of the department of geology, who prefer to quit rather than sign the pledge.

Meanwhile, a "respite" for educators who continue "to refuse to sign the oath had been granted today by Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education.

Given Time

The latter made it known that a "reasonable time" will be allowed for the remaining few thousand teachers to file their forms.

"Every teacher in the schools, colleges and educational institutions can have a reasonable time to deliberate over taking the oath," Dr. Smith declared.

"I am aware that some persons require considerable time to ponder the taking of an oath or affirmation, and it is not the intention of the department of education to hurry them or compel them to take the step immediately.

"The majority of the public school systems and other educational institutions have made their "returns of the standard form of the oath of allegiance," he asserted. "Boughtly, only 3000 to 4000 teachers haven't filed their oaths."

Just what he considered a "reasonable time," Dr. Smith would not define, but he indicated that he would leave the matter up to the individual's own conscience.

DOWD ASSAILS
ROTCH AGAIN

If Arthur G. Rotch would "haul eight state projects from the pigeonhole where he has hidden them" he could put 20,000 persons to work by Christmas, City Councilor John F. Dowd said today.

For the second successive week, Dowd hurled his attack against the federal administration and against Rotch from the floor of the council chamber, and said that Governor Curley's "work and wages" program is being frustrated.

In each instance, Dowd's challenge was:

"Stop kidding the public."

He referred to the announcements by federal men that more persons were getting work, and made this blunt statement:

"Actually 2100 persons were laid off by the ERA last week, and now are without jobs."

"Federal officials like to issue statements about how things have improved."

"As a matter of fact, this will be the worst Christmas for the poor since 1930, and there will be more widespread suffering among the poor than any years since that time."

He presented an order to the council asking Mayor Mansfield to demand that Rotch release the eight projects which Dowd charge had been pigeonholed.

SAFETY DRIVE
NEW BOARD

Plans for the most intensive highway safety drive ever conducted in Massachusetts are to be formulated by a special committee appointed by Governor Curley.

Announcement of the appointment of the committee was made simultaneously with the issuing of the annual report of Registrar Frank A. Goodwin, showing a reduction of 133 deaths and 4731 injuries in the auto accident toll for the year ending November 30.

Headed by Registrar Goodwin, the committee includes leading representatives of schools, churches, police departments, safety and civic organizations, state departments, the press and radio.

ORDERS DRIVE

While the governor praised the reduction in fatalities and injuries in Massachusetts, in a period in which the country registered the worst record in history, he pointed out that 788 deaths and 43,731 injuries was a condition which should not continue.

He ordered Registrar Goodwin to summon the committee at once to formulate plans for the extensive drive, which is to be opened next March.

Members of the committee include: Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney, Boston; Metropolitan Police Superintendent Edward M. Wood; General John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts Safety Council; Manager Lewis E. MacBrayne of the safety council; Commissioner of Education Payson Smith; Insurance Commissioner Francis DeCelles; Adjutant General William J. Rose; Chief Arthur P. Bliss, Needham; President of the Massachusetts Police Chiefs' Association, and the Rev. Michael J. Ahearn, S. J.

DUE TO CO-OPERATION

Others are: Right Reverend Henry K. Sherrill, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams, Judge Phillips P. Parker, Brookline; Judge Nathaniel H. Jones, Newburyport; Judge Charles H. Hubbard, Pittsfield; school Superintendent Patrick T. Campbell, Boston; chiefs of police of cities of 100,000 or more population; Joseph H. Brennan, Allied Theaters, and representatives of the press and radio.
FULLER HINTS HE'LL RUN

Governor Again Is His Aim

NOT IN RACE FOR SENATE

Former Governor Alvan T. Fuller's long dormant hat is virtually in the gubernatorial ring, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The former governor wants no part of the United States Senate fight, and said so at his seashore home at Rye Beach, N. H.

He would not deny, however, that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

"I think it is too early to make a statement about that," he said.

The woods are full of candidates and they are all busy making or preparing announcements. I'll hold off a little longer.

NO TOGAS FOR HIM

Told about reports that he contemplated seeking the Republican nomination for the Senate and then planned opposing Governor Curley, the former governor replied:

"Nothing to it! That post never had any attraction for me. I'll never be a candidate for that office."

The political plans of the former governor and speculation over whether Governor Curley really meant his decision to run for U. S. Senate, despite his flat pronouncement, were foremost questions of interest today in political circles.

Mrs. Fuller, however, is bustly engaged in discouraging the boom for her distinguished husband.

SACCO-VANZETTI FIGHT

During his services as Lieutenant-Governor and Governor on Beacon Hill, he declined to accept a penny of salary, returning all checks to the State Treasury.

The former Governor is a staunch believer in the pay-as-you-go policy.

During his incumbency in 1927 he attained international importance when he appointed a board of three, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, Judge Robert Grant of the Land Court, and Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of M. I. T., to advise him on the troublesome Sacco-Vanzetti murder case in which Communists staged many demonstrations against death sentences.

Former Governor Fuller was at one time seriously considered for the vice presidency by his party as a running mate to President Herbert Hoover.

GOVERNOR WILL RENAME LONG

Henry F. Long, state commissioner of corporations and taxation, whose term expires tomorrow, will be reappointed by Governor Curley.

The position pays $7500 annually. The term is three years.

Long was secretary to the late President Coolidge while the latter was governor and was first appointed commissioner at the end of Coolidge's term as chief executive of Massachusetts.

Governor Curley today declared Long "is a very efficient man, doing a good job."
NARROW GAUGE STRIKE OFF

There will be no strike tonight on the Narrow Gauge Railroad, Governor Curley was assured today.

The Governor today stepped in personally as mediator and his first move was to seek postponement. He arranged a conference between railroad executives and union officials.

Following a conference at the State House with employees' representatives, the Governor stated that he arranged for a meeting between James H. Vahey, general counsel for the union, and Charles Weed, vice-president of the First National Bank and trustee of the Narrow Gauge road.

That the strike, set for midnight tonight, was definitely off was confirmed by Nelson W. Powell, general manager of the road, who said:

"The statement that the strike is off, at least temporarily, I will confirm. I have been definitely informed by union officials that the plans for a strike have been postponed pending further conferences with employees and officials of the road."

The Governor stated:

"So far as I have been able to observe there is no justification for a strike at this time. It would be both stupid and foolish for those running the road to refuse to confer with the representatives of organized labor and agree on an equitable settlement."

"Attorney Vahey and his associates declared that the officials of the road had refused to give them a hearing at which they could present their case.

I communicated with Mr. Weed and formed him that it would not be pleasing to me to have a strike at this time, that it could be avoided if officials of the road sat down with the union representatives with a view to adjust existing difficulties.

"Mr. Weed agreed to confer with Attorney Vahey immediately."

Attorney Vahey, P. J. O'Brien, union organizer; Eugene Mitchell, president of the local Narrow Gauge Union, and Robert J. Wait of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, called on the Governor.

The conference lasted five minutes.

The Narrow Gauge officials had stated today that only about 10 workers would answer a strike call.

"It is my information that 90 per cent will walk out, if a strike is called," Vahey said.

Meanwhile, uncertainty caused anxiety among the 20,000 patrons serviced daily by the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad along the North Shore.

For Nelson M. Powell, manager, his company would not "treat with outsiders," obviously referring to O'Brien.

He further stated the company has made no money for two years, nor has it paid a dividend to its stockholders for five years.

PAY BOOST COSTLY

A ten per cent pay boost would cost the company $44,200, he said, and the 20 per cent believed demanded by the workers would cost twice that much.

Nelson said that service would continue "if at all possible."

If Winthrop town officials attempt to line up El buses to accommodate the Winthrop townspeople during a possible strike, the bus operators will refuse to work, it was reported.

But operators, it was said, are strongly unionized, and one of the main tenets of their union is not to assist the move toward "breaking" a strike.

A long line of applicants appeared today at the offices of the railroad for work in the event of a strike.

LONE WOLF PRISONER BEATEN

James E. Walters, the "Lone Wolf" lifer, was attacked by other prisoners at State Prison because he violated the "convict code" and gave information to officials about the break that cost three lives last week.

Walters was hit on the head with a rock wrapped inside a handkerchief and used as a blackjack while on his way from the printing shop at the prison yard Saturday, the Boston Evening American was informed.

The blow raised a big lumce, but did not seriously injure him. The identity of his assailant was not discovered.

Warden Frances J. W. Lanagan, fearing for his lives, has segregated Walters and caused the transfer to the Norfolk Colony of William A. McDonald, the life prisoner who went to the aid of Lewis D. Richards, civilian chauffeur slain by the fleeing convicts.

McDonald was transferred on short notice today, leaving the prison in overalls and without any belongings, in custody of Agent William M. Robinson of the Department of Correction.

"I'm sorry to be going and I'm not afraid," he said.

There has been agitation to obtain a pardon for him because he went to Richards' aid but Governor Curley refused last week to consider the request. McDonald murdered his wife in Arlington and was sentenced Nov. 21, 1913.

Regarding McDonald's transfer, Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman said:

"We tried to get him out as quietly as possible. There are probably only one or two in the institution who want to do any physical injury to McDonald. I think the majority of the inmates at Charlestown were against the break idea."

The attack on Walters was justification of the fear of prison officials that widespread unrest among the Charlestown convicts would next manifest itself in attempted retaliation against inmates who violated the "convict code" by aiding guards or police, or telling what they observed at the time of the break.

There are several of these.

Walters was not at his usual work bench today, and it was learned that he has been transferred to a new cell and is under special guard.

Walters, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1923 after terrorizing the Back Bay with a series of attacks on women, was a witness of the attempted escape of five prisoners last Tuesday.

Decision not to hold an inquest on Richards' death, but to present all evidence in connection with the escape attempt to the present sitting of the Suffolk Grand Jury was reached this noon at a conference between District Attorney Foley, Warden Lanagan, Deputy Superintendent Claflin, Lieutenant Arthur Tiernan and Sergeant John Miller.

Indictments will be sought against the three surviving convicts, Thomas (Turkey Joyce) Moriarty, Charles O'Brien and Edward B. McArdle.

AYSON SMITH NAMED

Dr. Payson Smith, state commissioner of education, was named by Governor Curley to a commission to study the problem of auto accidents.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
GOVERNOR MOVES TO CUT AUTO ACCIDENTS
Names Committee to Devise Ways Of Improving State’s Record

Reduction in motor vehicle deaths by 133 and injuries by 4731 in the past year, announced by Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles, headed the list of measures to be taken by the Governor to reduce the number of deaths and injuries from motor vehicle accidents.

Declaring that the reduction in deaths and injuries was gratifying, the Governor pointed out that the Commonwealth should not permit the existence of a condition that means "an average of 15 deaths and 930 injuries every week."

For Stricter Enforcement

The Governor’s statement says: "Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin’s annual report shows a decrease in deaths and injuries from motor vehicle accidents during the fiscal year which ended Nov 30."

The noteworthy part of this report is the large decrease in the months of September, October and November.

"I am informed that this was brought about by means of an intensive drive on inspection of equipment, particularly brakes, during these months."

While we must show some gratification at this reduction in deaths and injuries, the people of this great Commonwealth should not allow a condition to exist which resulted in the deaths of 783 and the maiming of 48,324 during the past year. This means an average of 15 deaths and 903 injuries every week.

As demonstrated, if 92 lives can be saved during three months by a vigorous campaign of checking brakes, I believe that many more lives can be saved if we have a campaign of education accompanied by stricter enforcement.

Names Registrar Chairman

It therefore have decided to appoint a committee of public officials, headed by Registrar Frank A. Goodwin as chairman, to devise every means of effecting a more substantial decrease in fatalities and injuries that result from reckless driving and driving while under the influence of liquor, and I request the following committee to meet at the call of Chairman Goodwin for the purpose:

Chairman Goodwin’s Report

Registrar Goodwin’s statement was in the form of a report to the Governor. It said: "Last February you appointed me as registrar of motor vehicles, with a request that I register this office strictly, impartially and free from political influence, to the end that there might be a reduction made in the number of persons killed and injured by motor vehicles on the highways of Massachusetts."

"Our statistical year ended on November 30, and I am pleased to report to you the results accomplished. In 1934, there were 921 persons killed in Massachusetts and this number has been reduced by 133, to the total of 788 for 1935. In 1934, there were 53,085 persons reported as injured, and this number has been reduced this year 4731, to the total of 48,324."

"This splendid result has been made possible by the wholehearted cooperation of the police of Massachusetts, including the State Police, the Metropolitan District police and the Boston Police Department. The Massachusetts Safety Council has also rendered a splendid service. Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only states in the Union where a reduction has been made."

Gov Curley moved today to prevent the threatened strike of 200 employees of the Boston Revere Beach & Lynn Railway, which transports 22,000 passengers daily, after a delegation representing the workers had called on him at the State House.

"I was happy to find that the Governor knew as much about the situation as we did," attorney Vahey said, as he came out of the Governors office. "The Governor assured us that he would take steps immediately to see if the strike can be avoided. He said he would get the parties together. No definite time for a conference has been set yet, however."

"The delegation that called on the Governor in behalf of the narrow gauge employees included, in addition to Vahey, Patrick J. O'Brien of Springfield, vice president of the international union, and Eugene Mitchell, president of the narrow gauge local. They were accompanied by Robert Watt, secretary and treasurer of three unions, and they entered the Governor's office.

Vahey said that 90 percent of the eligible employees of the narrow gauge were members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Car Employees of America, the union which has threatened to call a strike for tomorrow."
GOVERNOR PROBABLY WILL RETAIN LONG

Won't Say Positively, But Adds "It Would Be a Reasonable Guess"

Henry F. Long, State Commissioner of Taxation since the Governorship of Calvin Coolidge, will be re-appointed by Gov. Curley at the expiration of his term Dec 15, the Governor indicated today.

"Mr. Long is a very capable man and I think he has been doing an excellent job," the Governor said when asked whether he intended to reappoint or replace Mr. Long.

"I don't want to say positively today that he will be reappointed, but it would be a reasonable guess for you to make. Perhaps I shall be able to say definitely tomorrow that he will be reappointed."

The Governor also said that he would have some statement to make regarding the course of action in regard to four other prominent state officials. Their terms expired Dec 1 and they are now in the position of "holdovers."

They include Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk, Commissioner of Education Payson Smith, Director of the Division of Fisheries and Games Raymond J. Kenney, and Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman.

They have been replaced and re-appointed so many times in the shifting currents of State House gossip that even the Governor appears not to have made up his mind yet on what he will do with the four posts. There has been strong agitation for the retention of all four men, and almost as equally strong pressure has been brought to bear from Democrats who are seeking the jobs.

He said that he had received a delegation of agriculturists today who urged the appointment of Shaun Kelly, father of last Fall's Harvard football captain, as Commissioner of Agriculture.

The Governor has already submitted to the Executive Council the name of Howard H. Murphy of Osterville for that post, but Murphy has not yet been confirmed by the Council. His name was held over for a week at last Wednesday's Council meeting and is expected to come up for confirmation or rejection day after tomorrow.

"I told the delegation," the Governor said, "that of course I had no way of knowing what action the Council would take with regard to my appointment of Mr. Murphy. I said that I was glad, however, to hear their recommendations."

The group had apparently originally endorsed Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, a former Commissioner of Agriculture, for the job, but they seemed inclined to favor Mr. Kelly. The latter, it appears, is a retired lawyer who has been successful as a gentleman farmer in Richmond.

More than 400 truckloads of dirt have been obtained for the indoor football game to be played at the Garden Wednesday night. The All-Notre Dame eleven faces the Collegiate All-Stars.

Leo Curley, son of the Governor, is due to arrive tonight from Georgetown University and will play at tackle position in the collegiate lineup. Both the Governor and Mayor Mansfield have been invited to the game by Chairman Alvarez.

Bands and parades will entertain before the game and between the halves in true collegiate style. A trip to Bermuda will be the winners' reward, with gold footballs and sweaters the losers' consolation.

Among the spectators will be several pro coaches, who have already secured tickets, seeking talent for their 1936 elevens.
EX-TAX COLLECTOR SENT TO PRISON

Goodwin, Who Bet Townsend's Funds At Races, Get 3-5 Years

Charles W. Goodwin, 35, Main st, Townsend, former tax collector of the town who lost approximately $16,000 of the town funds at race tracks, was given three to five years in State Prison in Middlesex Criminal Court this morning, after pleading guilty to an indictment charging him with larceny of more than $100 from the town.

Goodwin, the son of a Congregational minister, was not represented by counsel when he pleaded guilty. Asked by Judge Nelson P. Brown if he had anything to say before the case was disposed of, he replied, "No sir, nothing to say."

It was explained that the indictment against him charged larceny of more than $100 because auditors are still at work on the town books and the exact shortage has not yet been ascertained.

Asst Dist Atty Daniel Doherty outlined the case to the court, stating that Goodwin came to the district attorney's office some weeks ago and frankly admitted that he had been gambling with the town funds and had lost about $17,000. The money went through the pari-mutuel windows at New England horse race tracks, it was said.

The Townsend Selectmen reported to the court that no restitution has been made to the town. It was stated that the shortage will probably be between $15,000 and $16,000, and that young Goodwin was bonded for $7000. The difference, it was indicated, will be the loss to the town.

So far as could be learned, neither Goodwin's father, the clergyman, his wife, nor any other member of his family, was at court when the case was disposed of.
NARROW GAGE STRIKE IS OFF

At 2:40 this afternoon, following a conference with Gov. Curley, attorney James H. Vahey, representing employees of the narrow gage Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad announced that the proposed strike of the employees had been called off.

Vahey, accompanied by attorney Samuel Hoar, representing the road, notified the Governor that a conference between the two sides had been arranged. The meeting of the two groups would probably be held tomorrow it was announced.

In the meantime, Vahey added, there is no danger of the men walking out.

"So far as I have been able to observe," the Governor said, "there is no justification for a strike at this time. It would be stupid and folly for the officials of the railroad to refuse to confer with the representatives of organized labor and agree on a settlement of their differences that would be equitable.

"Representatives of the workers called on me this morning with Robert Watt, secretary of the State Federation of Labor. They said that the officials of the railroad had refused to grant them a hearing at which they could present the employees' case.

"I said that I thought the strike might be avoided if the officials conferred with the employees. Mr. Weed, president of the railroad, and I told him that I wouldn't be very pleased to have a strike on that railroad at this time.

"I immediately got in touch with Mr. Charles F. Weed of the First National Bank, who is, I understand, a trustee of the railroad, and I told him that I wouldn't be very pleased to have a strike on that railroad at this time.

"I told him that I thought the strike might be avoided if the officials conferred with the employees. Mr. Weed said that he would see representatives of the employees. I passed the word along to James H. Vahey, general counsel of the union, and I believe that he and Mr. Weed have gone into conference. I am very hopeful that they will be able to agree on a settlement which will avoid a strike."
WHAT CAN BOSTON AFFORD?

A new City Hall, a new courthouse, new schools or building projects of any other kind would increase the expenses and the tax rate of Boston, even if the federal government should pay 45 per cent. of the cost. Assume that some or all of the undertakings now under discussion would be nice for us to have. Should our program be based on that or on what we can reasonably afford? Obviously the latter. And what can we afford?

The following facts should be of some assistance to those who wish to answer that question intelligently, and who are thinking not only of the immediate future but of the welfare of Boston in the next five, ten or twenty years:

Current expenditures have gone up about $11,600,000 annually since 1926.
In spite of heavy borrowings which give us a false tax rate, it has grown from $31.80 in 1926 to $37.
Our net funded debt is $51,000,000 more than it was ten years ago.
Debt service (including payment of principal and of interest on the funded debt and short notes) has gone up from $3.85 in 1926 to $6.92 in 1935, a difference of $4,000,000. The Bostonian who pays taxes of $185 on his $5000 home contributes $34.60 of that $185 to the debt service.
The interest requirements ALONE in the 1935 tax levy were about $3,890,000.
The per capita cost of government in Boston was higher than that of any other large American city in 1930, 1931, 1932 and 1934, was next to the highest in 1933, and is now the highest.

Boston will pay a large portion of the expense of the $13,000,000 program which the last session of the Legislature authorized at the urging of the Governor.

Are we not living just now in a jerry-built municipal structure? At least, it has been propped up by borrowings of $11,400,000 in the last two years, and there will be further buttressing, costing $10,000,000 in 1935. The time is coming, of course, when the foundation itself must be strengthened. The longer the operation is deferred, the more difficult it will be.

Just when an effort is supposed to be under way in Washington to reduce expenditures and cut down the deficit, and just when such places as Wellesley, Natick and Brookline have decided that "easy money" from Washington is the dearest of all, the residents of Boston and Massachusetts are asked to get ready for heavier charges all along the line. This is flirtation with disaster, an incentive to tax strikes, a notice to industries and individuals to look for places where administration is sounder and less extravagant. It is a disheartening fact that no unified, emphatic protest of a kind to which Beacon Hill and town and city halls throughout the state will pay attention has been made yet.

Boston must swallow its bitter pill sooner or later. If the practices which now prevail are allowed not only to continue but to become worse, the city will inevitably find itself in the position of Fall River. There, a board of finance appointed by the Governor tells the citizens what they must and must not do. Do the city employees of Boston realize what this would mean here? Salaries of teachers, policemen and firemen, of everybody from the mayor down to the scrubwomen, would be slashed savagely. Municipal departments would be forced to curtail their activities. Some departments would be merged. Others would be abolished. The city would be compelled to live on short rations for a number of years. If, instead of taking measures to cut down the tax rate, we make decisions which will send it higher and higher, Boston is going to be a pretty unsatisfactory place for employer or employee, young or old, rich or poor.

If we cannot begin economizing immediately, at least we can put an end to policies which will make more drastic economies necessary.
MOTOR DEATHS SHOW BIG DROP
Curley Plans Safety Drive In Hope of Further Reducing Fatalities

Cheered by a 15 per cent. drop in the number of fatal accidents on Massachusetts highways this year, giving the state the best record of any large industrial state in the union except Rhode Island, Gov. Curley yesterday appointed a large committee to make plans for the most intensive safety drive ever conducted in this state, which will be held in March, 1936.

Naming Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, chairman, he ordered Goodwin to summon the committee into session as soon as possible. In the group are leading representatives of the public schools system, churches, press, radio, theatres, police departments, safety and civic organizations and state departments.

LEADS BIG STATES
With 11.7 deaths per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline sold and 16.2 deaths per 100,000 population for the first nine months this year, Massachusetts now leads New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Michigan, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and practically all of the smaller states, according to figures compiled by the national safety council, Goodwin said in a report to the Governor.

There were 788 persons killed in Massachusetts during the statistical year 1935, a reduction of 133 from the 1934 toll of 921. In 1935 there were 48,324 injured, a reduction of 4,731 from the previous year's toll of 53,055.

In a report to Gov. Curley last night Goodwin said:

"Last February you appointed me registrar of motor vehicles, with a request that I administer this office strictly, impartially and free from political influence, to the end that there might be a reduction in the number of persons killed and injured by motor vehicles on the highways of Massachusetts.

"The splendid result has been made possible by the whole-hearted cooperation of the police of Massachusetts, including the state, metropolitan, district and Boston police. The Massachusetts safety council has also rendered a splendid service.

"Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only states in the union where a reduction has been made. Rhode Island is practically the only state in the union having a better record than Massachusetts."

"The noteworthy part of this report is the large decrease in the months of September, October, and November," said Gov. Curley, in praising Goodwin's report last night. "I am informed that this was brought about by means of an intensive drive on inspection of equipment, particularly brakes, during these months.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Gov. Curley appointed the following committee to draw up a plan for an even more comprehensive campaign during the month of March, 1936: Frank A. Goodwin, chairman; Police Commissioner McSweeney of Boston, Commissioner of Public Safety Kirk, Edward M. Wood, superintendent of metropolitan police; Gen. John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts safety council; Lewis E. MacBrayne, manager of the Massachusetts safety council; Commissioner of Education Payson Smith, Insurance Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles, Adj.-Gen. William I. Rose, Chief Arthur P. Bliss of Needham, president of the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association; Judge Philip P. Parker of Brookline, Judge Nathaniel R. Jones of Newburyport, Judge Charles H. Hibbard of Pittsfield, Supt. of Schools Patrick T. Campbell of Boston all police chiefs in cities with more than 100,000 population, the Rev. Michael J. Ahearn, S.J., Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams, Joseph H. Brennan of Allied Theatres and representatives of the press and radio.

There were 20 persons killed by motor vehicles last week, five more than the week before, and 12 fewer than the same period a year ago.

REDUCTION SHOWN
"This record is for the first week of our new fiscal year 1936, and shows a substantial reduction among both pedestrians and occupants as compared with the same week of December last year," said Goodwin. "This auspicious beginning for our new year is still further emphasized by the fact that 11 of the 20 fatalities resulted from accidents that occurred in the month of November, and are included in our 1935 figures.

"In reality, then, there were only nine deaths that occurred as the result of accidents during the first five days of December this year and compared with 15 during the same number of days a year ago. I regret to note, however, that during the past week double deaths were reported from Revere, Saugus and Worcester.

"One hundred and five operators were convicted last week of driving while under the influence of liquor, eight more than in the preceding week. Of these, eight were committed to jail, six from district courts and two from superior courts. Six persons were convicted for the second time within six years in district courts for operating while under the influence of liquor. Two were sentenced to jail and appealed, three were committed to jail and one paid a fine.

"There were 896 licenses and registrations suspended or revoked, 75 more than in the week before and 135 fewer than in the corresponding period of last year. Of these 123 were for driving after drinking intoxicating liquor and 268 revocations resulted from insurance cancellations."
Curley To Act In "Narrow Gauge" Dispute

Governor Curley has "started steps to avert the strike" of 200 employees of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn railroad, it was announced by a union attorney after a delegation representing the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America conferred with the Governor.

James H. Vahey, general counsel for the union, was accompanied by P. J. O'Brien of Springfield, a member of the executive board, and Eugene Mitchell, president of the Narrow Gauge union. Vahey said the Governor probably would issue a statement on the threatened strike later today.

Governor Curley stated emphatically there would be no justification for a strike and that it would be stupid of the officials of the road not to be willing to open conferences with the workers. He said he had expressed his position to Charles F. Weed of the First National Bank, a director of the road, and suggested to him that if he conferred with parties at interest, the difficulties might be adjusted.

PROPOSED NARROW GAUGE STRIKE CALLED OFF

Following a conference with Governor Curley, James H. Vahey, representing employees of the Narrow Gauge railroad announced that the proposed strike had been called off. Vahey, accompanied by Samuel Hoar, representing the road, notified the Governor that a conference between the two sides had been arranged and will probably take place Tuesday. In the meantime Vahey declared there is no danger of the men walking out.

SPORTSMEN

Judge Poland may have scored a legal point against Governor Curley in declaring the Governor had no right to prevent the killing of deer on Nantucket, but he has shown himself far from a sportsman.

No sportsman would insist on the right of the "sport" of shooting down deer as tame as a house dog, poor, weak, half blinded animals, suffering from lack of food, diseased and almost helpless.

These are the poor animals that Judge Poland insists his sportsman friends have the right to shoot. Rare "sport" indeed! Bull fighting is humane in comparison.

It must have been the same brand of sportsmen who shot down the tame elk in a private enclosure in Beverly. When the big, trusting animal came to the fence to greet visitors some sportsman shot him down.

Governor Curley's action was a humane one. Unfortunately, he did not know some sportsmen were so selfish.

NAMES PAYSON SMITH FOR SPECIAL STUDY

Governor Curley, yesterday, announced his appointment of Dr. Payson Smith, State commissioner of education, to a special committee to cut down automobile accidents. He made no comment, however, as to whether he will reappoint or replace Dr. Smith, whose term as head of the State education department has expired. The automobile appointment is unpaid, while the cost of education commissioner carries a salary of $900 a year.
GOVERNOR TO TIE UP FIRST BUNDLE

Post Santa Starts Getting Packages Ready Today---Whether He Can Keep It Up, Depends on You

In all the world, there is no one who can make them happy but the Boston Post Santa Claus. The city where they live is a high-standing suburban community. Even people who own automobiles and can ride through it are envious of the fine houses. But people riding through never see the house "Frances" lives in. It is off the beaten thoroughfare. If people were riding by if they might say, "How can people live there?"

ONLY SANTA CAN TELL

When Christmas morning comes no tree will gleam behind freshly starched curtains. When dusk falls there will be no soft and mellow candle-light. Outwardly, the house will be a bit drab and dreary Christmas day.

But what will it be inside, drab and dreary? Or will there be laughter? Will a little girl hug a doll in her arms and a little boy push a cart over the carpet? Only the Boston Post Santa Claus will be able to tell and he will tell it on Christmas morning, frankly and truly, if he did reach that home or he didn't.

Today the Boston Post Santa Claus starts to bundle the packages. At 2:30 this afternoon the first packages will be tied up at the Workshop, 110 Federal street. Governor Curley will do the honors. He will take the toys selected by a Boston Post Santa volunteer, wind the string around the big sheet of bundling paper, knot the twine, paste on the label bearing the name and address of some Post Santa child and the great part of the Post Santa work will be under way.

Don't Delay

Bundling will continue again tomorrow night. Night and day hereafter, as long as there are toys on hand or funds to buy them, the packages will be tied and tied and tied, thousands upon thousands and then more thousands, until the big floors of the Boston Post Santa Claus Workshop, from floor to ceiling, are full of piles of bundles.

Please do not delay your contribution. Make it now. Make it today. Leave it at the Boston Post Santa Claus Headquarters, 283 Washington street. Or leave it at the Boston Post Santa Claus Workshop, 110 Federal street. Or mail your donation to:

BOSTON POST SANTA CLAUS,
BOSTON POST,
BOSTON, MASS.

The start of the bundling contests today means that the Boston Post Santa Claus is aiming directly at his goal. From now on there cannot be any turning back. The manner in which the letters are piling up indicates a tremendous year. With the limited time ahead the bundling must go on night and day until Christmas. Unless one has actually seen a bundling contest it is impossible to visualize fully what a huge task it is to fill...
THE POST SANTA WORKSHOP

The spirit and generosity with which Richard Chase, 5, of 25 Wedgegonne road, Medford, contributed 50 cents to the Post Santa fund yesterday is the kind that helps bring joy and cheer Christmas Day into the hearts of little ones in the tenement districts. With his thoughtful contribution, "Dick" wrote: "I've saved all this money in my bank. Will you please give it to some poor boy?" This child's contribution, along with your's and your's, will go a long way toward helping Post Santa to place dolls and games and toys and candy into those little stockings.

EMPTIES HIS BANK FOR POST SANTA

Parm Post Department

For those living outside the area the Boston Post Santa Claus has a parcel department. Before letters are bundled they are checked by investigators for their worthiness. The Boston Post Santa Claus cannot give toys to all children. He has made it clear that these gifts are for the worthy and deserving, those children who would otherwise be remembered at Christmas time. For that reason he has asked the children to have their letters EN-DORSED by their teacher or clergyman before mailing them. Just have a teacher or clergyman write his or her name on the bottom of the letter before putting it in the mail box.

Zoning System

From the labeling table they find their way into the investigation department. Then they are zoned. To make delivery of so many packages possible by Christmas Eve, a zoning system is used.

WORKERS NEEDED AT POST SANTA WORKSHOP

Men and women who would like to volunteer their services to the Boston Post Santa Claus are invited to come to the Workshop any afternoon or night. The Workshop is located at 110 Federal street, near Franklin street. The work is light, pleasant, interesting and very helpful to the children who have appealed to Post readers for their Christmas happiness.
CRIME NOT WORTH A DIME:
Here's a Back Bay bag-snatcher who has a complaint against Copley Square society. All he did in the chivalrous pursuit of his noble profession was to have a right uppercut to the jaw of a very elderly, gentle-voiced woman, at the back of the store where the elderly woman was composing herself against a faint. The woman gave up the whole business in a kind of disgust when their aged victim was found to be as old as a Pope. The latter, a dangerous species of veteran sneak-thief, whined that he didn't know why he struck the woman. "I was desperate," he croaked interred, inxsisted on the man's arrest, held him until the Back Bay station emptied him away. This department, with a statistical interest in crime, investigated to determine how many such snatchers would have profited him and he been successful. The inventory revealed the pocket-book he'd lost contained:

- One dime
- A ruffled tiny handkerchief—value, none
- Four keys, a gas bill
- A set of beads

BAY STATE CUTS AUTO DEATHS 133

Reduces Injured in the Last Fiscal Year by 4731

Informed that Massachusetts stood out in the past 12 months with a reduction of 138 deaths in its automobile accident toll, while the country as a whole was registering the worst record in history, Governor Curley last night appointed a special committee to devise means of saving 40 more lives a month next year on the highways of the State.

Mister, Can you spare a job?
The army that daily assaults Governor Curley for jobs at his Jamaica Plain door and in his office isn't the half of it. Mayor Mansfield has to take his work and his secretary, Joseph F. Melny, home with him to get through the routine hours job-seekers—worthy cases most of them—take up in intervals. City Hall . . . Philip J. Philbin, a sort of ex-officio Boston representative of Senator David J. Walsh, at the State house, sees daily horde of men, many women, whose pleas are a perpetual lament from 9 to 5. . . .

SALLING TO THE 蕾
...In commending Registrar Goodwin and his achievements, the Governor appealed to the public to rebel against a weekly toll of 15 deaths and 320 injuries in automobile accidents, and expressed the belief that a campaign of education, coupled with rigid enforcement of the laws against reckless and drunken driving, would result in further savings for the Commonwealth, in lives and public safety.

CLAIMS MAYOR WASTING FUNDS

Councillor Norton Cites Instances

Hitting out at Mayor Mansfield's charge that Governor Curley's City Hall administration has been the city crippled financially, City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park charged that the present administration was wasting money as none others did before.

In a letter to Mayor Mansfield, the Hyde Park Councillor last night wrote:

"You blame your predecessor for the present financial condition of the city. Might I respectfully remind you that none of your predecessors wasted money as you now are wasting it on unnecessary constables at a cost of over $25,000 a year, $6,000 for an architect's fee for a new air-conditioned City Hall, $100,000 for reconditioning the Quincy Hall market on a cost plus basis including proposed marble terrazzo floors for the cellar: $65,000 for 5,000 unnecessary police friends to take a city census. You promised to stop the bonding racket. It flourishes. Never have the granite gravel contractors, six of them, flourished so. Why does New England's greatest shipbuilding concern, the Boston Corporation, refuse to bid on repairs to the State house of East Boston ferryboat? Why has this company been turned down for the 'pot of paint' outfit in East Boston, organized to do business under your administration?"
A highlight of the strike situation late last night was the announcement of President Eugene W. Mitchell of the Trainmen's Union that he has resigned his position with the railroad, and that henceforth, until the strike is settled, he will work as an aide to Organizer O'Brien. General Manager Powell expressed interest over this development last night, but said he would not care to comment about it until the resignation of Mitchell is in his hands.

Demands of Union

The Narrow Gauge men's demands, presented Nov. 14, included these:

- The restoration of two 10 per cent cuts made during the depression by the management.
- Increases of hourly wages for motor-men and classified conductors from 61 and 65 cents to 80 cents.

DEMAND GOVERNOR OUST PAYSON SMITH

Replacement of Dr. Payson Smith, as State commissioner of education, was demanded last night by the Armenian Democratic Club of Massachusetts, in a public letter to Governor Curley, on the ground that the head of the department of education opposed the teachers' oath measure.

The letter was signed by the president of the club, Hagop N. Ghopourian, who charged that Commissioner Smith's actions concerning the oath law undermined public confidence and encouraged contempt for the flag.

BAYSTATE CUTS AUTO CASUALTIES

Massachusetts and Rhode Island lead the nation in reduction of motor deaths and injuries for 1935. Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin announced yesterday in a letter to Gov. Curley, reporting 788 persons killed in the Bay State, as compared with 921 last year, a reduction of 133.

There were 48,324 persons injured, a reduction of 4731 from the 1934 total of 53,055.

It is the belief at the state insurance commissioner's office that the fine record maintained by Massachusetts will result in a reduction of motor insurance rates when the next year's computations are made.

Registrar Goodwin's letter to the governor:

"Last February you appointed me as Registrar of Motor Vehicles, with a request that I administer this office strictly, impartially, and free from political influence, to the end that there might be a reduction made in the number of persons killed and injured by motor vehicles on the highways of Massachusetts.

"Our statistical year ended on November 30, and I am pleased to report to you the results accomplished. In 1934, there were 921 persons killed in Massachusetts, and this number has been reduced by 133, to the total of 788 for 1935. In 1934, there were 53,055 persons reported as injured, and that number has been reduced this year 473, to the total 48,324.

"This splendid result has been made possible by the whole-hearted co-operation of the police of Massachusetts, including the State Police, the Metropolitan District Police, and the Boston Police Department. The Massachusetts Safety Council has also rendered a splendid service.

"Massachusetts and Rhode Island are practically the only states in the Union where a reduction has been made.

The registrar also announced yesterday that in the first week of the new fiscal year, just closed 20 were killed by autos in Massachusetts, as compared with 32 for the same week last year. Of those, 9 were pedestrians and 5 occupants of auto.
PHILIP GRIGGS BOWKER is a State representative from Brookline, thirty-six years old, and in his second term in such capacity. He was, for five years, a selectman in his own town and he never missed a meeting of the board. He is a member of the committees on metropolitan affairs, and labor and industry. He is in the insurance line, as the late Charles Dickens would say.

William Frye Garcelon, a native of Maine, but an adopted son of Massachusetts, is the best Republican tactician that I saw in the Massachusetts House. In my day, he is president of the Massachusetts Club, the oldest Republican organization in Massachusetts. Its quality keeps up, even with its agape. Davis Long, also, once governor of Massachusetts, was president of this club, and, among the many mistakes that I have made, that is not one of them. Why should I be solvent, ethically, that is, net. He has found that Gaspar was on his job here a keen and stimulating mind. But his career has been, in many respects, chameleonic. Once it was his first desire, to fall upon the present governor, tear off his waistcoat buttons and submit him to other indignities. Now he finds happiness, sitting in his lap and purring with all the soft delight of a proud pussy-cat. Mr. Coakley has dented himself on the sands of time, first, perhaps, not in history, but in romance. He says that the governor is the best governor that Massachusetts has seen. Perhaps he hopes to live to say that he is the best United States senator that Massachusetts has had.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty and the Rescue League ought now to combine, perhaps for their greatest service. Tim Don James and the Al спуск появится, если угодно. That is so Jamie says. The governor proposes to take up the policies of present Senator Marcus Coolidge. This ought to be very easily done. For Mark, in his stay upon the banks of the Potomac, has been no more than a Senator Ditto to Dive. He could raise the political rackets that Mr. Coolidge will stand about as much show before the Curley juggernaut as a haircloth sofa before the advances of an up-to-date interior decorator.

And yet Mr. Coolidge has many admirable qualities, which unit and perhaps disqualify him for a political campaign. He has shown enough ability to make a success of his own private business, thereby reaching a degree of prosperity which would make him a tempting target for the governor, in these days, when only the poor are pure, that is to say. He is subject to another disability, in that he was elected a senator over Mr. Butler in 1836, because the electorate in its omniscience thought that it was necessary. Mr. Coolidge will stand about as much show before the Curley juggernaut as a haircloth sofa before the advances of an up-to-date interior decorator.

The Societies herebefore set out, ought to intervene as James Michael Curley looks hungrily toward Fitchburg and upon Marcus A. Coolidge. For it will be a brutal spectacle when he falls upon Jim. He is subject to another disability, in that he was elected a senator over Mr. Butler in 1836, because the electorate in its omniscience thought that it was necessary. Mr. Coolidge will stand about as much show before the Curley juggernaut as a haircloth sofa before the advances of an up-to-date interior decorator.
IF REPUBLICANS ARE TO WIN

To the Editor of the Transcript:

This letter is prompted by your editorial discussing Curley as a candidate for the United States Senate. The present gubernatorial incumbent, in his many unfortunate shortcomings which should disturb anyone who has the welfare of the Commonwealth at heart, can never be accused of political shortsightedness and he realizes that the tide has started to go out. It is therefore desirable from his viewpoint to become entrenched in a six year office whence he can observe the debacle of the Democratic party in 1938 and 1940 with serene equanimity and no loss of personal prestige. Any unbiased gambler would agree with the soundness of Curley’s judgment, namely, that the reaction against Rooseveltism and Curleyism will not be sufficiently advanced by the fall of 1938 to do more than reduce his 1934 majority of 160,000 by perhaps fifty or sixty thousand for either the senate or the governorship.

The question which should concern every Republican and every believer in honest and capable government is “Can the reaction be accelerated to the point where defeat can be brought about in 1938 rather than 1935 or 1934?” The answer is that it can be brought about provided we offer the public a ticket which will appeal to them: a strong ticket, an acceptable ticket, a representative ticket, etc., are all neat expressions which we Republicans use to check the reason why we don’t win elections. To my mind the time has arrived to call a spade a spade. The Massachusetts electorate is no longer 55 per cent or better Anglo-Saxon stock of several generations background; neither is the franchise co-extensive with membership in the Congregational church. At the last 189 elections the number of Catholics, Jews, French, Italians, mill workers and factory hands have been taken. We can’t regain control of the State without support from such elements, and the Republican ticket if it is to be successful must also change. We can’t regain the support of Catholics and Jews which we have lost. We can’t regain the support of the Negroes, the blacks, by granting the franchise. We must attract the Negroes and we must attract the Catholics and Jews, and if we don’t we will be left with the present radical Republicans. As a Protestant and a life-long Republican I firmly believe that a practical demonstration of our religious and racial tolerance is a real way to obtaining the support we have not to have. Furthermore I don’t believe that the men of the type of Brandeis and Walsh should cause any of us to feel so bad about the ability and integrity of our representatives.

TEACHERS’ OATH LIMIT IS SET

Dec. 31 Date Prescribed by Commission of Education

Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, said today that in his opinion all educational institutions and systems should return oaths blanks signed by teachers before Jan. 1.

There are about 5000 teachers whose oaths have not yet been filed with the department in accordance with the controversial law passed by the last Legislature.

Dr. Smith said that he would send out letters to all institutions which have not made 100 per cent returns, requesting that they do so by the end of the month. He did not realize that the “back load” is burdensome, but asserted that it was not “unreasonable” to expect returns by Dec. 31.

The law, besides not providing any means of punishment for failure to sign the oath, also does not specify any time limit for returning the blanks.

Meanwhile the trustees of Tufts College, who meet today, are expected to take action on the resignations of Dr. Earl M. Winslow, head of the economics department, and Dr. Alfred Church Lane, head of the geology department, who quit their positions in protest against the oath law.

Student leaders were prepared to present to the trustees a petition signed by 650 undergraduates, urging that the resignations be refused and that the trustees “support these two men in their courageous fight for academic freedom.”

Hagop N. Chopourian, president of the Armenian Democratic club of Massachusetts, today urged Gov. Curley not to reappoint Dr. Smith commissioner of education, because his actions “concerning the oath law undermined the confidence and respect reposed by the public in general and our youth in particular in our institutions and encouraged contempt and disrespect of our flag.”

Chopourian also wrote a letter to Dr. Smith demanding that he resign or “accept a challenge by me to a public debate whether you merit further continuance in office in view of your sentiments and attitude toward the oath law.” He compared “the entire atmosphere created” by Dr. Smith’s actions with those of individual communistic tendencies.

ELECT INSURANCE HEAD, BILL ASKS

Representative Owen Gallagher today filed a bill with the clerk of the House which calls for the election of the insurance commissioner. At present the commissioner is appointed by the governor with consent of the council.
Gov. Curley Intervenes to Prevent Rail Strike

Gov. Curley today promised to "take steps" to bring about a settlement of the threatened Narrow Gauge strike, according to James H. Vahey, general counsel for the employees' union, who called at the State House today to request mediation by the Governor.

Officials of the Narrow Gauge railroad went into conference before noon today to consider an offer of Fred M. Knight, state industrial agent, to act as mediator in an effort to bring about a settlement of the threatened strike of the railroad's employees tomorrow.

Knight, acting for the state department of conciliation and arbitration, proffered his services to both sides. His offer was accepted by the employees, who suggested that the first move would be to bring about a meeting of the company officials with the men.

In his offer to the railroad officials, Knight asked for a decision on the proposed meeting.

Knight, agent for the state board of conciliation and arbitration, made his move to bring the two groups together while strike threats were being made and before executives of the local Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America met last night and voted to begin the strike tomorrow.

Nelson M. Powell, general manager of the Narrow Gauge, has expressed a willingness to confer with employees, but "we will not confer with outsiders," he said. P. J. O'Brien, vice-president of the union, is regarded as an "outsider.

O'Brien announced that the strike would be called at midnight tonight unless employers agree to a conference."or such a conference is arranged by some other agency."

The "other agency" in the case is obviously the state board of conciliation and arbitration. If Agent Knight is successful in bringing about the conference, it is probable that the strike will be averted.

Even though a strike should be called by the union, Powell insists that members of the group are in the minority and the remaining majority of non-union employees will prevent a tieup of all service.

Some time ago union employees voted in favor of a strike to enforce demands for increased wages. The meeting last night, a secret one, was called to set the time.

EMPLOYEES' COMMITTEE

The statement of the employees' committee of the Lynn local follows:

"In September, 1931, the employees of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Company formed a division of this association. The reason for forming such a division was because of the deplorable conditions the company imposed upon its employees after the electrification of its property had taken place.

"Prior to the electrification this railroad was operated by steam, using locomotive engines, having conductors, trainmen, flagmen, engineers and firemen. During all the years that the property was operating as a steam road, the company did business with the four railroad brotherhoods, as well as the Brotherhood of Railroad Telegraphers, the Master Mates and Pilots' Association and the Marine Engineers Association.

"The conditions under which these employees worked were very satisfactory. To illustrate, the wages of engineers were $6.93 per day for eight hours or less; firemen, $5.93 per day for eight hours or less; conductors, $6.88; trainmen, $5.14.

"The working agreement between the four railroad brotherhoods and the company also provided that four hours or less would pay four hours' pay and four hours and less than eight hours would pay eight hours' pay.

PAY ON THE BOATS

"On the boats the captains received $1 per hour, the engineers $1 per hour and the other employees were paid in proportion.

"Since electrification the employees as a whole have taken a 20 to 25 per cent. reduction in wages, the day's work has been lengthened and cut up. As a result of the conditions imposed, the wages of all employees at present are down to the 1913 basis.

"The company states that the demands of the employees as represented in a proposed agreement are extravagant and beyond the ability of the company to pay. For the benefit of the public, we would like to state that the demands made on the company at the present time are from 3½ per cent. per hour to 8 cents per hour less than we were getting under steam road conditions.

"Mr. Powell has stated, if quoted correctly in the press, that to pay any increase at this time would throw the road into receivership. Our effort is not to embarrass the company in any way, but we feel that because the company has let out over 50 per cent. of its employees as a result of electrification, as well as reducing their expenses better than 50 per cent. and increasing their rates of fare 50 per cent. our demands are justified.

WILLING TO ARBITRATE

"All that we are asking for of this company is the right of a hearing on our proposed agreement with our chosen representatives. If we cannot agree, we are willing to submit our entire proposition to a board of arbitration. This in itself we believe will prove to the public that we are not seeking any trouble with our employers.

"The officers of the company have stated that they have not declined to meet and negotiate with their employees, but that the public may know the facts we quote our letter of Nov. 14, 1935, to Mr. Powell.

"This letter asks for a conference and contained a copy of the employees' demands. Mr. Powell answered this communication on Nov. 13 by stating that the company was willing to meet the men as individuals at any time concerning the conduct of the company's business.

"We ask the public to say whether or not the company's letter to us shows any willingness on the part of the company to negotiate with us on the questions of hours, wages and conditions. On the contrary, it is willing to meet any employee or number of employees on the conduct of the company's business."
SAFE DRIVING STATE'S GOAL

Gov. Curley's Commission Pledges Self to Cut Death Toll

The committee on safety appointed by Gov. Curley will meet within a week to draw up plans for the most intensive drive ever conducted in this state to cut down the number of motor vehicle fatalities.

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles and chairman of the new committee, said today that the safety drive should result in a substantial reduction of fatal accidents on Massachusetts highways.

The Governor made his announcement after he had released statistics showing a 15 per cent drop in the total of motor fatalities this year, giving the commonwealth the best record of any large industrial state in the Union, except Rhode Island.

There were 788 persons killed in Massachusetts during the statistical year 1935, a reduction of 133 from the 1934 total of 921. In 1935 there were 46,324 injured, a drop of 4,731 from the previous year's total of 53,055.

With 11.7 deaths per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline sold and 18.2 deaths per 100,000 population for the first nine months of this year, Massachusetts now leads New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California and practically all the smaller states, according to figures compiled by the national safety council.

Goodwin said today that the general committee would be split up into sub-committees to direct education, enforcement, publicity and other branches of the drive, which will reach a climax in March when cars up for the winter begin to return to the road.

Members of the committee include Police Commissioner Eugene McSweeney of Boston, Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk, Edward M. Wood, superintendent of metropolitan police; Gen. John Sherwood, president of the Massachusetts safety council; various state officials, clergymen, representatives of the press and all police chiefs in cities with more than 100,000 population.
