Bay State Governor and Boston Mayor Demand the Other Resign

Governor Defends Dolan, City Treasurer of His Regime, as Mayor Mansfield Charges Fraudulent Profit of $250,000 Secured

Question Disposition of Big Bond Issue

Boston, Dec. 16--(AP)--As Governor James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston were calling upon each other to resign today, State Senator Joseph A. Langone filed a bill intended to oust Mansfield and call a special election.

Langone, a north-end undertaker, declared he was "sick of the whole situation here in Boston."

In a more personally antagonistic vein, the Governor declared "there is one real service Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor.

Mansfield drew the Governor's ire with a charge Curley as Mayor was responsible for loss of $7,600,000 through the city's bond transactions. The governor said he intended to determine if there was a "conspiracy to induce certain individuals to give false testimony" and "to raise money for the prosecution of Dolan."

On the other hand, I am enjoying excellent health. Although my job is a difficult one, because of the burdens left me by Mr. Curley, I am facing my duties cheerfully, confident of my ability to meet all problems."

Curley and Mansfield Seek to Oust Each Other

BOSTON, Dec. 16--(AP)--As Governor James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston were calling upon each other to resign today, State Senator Joseph A. Langone filed a bill intended to oust Mansfield and call a special election.

Mansfield drew the Governor's ire with a charge Curley as Mayor was responsible for loss of $7,600,000 through the city's bond transactions. The governor said he intended to determine if there was a "conspiracy to induce certain individuals to give false testimony" and "to raise money for the prosecution of Dolan."

In a more personally antagonistic vein, the governor declared "there is one real service Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor."

"Would Mayor Mansfield favor burdening the people who were unable to meet their tax obligations, or would he favor withholding the welfare aid which the needy of Boston required during this period?" the Governor asked.

Curley asserted an increase of $14-75,613 in the city's debt during his administration was due partly to a $7,500,000 bond issue.

The bond issue, he said, was necessary for relief measures and was "the equivalent of a reduction of $2.70 upon each $1000 of valuation for the already overburdened taxpayers."

He said Mansfield had neglected to mention Boston had benefited through $50,000,000 in Federal aid during the past two years, which assistance "was not available to me during my four years as mayor."

"If anybody should resign," he said, "it should be Governor Curley."

Curley asserted, "recently admitted that the job was too much for him, that his health was being impaired, and that he needed five rub-downs a week."

Gov. Curley Again Attacks Mansfield

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Gov. Curley has followed up his attack on the administration of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield with a charge that the suit brought by the city against Edmund L. Dolan, city treasurer when Curley was mayor, was plotted deliberately to prevent the governor's election to the U. S. Senate.

Discussing the suit, which was signed by Mansfield and which seeks to recover allegedly illegal profits of $250,000 made by Dolan and associates on bond transactions during Curley's last term in City Hall, the governor said:

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan. They are after Curley. They put the case into the Supreme court to make it last a long time. Around April, when delegates are elected to the convention, the matter of the city of Boston bond investments will be brought before a master, and it will be revived, and during the convention in June and along about September, when the master's report is completed, it will be primary time. They want to wave the black flag over Curley, but I will be elected United States senator just the same."

Dean Archer to Run for Governor

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—(UP)—Dean Gleason L. Archer of Suffolk Law School soon will announce his candidacy for the democratic gubernatorial nomination, friends believed to-day.

Archer, a member of Gov. Curley's "brain trust" and nationally-known authority on early Massachusetts history, reportedly has deferred the announcement until he is certain Curley will not seek re-election.

A weekly exchange from all around are coming in gay with colored covers, breathing the spirit of Christmas in text and pictorially, and heavily freighted with their most precious cargo of the year—holiday advertisements. And we doubt if any other part of the country can muster an array of all the newspapers to match these in bulk or high quality.

In Barnstable county Judge Frederick C. Swift is about to have an 80th birthday, but that doesn’t handicap him in presiding at the First District court and it seems likely that he will dispense—not dispense with—justice from that bench for quite a spell to come. The judge has been a lawyer for 55 years and a justice for 42 years, and the Cape has confidence in him as a fair and impartial legal referee.

While word comes from the west that Wisconsin and Pacific coast cranberry harvests this year exceeded those of Plymouth county and Cape Cod bogs, as to the seasonal average, it is good news that cannery workers are still in the swing of things and working day and night to fill orders for cranberry sauce and cocktail. An order for 2000 cases, wanted in a hurry, reached the Osseto canning plant the other afternoon after closing time. The shipping crew was recalled, a freight car loaded, the railroad sent down a special engine, and the shipment went out in season to make boat connection in the morning.

Members of the Woods Hole Woman’s Club not only muster diversified talents but have the knack of getting up original ways of entertaining. The other evening they put on “Major Bowes’ Amateur Hour,” with ladies impersonating the major, Graham McNamee as announcer of the microphone, and various stars of the radio world. Two of the performers, “Mary Off the Pickleboat” and “Silly Stint,” got the gong in regular Major Bowes style, and the whole show provided a hilarious evening. Here’s a hint to women’s organizations around this section who may be ambitious to try something new in the entertainment line.

All is not going so well with New Haven train service to the south, as it did in Old railroad days and the Falmouth Enterprise makes note that traveling by train over the Woods Hole branch is occasionally an adventure—even in these days of air conditioned chair cars. One morning last week the engine backed all the way from Buzzards Bay to Woods Hole. It was hooked by the nose to the coach and operated in reverse. The particular coach concerned was lit only by a single kerosene lantern from Brockton to Boston. A succession of fuses blew as the train crew tried to repair the difficulty.

Our neighbor town of Rockland is making a record as a favorite place for the announcement of political candidacies. A week ago, Gov. James M. Curley went there to attend a society’s anniversary and chose the occasion to make it definitely known that he is to be a candidate for the United States Senate. Perhaps he did not know that he was following a precedent. It was at a republican get-together gathering in Rockland that Calvin Coolidge, then president of the State Senate, let it be known that he aspired to the lieutenant-governorship, from which he went on to become governor and then president of the United States. Then William S. Youngman, lieutenant-governor, speaking before the Rockland Woman’s Club, divulged that he was to be a candidate to become governor and then president of the United States.

It must be that in political circles the town stands high in favor as a lucky place from which to start a run for an elective goal.
Curley Sees Move Afoot To Beat Him

BOSTON, Dec. 17, (UP)—Governor Curley has followed up his attack on the administration of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield with a city against Edmund L. Dolan—city treasurer when Curley was mayor—and was plotted deliberately to prevent the Governor's election to the U. S. Senate.

Curley's Comment

Discussing the suit which was signed by Mayor Mansfield and transactions during Curley's last term in City Hall, the Governor said:

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan. They are after Curley. They put the case into the Supreme Court to make it last a long time. Around April, when delegates are elected to the convention, the matter of the City of Boston bond investments will be brought before a master and it will be revived and during the convention in June and about September, when the master's report is completed, it will be primary time. They want to wave the black flag over Curley, but I will be elected United States Senator just the same."

Governor Curley had reopened the Curley-Mansfield controversy, with a statement that city expenditures since 1931 have increased under Mansfield. He called on the mayor to resign and Mr. Mansfield, in a terse reply, suggested that Mr. Curley retire as Governor.

Mansfield's Remarks

"If anybody should resign, it should be Governor Curley," said Mayor Mansfield. "He recently admitted the job was too much for him, and that his health was being impaired and that he needed five rubdowns a week... I am in excellent health. Although my job is difficult, it is not because of the debt burden left by Mr. Curley. I face my duties cheerfully, confident of my ability to meet all problems.

Sen. Joseph Langone, Boston Democrat and stormy petrel of the legislature, sided with Gov. Curley as he filed a bill under which Bosstonians would recall Mr. Mansfield and elect a new mayor.

Law School Dean

In Governor Race

If Governor Curley carries out his plan to seek election to the United States Senate, Gleason L. Archer, dean of Suffolk Law School, will make a bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, he has revealed. Lieutenant Governor Joseph L. Hurley is also a candidate for the position held by Mr. Curley, the latter gets the Senatorial nomination.

Wants Lilac Road For Massachusetts

BOSTON—"Down the Lilac Highway!

This would be the popular refrain in Massachusetts if Governor James M. Curley carries out a new beautification plan.

The chief executive suggested to Arthur G. Rotch, administrator of the ERA-WPA, that part of the $10,000,000 in federal funds allocated to Massachusetts for making the highways more beautiful be used to line the Boston to Providence superhighway with fragrant lilac bushes.
MANY REFORMS COMING BEFORE NEXT SESSION

State House, Boston, December 17.

The tempo of the times indicate the 1936 session of the General Court may be torn between moral issues, and the weighty discussion of a revision in state policies governing unchecked expenditures.

Liquor, racing, petty gambling and probably Sunday sports may come out of what appears to be a definite move on the part of religious and reformer groups to turn Massachusetts to the column of puritanical conformity.

Liquor, more than any one item is slated for bitter battle as local option again looms throughout the Commonwealth, with prohibition units moving unhampered toward their goal for restoration of the Baby Volstead act.

In 1932 with the frenzy of “tax producing legislation” facing bewildered voters, the city of Gloucester went wet—but today the expression of sentiment throughout the state is that of universal disapproval of current conditions.

Shift to Dry Column.

No doubt exists in the minds of early legislative visitors to the state capitol, but what the trend of the coming vote on local option will find many towns and several cities reverting to the dry column.

Horse and dog racing under the pari-mutual system of betting has already been under fire, and more can be expected in the coming convention of the legislature.

Figures submitted to the governor by the State Racing commission for the past season, while showing that the state received in taxes $1,000,000 or above the half million estimate, shows conclusively that for every attendant at Massachusetts race tracks, the loss was $3.

Merchants and tradesmen have reportedly suffered a loss through the operation of Bay State Race tracks and the movement inaugurated by the Bay State Racing League is gaining headway each week, until the 1936 vote on dogs at present looks hopeless for the future of the grayhound breeders.

At the same time, the legislature will have measures before it seeking out abolition of the racing privileges granted by the electorate. Senator William P. McCarthy of Lowell has a petition before the senate requesting the General Court to nullify the vote of the people.

Wipe Out Racing.

More than likely it will be the reference of the matter to the voters which will wipe out the racing in most counties except Suffolk. The Suffolk Downs management may complain themselves on locating in the most liberal county in the state, thus protecting their investment, to a degree.

Beano, Bingo, and other chance games will be under heavy fire in the coming battle on the Hill.

Churches while sponsoring these games, in a minority of cases, appear justified at the widespread growth of boot and parties and no legislator can well afford to spurn the white list of religious groups as evidenced by the shift of votes in the House of Representatives last session after William Cardinal O’Connell attacked liberals for approving the state lottery plan.

Lastly, there may be some effort made to curb the Sunday sports program—although no great hope is held for much progress along these lines.

Summed up the legislature is going to find itself much in the role of a reformer organization, confronted with the problem of restoring Puritanical customs in the Bay State.

What will actually happen depends upon the activity of church groups. Their unification within the next few weeks on major issues of moral welfare appear to be the only item now to be taken into account.

REFFERRED TO DEVER

Curley Says Action Against E. L. Dolan Is Deliberate Plot

BOSTON, Dec. 17—Governor Curley has followed up his attack on the administration of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield with a charge that the suit brought by the city against Edmund E. Dolan—City treasurer when Curley was mayor—was plotted deliberately to prevent the governor's election to the U. S. Senate.

Curley had reopened the Curley-Mansfield controversy with a statement that city expenditures in every municipal department had increased under Mansfield. He called on the mayor to resign and Mansfield, in a terse reply, suggested that Curley retire as governor.

“If anybody should resign, it should be Governor Curley,” said Mansfield, “he recently admitted the job was too much for him, and that his health was being impaired and that he needed five rubdowns a week. . . . Curley's Message Will Be Released Piecemeal Fashion

Governor Don't Want Immediate Publicity of Speech Which Will Be Given New Year's Day.

BY J. V. CLARK
BOSTON, Dec. 17—Gov. Curley's message to the incoming Legislature will be given in your piecemeal. This in spite of the fact that His Excellency has announced that he will have no copies of his message for the press available for publication before delivery.

The law prescribes that the Legislature meet the first Wednesday in January, which date falls this year on New Year's day. The Legislature must sit on days prescribed by law, Sundays excepted, even if they are legal holidays.

This puts the governor in an embarrassing position. The newspapers will not publish on New Year's day and, therefore, the governor will lose the immediate publicity of his speech, so beloved of politicians.

A suggestion was made to His Excellency that he issue some sort of a resume of his address to the Legislature, to be released for the morning newspapers of Jan. 1. The governor has decided not to do this for the very obvious reason that, if his speech is printed in resume form in the morning papers few persons would care to listen to the speech, either in person or over the radio.

"No," says the governor, "I will not give out advance copies of my speech." He then from time to time, under questioning proceeds to take up various important phases of his speech. Before Jan. 1, we believe, we will be able to give you the salient features of his address.

Most recent pronouncement in connection with the Jan. 1 address is that Gov. Curley will ask for a reduction in the membership of the Massachusetts House and Senate by 50 per cent. He will also ask for biennial sessions of the Legislature, which is that Gov. Curley will ask for a reduction in the membership of the Massachusetts House and Senate by 50 per cent. He will also ask for biennial sessions of the Legislature. He will seek to make no savings in institutional costs, repeating what he has frequently said, that "the state has been criminally negligent in caring for the wards of the state."

THE MANSFIELD FEUD.

The governor,smarting under the taunt of Mayor Mansfield of Boston that he has been an unsuccessful governor, has launched his attack on Mansfield. The attack is bitter. In substance Gov. Curley says that no man in the history of Boston politics ever descended to so low a depth as the present mayor to secure his election. He claims Mansfield made election promises which he knew that he would be financially unable to meet.

He repeats Mansfield's charge that the net debt of the city increased under the regime of Curley as mayor of Boston by over 33 millions of dollars. Curley then says this bald statement is a distantly attempt to mislead citizens. He, Curley, then proceeds to show how this increase legitimately occurred, by issuing a great bond issue to care for emergency relief, etc.

After defending the finances of his regime as mayor, Gov. Curley then proceeds to pitch into Mansfield, stating that the only evidence the public has of the Mansfield administration is an increased tax rate, increased debt and increased inefficiency. He maintains that there is only one real service that Mansfield, "the whiner," can render the people of Boston and that is to retire as mayor.

The Curley-Mansfield feud makes interesting reading for those persons, who like a fight in which plenty of dirt is thrown. It has more importance to the state at large than most fights concerning the running of the city of Boston, as Curley will be a candidate for the U. S. Senate and before election time arrives his career as mayor of Boston, as well as governor of the state, will be brought out in review.

THE MAYOR SAYS NO

While Mayor Mansfield engages in battle with Gov. Curley he is meeting the resentment of the theatrical-loving and literary sections of the community. The reason, of course, is his flat edict that the play, "The Children's Hour," shall not be shown in Boston.

This play, as all the world knows, won the critical approval of every reviewer when it opened in New York. It has been running in New York for 14 months to capacity houses. It has met with no opposition in its course and was to have come to Boston under the auspices of the sedate Theater Guild and an allied theatrical presentation organization, whose 5000 subscribers represent the same type of amusement seeker in the realm of the drama as the symphony orchestra subscribers represent in the realm of music.

Mansfield states that as there is a homosexual motive in the play he will not permit it to be produced here. The play is in no manner lascivious but a profound tragedy of American life. This play, no doubt, goes to the mercy of the mayor, who has put his foot down. Efforts to induce the mayor to see the play have been of no avail; he has simply made up his mind he won't have it and that's all there is to it.

This is by no means the first play or opera banned in Boston. O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" and Richard Strauss' "Salome," to take two for example, went under the ban, although the Theater Guild won a partial victory in presenting "Strange Interlude" in a nearby city, much to the delight of the merchant of that city, who enjoyed the patronage of thousands, who flocked to see the play.

The unfortunate part of the whole proceeding is that "rough stuff" gets in the theaters of Boston, especially in the burlesque houses, while those persons having little financial interest in theatrical productions, who are toiling to bring to the city the best in music and drama, are constantly buffeted by the politicians.

CAN MANSFIELD BE OUSTED?

Enmity towards Mansfield took its most concrete form when Senator Joseph A. Langone of Boston filed a Senate bill aimed to oust Mansfield from office. The bill was filed only a few hours after newspapers had been circulated throughout the city containing Curley's blast at the Boston mayor.

The Langone bill calls for a special referendum election in Boston in May, at which the voters will be presented with the question, "Shall there be an election for mayor the first Tuesday in November?" If a majority votes in the affirmative an election shall be held and the result shall be declared in all respects as other municipal elections for mayor. Under the Langone bill the term of the present mayor would end when the new mayor is elected.
BOSTON—The $1000 fee paid Atty. George Stanley Harvey for defending the Millen brothers was today equally distributed among the widows of four men slain by the Millen-Faber-killer-bandits.

Those receiving $250 checks were Mrs. Helen Haddock, Needham; Mrs. Margaret McLeod, Needham; Mrs. Grace Summer, Lynn, and Mrs. Marion Clark, Fitchburg.

Gov. Curley at the request of Harvey, Curley denounced the statute which fixes a maximum $1000 fee for defending men and women in capital cases, likening it to the law which fixes the governor’s salary at $10,000, while the mayor of Boston, receives $20,000.

BELIEVE ARCHER WILL SEEK GOVERNORSHIP

Governor Flays
Second-Hand Beds

BOSTON, Dec. 17 (INS)—"The theory that anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor should not be countenanced," Governor James M. Curley declared this afternoon as he scored the city institutions department for buying second-hand beds "that evidently hadn't been condemned."

The governor advised Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Boston finance commission to demand a refund of $225 from the Massachusetts General Hospital, from whom the beds were purchased.

Curley stated the city paid $4 a piece for beds which later were purchased at $25 cents each. The $225 refund is the difference between the first and second prices, he said.

In October, 1934, the hospital sold 60 beds to the city at $4 each. In October of this year the hospital sold 25 similar beds to the city at 25 cents each.

Curley Sends Clark

BOSTON, Dec. 17 (PT)—Governor
Curley today referred to Attorney-General Paul A. Dever for investigation and report the petition seeking commutation to life imprisonment of the death sentence of Miller
Frank Clark, middle-aged South
Boston truckman's helper.
Clark is scheduled to die in the electric chair during the week ofJan.
12 for the breadknife murder of 18-year-old Ethel Zuckerman, who believes that a grave injustice
was done Councillor Brennan by the political column of one of the local weekly papers last Sunday.

State Patronage
An Ancient Evil /
"Fair" to Whom?
Mr. Hoover Again

To the staunch defense of Executive Councillor James J. Brennan of Somerville comes J. H. Meade of 135 Chelmsford street, this city, who believes that a grave injustice
was done Councillor Brennan by
the political column of one of the local weekly papers last Sunday.

All of which did not rest well with Mr. Meade, who said to the Bystander today:
"I think Mr. Brennan should receive much more credit than the persons who tried to discredit him.
I happen to be in a position to know that if these gentlemen had wished to care for their constituents with regard to work on the state highways, they had the same opportunity as Mr. Brennan to secure jobs. It happens that one of our Democratic representatives was present at a conference last Wednesday morning when the governor gave orders to put 2700 men to work and that our Democratic representative was given the same amount of patronage as Mr. Brennan. If that representative had been sincere and really wanted to take care of the men in his district instead of trying to spread his patronage among 2700 layoffs throughout the city, then I do not believe that the statement to which I have referred would have been necessary.

"and not being hostile to any of our local representatives, and not being interested in the candidacy of any politician, I am inclined to believe that a grave injustice was done Mr. Brennan and I am asking you to give me space in your well-read column to see if that mistake is rectified, especially because I was in a position to know all the facts in the case. The people in Mr.
Brennan's district should well appreciate the fact that they have a man representing their end of the district as well as his own."

As a matter of fact, why should it be necessary for either Mr. Brennan or any legislator, local or otherwise, to act as a walking employment agency? Those state jobs should not be monopolized by any group of officeholders who happen to be in favor with the governor at the moment. What have we state employment offices for? Why shouldn't men be selected from the lists of applicants on file in such offices, or from the local welfare lists? The Bystander is keenly conscious of the fact that he is tiling at a windmill when he tries to oppose the patronage evil in Massaechusetts, but there is no harm in getting a little clear light on the situation. We want to be fair to Mr. Brennan and to members of the General Court, but we also think that the poor fellow who doesn't happen to know Mr. Brennan or any member of the legislature and who has been tramping the streets for months, also deserves a break. If the governor has any jobs to give out in this district, why doesn't he do business with experienced employees of the state whose daily work it is to find employment for the commonwealth's inhabitants?

Our apologies go out to Edward C. Eno, efficient and progressive president of the Lowell Central Labor Union, for the slip of the writer which made theLEADER refer last evening to Charles M.
Erwin as "president" of that organization. Mr. Erwin is financial sec-tary. We're sorry.

Mr. Hoover's belated proposals for a new system of governmental re"lief, replacing Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal policies, would have been received more enthusiastically had they not come on the eve of a presdential election year. Mr. Hoover,

despite all his pious inferences to the contrary, is playing politics.

Now that Mr. Roosevelt has succeeded in lifting the country out following four years of Hoover futility, the latter is ready to tell the country just what should be done "in the interest of good government." Why didn't Mr. Hoover put his four-point relief plan into effect in 1930, '31 or '32 when the nation was begging for something? He reminds one of the curbstone firemen who stand with hands in their pockets while flames rage and then, when the danger has passed, tell the world what a rotten job the professional firefighters did.

Dolan Investigations

With the long projected Dolan investigation at last out in the open, the eternal round of speculation as to the political why and wherefore has started. The tight lid kept by the Mayor on all information out of City Hall prevents any but the most routine statements to be issued. Thus the reasons for the present administration's efforts in pushing the affair remain shrouded in mystery.

Very few voices, however, dissent from the opinion that, with the filing Saturday of the charges against Edmund L. Dolan in the Suffolk County Supreme Court, the animosity between Mayor Mansfield and Governor Curley has come to a head. That a showdown was imminent became evident from the early days of September when the Mayor charged that the Curley-controlled Finance Commission was issuing a series of attacks upon his administration with the purpose of embarrassing him.

New Suits Promised

The announcement yesterday of the city's intention of filing a new suit against Dolan within a month's time, this time in connection with the Mohawk Packing Company, indicates that in all probability the strategy of the present administration will be to file these suits (there are four left), in an attempt to embarrass Governor Curley right up to the Democratic primaries in September. It has never been denied either at City Hall or on Beacon Hill that the attacks on Dolan were an attempt to bring the responsible persons to justice. It is reasonable to suppose therefore that outside of his desire as a member of the Committee on Ethics for the American Bar Association to clear up any irregularities in municipal government the excellent political opportunity offered him.

City Hall observers say that the Dolan investigation publicity marks the opening of Mayor Mansfield's fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Although the Mayor has issued no statement indicating that his future political aspirations point toward Beacon Hill, it is no secret that the Governor's determination to run for the United States Senate has left the Mayor with as good a chance to be elected Governor as any Democrat in the Commonwealth.

Mansfield's Hopes

If Mansfield succeeds in discrediting Governor Curley, he will succeed at the same time in weakening any man the Governor may back in the next gubernatorial fight. It is well known that Curley, if he goes to the Capital, hopes to be able to leave behind him on Beacon Hill a man friendly to him, so that he may still exercise a certain amount of control in the election of the next Governor. Governor Curley has already indicated that his candidate for the governorship will be Lieutenant Gov. Joseph L. Hurley, who, with State Treasurer Charles P. Hurley, is considered to be the strongest candidates for the Democratic nomination.

Liquor—Rotch Ruling / On WPA Workers Protected

WPA workers in Massachusetts—supported by the people’s money—can buy liquor and keep their jobs, Arthur G. Rotch, WPA administrator ruled today.

“We have no exact ruling on liquor purchases by our workers,” said Mr. Rotch, this morning, “but so long as a worker does not allow liquor to interfere with his work he will not be ineligible for WPA relief.”

This ruling in Massachusetts is in direct reversal of Colorado’s new WPA ruling which bars all workers from spending government relief funds for liquor under the penalty of expulsion from relief rolls.

Last week in Colorado a WPA worker struck and killed a mother driving his car while under the influence of liquor. When PWA administrator Paul D. Shriver heard the news he issued a strong order: “Any one who has the money to buy liquor does not need federal relief. Drinking on or off the job will be grounds for dismissal.”

Informed of this event, Massachusetts Administrator Rotch said today: “I believe that such a rule interferes with an individual’s personal rights. Reasonable use of liquor is permitted for WPA workers in Massachusetts.”

Speaking for the Anti-Saloon League, Superintendent Arthur J. Davis advised Mr. Rotch to “reconsider his attitude,” “The average citizen,” he continued, “is not willing to be taxed for the necessary support of those in stringent circumstances. Few will long be willing to provide funds for the purchase of alcoholic liquors by those on Government relief.”

Rotch—His Record
Praised by WPA Official

Arthur G. Rotch’s record as Massachusetts WPA administrator—subject to repeated attacks recently by local politicians and Governor Curley—received high praise last week from high authority.

Praised was Aubrey Williams, assistant national administrator of the WPA.

Mr. Williams came to Boston to speak at the Ford Hall Youth Forum on the New Youth Administration—a WPA subdivision he heads. He took time out however to heartily and publicly endorse Mr. Rotch and to bluntly discredit Governor Curley’s recent statement that the WPA administration in Massachusetts is being investigated.

Said Mr. Williams: “Investigate Arthur Rotch? I should say not. We folk in Washington think he is a very fine and competent person. He

Harvey—His Fee Goes To Millen Victims’ Widows

Checks of $250 each were presented to the widows of the Millen brothers’ victims today at the State House.

The recipients were Mrs. Helen C. Haddock and Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Needham, Mrs. Grace Sumners of Lynn and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg.

Standing before Mr. Harvey, Governor Curley said: “Attorney Harvey is not a wealthy man but his heart is as big as the building we are in now.”

The Governor made the presentation a further opportunity to comment on the statutory maximum fee of $1000 for lawyers appointed by the court to defend criminals. He said it was computed to the $10,000-a-year salary paid the Governor while the Mayor of Boston was receiving $20,000.

Langone—Files Bill Seeking to Oust Mayor

Preliminary funds are seen being filed yesterday before the Federal Court by Senator Joseph Langone of Adams, a supporter of Mayor Curley during the last campaign. Senator Langone, with the Mayor soon to receive a new appointment to office, is seeking to oust Mayor Curley from office. A strong supporter of Adams man would be appointed to the Adams district court, and state commissioner of education.

Two appointments that are of more than ordinary interest to Adams residents are likely to be made by Governor James M. Curley tomorrow when a weekly meeting of the executive council is held. The two appointments—both of which are for five year terms—are for clerk of the Adams district court, and state commissioner of education.

For the clerk of court position six candidates have been mentioned. They are Attorney Edwin K. McPeck, the incumbent; James P. McAndrews, Attorney Daniel B. Kiley, Jr., Attorney Gerald F. Gravel, Bernard Minno, all of Adams, and Attorney John N. Alberti of North Adams.

The name of James G. Reardon, superintendent of Adams public schools, has been prominently mentioned for appointment as state commissioner of education to succeed Dr. Payson Smith whom it is said Governor Curley is not desirous of re-naming.

Mr. Reardon was in conference with Governor Curley at the latter’s home in Boston early last week and at that time it was reported the Adams man would be appointed to the state commissionership at last Wednesday’s meeting of the executive council. No major appointments were made at last week’s session, however, and it is now believed the commissionership nomination will probably be made when the council meets tomorrow.

Senator Langone Files Bill for Special Election in Boston

'SICK OF SITUATION'

Curley Defends Financial Record as City's Executive

'Special to Standard-Times'

BOSTON, Dec. 17—The Mansfield-Curley controversy which has been growing in intensity since early Summer, reached a high point today when each official suggested that the other retire from office. Senator Joseph A. Langone added his bit to the row by filing a bill in the Legislature which would provide for a special election for Mayor of Boston.

"There is one real service that Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston and that is to announce his retirement as Mayor," said Governor Curley. The Governor defended his own record, attacking Mayor Mansfield for increased expenditures and challenging him to point to a single "substantial" accomplishment during the four years of the past two years. "If anybody should retire, it ought to be Governor Curley," was the Mayor's reply.

Curley followed up his attack on the Administration of Mansfield with a charge that the suit brought by the city against Edmund L. Dolan — City Treasurer when Curley was mayor — was plotted deliberately to prevent the Governor's election to the U.S. Senate.

CURLEY AND MANSFIELD

The annoyance that Governor Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston seem to be beyond the bounds of reason. Mayor Mansfield merely wishes to revise the financial methods in the Boston City Hall, which involves changing what Curley's regime had inaugurated. The Governor should recognize the fact that he is no longer mayor.
and out abolition of the racing privileges granted by the electorate. Sen. William F. McCarthy of Lowell has a petition before the Senate requesting the General Court to nullify the vote of the people. More than likely it will be the reference of the matter to the voters which will wipe out the racing in most counties except Suffolk. The Suffolk Downs management may compliment themselves on locating in the most liberal county in the state, thus protecting their investment to a degree.

Churches while sponsoring these games, in a minority of cases, appear upset at the widespread growth of beano parties and no legislator can well afford to spurn the wishes of the religious groups as evidenced by the shift of votes in the House of Representatives last session after William Cardinal O'Connell attacked liberals for approving the state lottery plan.

Summed up the legislature is going to find itself much in the role of a reform organization, confronted with the problem of restoring puritanical customs in the Bay State.

What will actually happen, depends upon the activity of church groups. Their unification within the next few weeks on major issues of moral welfare appear to be the only item now to be taken into account.

REFORM GROUPS ARE EXPECTED TO TAKE PART IN MANY ISSUES

Liquor, Racing, Petty Gambling and All Sunday Sports Will Be Up for Discussion in Legislature

(Special to the News)

State House, Boston, Dec. 17.—The tempo of the times indicates the 1936 session of the legislature may be torn between moral issues, and the weighty discussion of a revision in state policies governing unchecked expenditures. Liquor, racing, petty gambling and probably Sunday sports may come out of what appears to be a definite move on the part of religious and reformer groups to return Massachusetts to the column of puritanical conduct.

Liquor, more than any one item is suited for bitter battle, as local opinion again rages throughout the Commonwealth with prohibition units moving unhampered toward their goal for restoration of the Baby Volstead act.

In 1932 with the frenzy of “tax producing legislation” raging bewildered voters the state of Newburyport went wet, but today the expression of sentiment throughout the state is that of universal disapproval of current conditions.

No doubt exists in the minds of early legislative visitors to the state capital, but what the trend of the coming vote on local option will find many towns and several cities reverting to the dry column.

Horse and dog racing under the pari-mutual system of betting has already been under fire, and more can be expected in the coming convention of the legislature. Figures submitted to the governor by the state racing commission for the past season, while showing that the state received in taxes $1,000,000 over and above the half million estimate, shows conclusively that for every attender at Massachusetts race tracks, the loss was $4.

Merchants and tradesmen have repeatedly suffered a loss through the operation of Bay State race tracks and the movement inaugurated by the Puritan League is gaining headway each week, until the 1936 vote on dogs at present looks hopeless for the future of the greyhound leapers.

At the same time, the legislature will have measures before it seeking out and out abolition of the racing privileges granted by the electorate. Senator William F. McCarthy of Lowell has a petition before the Senate requesting the General Court to nullify the vote of the people. More than likely it will be the reference of the matter to the voters which will wipe out the racing in most counties except Suffolk. The Suffolk Downs managers may compliment themselves on locating in the most liberal county in the state—thus protecting their investment to a degree.

Churches while sponsoring these games, in a minority of cases, appear upset at the widespread growth of beano parties and no legislator can well afford to spurn the wishes of the religious groups as evidenced by the shift of votes in the House of Representatives last session after William Cardinal O'Connell attacked liberals for approving the state lottery plan.

Summed up the legislature is going to find itself much in the role of a reformer organization, confronted with the problem of restoring puritanical customs in the Bay State.

City Of Boston Sues Former Treasurer For Alleged Bond Profits

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The city of Boston brought equity action today against Edmund L. Dolan, city treasurer when Governor James M. Curley was mayor, charging participation in a bond-selling scheme which allegedly cost the city $250,000. The city seeks an accounting and reimbursement.

The bill, signed personally by Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, and filed with the state supreme court, asks an accounting from Dolan and return of alleged illicit profits made while he was city treasurer. It also seeks an accounting from six alleged associates of Dolan.

They included J. Walter Quinn, an electrical contractor; John F. Dever, Lawrence Costello, an employee of the state public utilities department, all of Boston; Harald B. Simpson and Robert L. Emerson of Brookline, and Frederick J. Reardon of Cambridge.

The bill reserved the right to add other names.

The bill charges Dolan, in breach of his duty, participated in a "fraudulent and corrupt scheme" in which millions of dollars' worth of bonds were sold to the city above their market value and profits of more than $250,000 were made between 1930 and 1933.

Among the corporations mentioned in the bill of complaint were the legal securities corporation, the John F. Dever company, and the E. L. Dolan company.

The bill of complaint charges that Dolan planned the alleged scheme in the fall of 1929 in anticipation of his appointment as city treasurer after the election of Curley as mayor.

It charges that he established an office at 60 Congress street under the name of the E. L. Dolan company and used his private brokerage office for "corrupt schemes." The bill alleges Dolan formed an independent corporation and, through dummy and "straw" directors "made large, secret and illicit gains and profits through the purchase at one price and reselling them at a largely enhanced price."

The State Civil Service Department has announced dates of 18 competitive examinations for State and city positions, including: Fire service for municipalities, Feb. 1 and 15; parole officer, Department of Correction, Jan. 25; fish and game warden, Department of Conservation, Jan. 11; industrial instructor of plumbing at Concord reformatory, Jan. 13; telephone operator, all municipalities, Jan. 13; playgrounds workers, Dec. 28; assistant operator, North Adams Public Works, Dec. 28; dental hygienist, Pittsfield Health Department, Dec. 28; visitor clerk, Westfield public welfare, Jan. 11.

As Governor James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston filed a bill in a smaller legislative body, especially of the lower house now composed of 240 members. Even the great State of New York has only 150 members in the lower branch of its Assembly.

Governor Curley goes even further. He would abolish the Governor's Council. But why he favors this is not clear, for so far as the present Governor is concerned, he has shown his ability to abolish it in effect if not in name.

A total of 198 petitions has been filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives to date.

A plea to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence which hangs over Miller P. Clark, condemned to die for the murder of Ethel Zuckerman, was presented to Governor James M. Curley. Miller was convicted of stabbing Miss Zuckerman and pinning her throat to the floor of a South End bake shop with a butcher knife. He was not captured for almost a year.

Trustees, Meeting at New York, Find Public Response So Great That Orchestra May Be Safely Engaged for Series of Concerts at Stockbridge—Expansion in Future Years Planned.

With definite approval given today by trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, the appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for the third annual series of concerts at the Hanna farm between Lenox and Stockbridge was assured.

The substantial response received from sustaining members and patrons convinced the trustees that there would be enough support to warrant their signing a contract next week.

The meeting today was held with the president, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, No. 1 Sutton Place, South. Reports were submitted by the treasurer, John C. Lynch of Stockbridge; Miss Elizabeth Downing, the secretary; Miss Robinson Smith and George W. Edman, clerk and chairman of the coordinating committee.

Patrons Listed

Among the 65 patrons are Alexander Spalding, eminent American violinist; Norman H. Davis, America's Ambassador-at-large; Mrs. Alta Rockefeller, of Williamstown and New York; Harold Stanley, Great Barrington native, and Morgan partner in New York; Miss Mabel Choate, whose father, the late Joseph H. Choate was Ambassador to the Court of St. James; Miss Robinson Smith, Sidney Howard, the playwright; Owen Johnson, the novelist; Mrs. Henry White, of Lenox and New York, widow of the late Ambassador; Mrs. A. Berle Jr., Chamberlain for the city of New York; Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton; Samuel G. Colt, Laurence R. Conner, Miss Gertrude Watson, Mrs. Lawrence H. Miller and Mrs. C. Beardman Tyler, all of Pittsfield; and Mrs. Edward Davis of North Adams.

Among the several hundred sustaining members are Mrs. Grace G. Coolidge, widow of former President Coolidge, Miss Clara Crane, Mrs. J. Arthur Crane, Mr. and Mrs. John Barker, Mrs. Theodore Sedgwick, Mrs. William Penn Cresson, Mrs. Daniel Chester French, Miss Grace Stanley Parker, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Johansen, Mrs. Austin Fox Riggs, Miss Alice Riggs, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dwight, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Bowe, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Leslie Buell, Dr. William Malher Lewis, president of Lafayette College; Mrs. Samuel Frothingham, Rep., and Mrs. Clarence Durant, State Treasurer; Charles F. Hurley, Harry H. Plater of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society; Mrs. R. Harley Truax, Mr. and Mrs. Shapay-Wells, Dr. and Mrs. William M. Crane, Charles L. Safford.

To Keep Lists Open

In view of their decision today, the trustees emphasized that the membership lists would be open until January 15, after which date only subscriptions at an advance in price would be available. All the concerts will be in the huge tent with many seats outside for those who prefer "music under the moon."

The coming of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with its world-famous conductor promises to be an epoch-making event. In its 56th year, the orchestra was established in 1881 by Major Henry I. Higginson. The idea had come to him as a student in Vienna. Dr. Koussevitzky, conductor since 1924, has enjoyed a term longer than any of his distinguished predecessors. He has brought new beauties to the concerts, a fresh importance and distinction reflected in the greatly enlarged public.

If the Festival is a success in 1938, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has expressed its desire to develop and enlarge a program over a period of years.

Curley Sees Mansfield Move As Plot To Ruin Chances For Election

Governor Fires New Blast At Hub Mayor; Says Gang Out To Get Him. Not Edmund Dolan

BOSTON (UP)—Governor Curley has followed up his attack on the administration of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield with a charge that the suit brought by the city against Edmund L. Dolan—city treasurer when Curley was mayor—was plotted deliberately to prevent the governor's election to the U. S. Senate.

Discussing the suit which was signed by Mansfield and which seeks to recover allegedly illegal profits of $250,000 made by Dolan and associates on bond transactions during Curley's last term in City Hall, the governor said:

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan. They are after Curley. They put the case into the Supreme Court to make it last a long time. Around April, when delegates are elected to the convention, the master of the City of Boston bond investments will be brought before a master, and it will be revived again during the convention in June and along about September, when the masters report is completed, it will be primary time. They want to wave the black flag over Curley, but I will be elected United States Senator just the same."

Curley had reopened the Curley-Mansfield controversy with a statement that city expenditures in every municipal department had increased under Mansfield. He called on the mayor to resign and Mansfield, in a terse reply, suggested that Curley retire as governor.

"If anybody could resign, it should be Governor Curley," said Mansfield. "He recently admitted the job was too much for him, and that his health was being impaired and that he needed five rub-downs a week. . . . I am in excellent health. Although my job is a difficult one because of the debt burden left by Mr. Curley, I face my duties cheerfully, confident of my ability to meet all problems."

Senator Joseph Langone, Boston Democrat and stormy petrel of the Legislature, sided with Curley as he filed a bill under which Bostonians would recall Mansfield and elect a new mayor.

Curley and Mansfield Call Upon Each Other to Resign

Governor and Boston Mayor Assail One Another, While Senator Langone Files Bill to Oust Mansfield and Call Special Election; Curley Defends Dolan

BOSTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—As Gov. James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston called upon each other to resign today, State Senator Joseph A. Langone filed a bill intended to oust Mansfield and call a special election. The bill, filed last week in equity, against Dolan and six alleged associates, charging that they fraudulently made a profit of approximately $500,000 through the city's bond transactions.

The Governor said he intended to determine if there existed a "conspiracy to induce certain individuals to give false testimony" and then to raise money for the prosecution of Dolan. In a more personal attack, the Governor declared that there is one real service Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor.

Mansfield drew the Governor's fire with a charge that Curley, as mayor, was responsible for loss of 65 cents of every dollar expended by the city. Curley retorted that an increase of $14,575,613 in the city's debt during his administration was due partly to a $7,000,000 bond issue.

The bond issue, he said, was necessary for relief measures and was "the equivalent of a reduction of $2.70 upon each $1000 of valuation for the already overburdened taxpayers." He said Mansfield had neglected to mention Boston had benefited through $50,000,000 in Federal aid during the past two years, which assistance "was not available to me during my four years as mayor."

"Would Mayor Mansfield favor burdening the people who were taxable to meet their tax obligations, or would he favor withholding the welfare aid which the needy of Boston required during this period?" the Governor demanded.

The Governor's attack brought a prompt reply from the mayor. "If anybody should resign, he said, "it should be Gov. Curley."

Curley, Mansfield asserted, "recently admitted that the job was too much for him, that his health was being impaired, and that he needed five rub-downs a week."

"Oh the other hand, I am enjoying excellent health. Although my job is a difficult one, because of the burdens left me by Mr. Curley, I am facing my duties cheerfully, confident of my ability to meet all problems."

Curley Sees Plot In Dolan Charges

Thinks Conspiracy Is Afoot to Destroy Reputation of Former Treasurer

BOSTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—Gov. James M. Curley declared today that he would try to establish whether there was a conspiracy to destroy the reputation of former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan.

Curley offered Dolan his support for the second time since the city brought suit for $250,000 against Dolan and six other persons, charging the former treasurer profited from city bond transactions through an alleged dummy corporation. The suit further alleged Dolan controlled the corporation.

Curley announced he would try to determine whether there was a "conspiracy to induce certain individuals to give false testimony" and then to raise money for the prosecution of Dolan. The Governor, however, declined to indicate to what individuals he referred.
LANGONE FILES BILL INTENDED TO OUST MAYOR MANSFIELD

'Sick of Whole Situation Here,' Says State Senator—Seeks to Force Special Election

Boston, Dec. 16—(AP)—As Gov. James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, of Boston, called upon each other to resign today, State Senator Joseph A. Langone, of Boston, filed a bill intended to oust Mansfield and call a special election. All are Democrats. Langone, a north-end undertaker, declared he was "sick of the whole situation here in Boston."

Coincident with his attack upon Mayor Mansfield, Massachusetts Governor continued his defense of Edward M. Dolan, charging they fraudulently made a profit of approximately $250,000 through the city's bond transactions. The governor said he intended to determine if there existed a "conspiracy to induce certain individuals to give false testimony" and "to raise money for the prosecution of Dolan."

Antagonistic Vein

In a more personally antagonistic vein, the governor declared "there is one real service Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor."

"Would Mayor Mansfield favor hurrying the people who were unable to meet their tax obligations, or would he favor withholding the aid which the needy of Boston required during this period?" the governor demanded.

Brings Prompt Reply

The governor's attack brought a prompt reply from the mayor. "If anybody should resign, it should be Gov. Curley," the mayor asserted. "Recently admitted that the job was too much for him, that his health was being impaired, and that he needed five hundos a week."

CLEMENCY ASKED FOR MILLER F. CLARK

Counsel Asks Curley for Hearing for Man Sentenced to Death for Murder

From Our Special Reporter

Boston, Dec. 16—George A. Douglas, counsel for Miller F. Clark, condemned to die in the electric chair at Charlestown state prison during the week of January 12 for murder of a woman, today petitioned Gov. Curley to commute Clark's sentence to life imprisonment. He asked a hearing on the clemency petition, stating there was doubt as to Clark's guilt and that he was not sane at the time of the crime.

Harvey Gives Fee To Four Widows

Millen Counsel Tenders $1000 to Survivors of Killers' Victims

BOSTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—A fee of $1000 paid to Atty. George Stanley Harvey for defending the Millen brothers, was formally divided today and presented to widows of the four men slain by the Millens and Abrahm Fager.

Those receiving checks were Mrs. Helen C. Haddock and Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Needham, Mrs. Grace Sumner of Lynn and Mrs. Marion Clark of Pittsfield.

The presentation was made in the presence of Harvey, who had asked Gov. James M. Curley to distribute his fee.

In commenting on the lawyer's act, the Governor criticized the statute which fixes $100 as the maximum fee for lawyers defending defendants in capital cases by appointment of a court.

The Millens and Fager were executed for the slaying of Patrolman Mayor hostel during a bank holdup in Needham.

Labor leaders in Iowa have ordered a strike that will affect 25,000 WPA workers, having unsuccessfully sought prevailing wage scales. Boston Mayor Is Urged To Leave Office

State Senator Files Bill To Oust Mansfield; State Up In Arms

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—(IP)—As Governor James A. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston were calling upon each other to resign today, State Senator Joseph A. Langone filed a bill intended to oust Mansfield and call a special election.

Mansfield drew the governor’s ire with a charge Curley as mayor was responsible for loss of 65 cents of every dollar expended by the city. Curley asserted an increase of $14,575,613 in the city’s debt during his administration was due partly to a $7,600,000 bond issue.

The band issue, he said, was necessary for relief measures and was “the equivalent of a reduction of $2.70 upon each $1000 of valuation for the already overburdened taxpayers.”

He said Mansfield had neglected to mention Boston had benefited through $50,000,000 in federal aid during the past two years, which assistance “was not available to me during my four years as mayor.”

Judge Jennings Rules
Girl Must Return to Bay State Institution

Habeas Corpus Petition in Mrs. Perry's Case Is Dismissed

Mrs. George Perry, also known as Elizabeth Gomes, of Waterbury, was today taken back to Massachusetts as a parole violator after Judge Newell Jennings of the superior court had dismissed her petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Jennings said that if any question is raised as to the technical act of the Massachusetts courts in imposing a five year reformatory term on the young woman, the place to raise this question is in the courts of Massaechusetts and not in the courts of the state of Connecticut. Judge Jennings suggested, however, that an inquiry might be pursued in Massachusetts to make sure the girl was not being harshly treated.

The young woman was ordered returned over to the parole officers of Massachusetts following a short hearing at which Asst. Atty. Gen.
James Baciglupo of Massachusetts appeared in defense of the extradi-ション warrant which Gov. Wilbur
L. Cross of Connecticut issued at the request of Gov. James Michael Curley of Massachusetts. Atty.
Frederick C. Bauby appeared for Mrs. Perry while Asst. State's Atty. William E. Fitzgerald assisted the Bay State attorney.

Mrs. Perry was taken into custody about two months ago at the request of the Massachusetts authorities who charged her with violating her parole from the state reformatory for women in Framingham, Mass. Later Gov. Cross signed papers to extradite the young woman to the Bay State and the city court ordered her turned over to the Bay State officials.

Atty. Bauby halted the return to Massachusetts when he started the habeas corpus petition proceedings which were heard this morning.

Wednesday Living Here
Mrs. Perry was the chief witness in support of her petition for a writ of habeas corpus to halt her extradition to Massachusetts. She told the court she has lived in Waterbury for about 1 year and that on Feb.
2, 1935, she was married to Perry in New York City.

Mrs. Susan Fain was reelected president of the St. Elizaabeth's guild of St. Cecilia's church at the annual meeting held Sunday afternoon at the church.

Mrs. Perry said she was arrested in Boston in 1930 on a charge of larceny of a ring. She testified that the sentence was suspended and that she was put on probation for six months. This probationary term, she added, was extended three months and during this time she reported regularly.
Later, she continued, she was again arrested in Boston on another charge. She declared that this count was filed and that she was presented on the larceny charge which was reopened. She was given an indefinite term in the state reformatory for women, she continued.

Served 21 Months
Upon her arrival at the state reformatory which is located in Framingham, Mrs. Perry said she was told that she would have to serve five years. She remained in the reformatory for 21 months and was then paroled. She testiified she reported regularly until Oct. 1.

Perry was called to the stand and corroborated the statement of their marriage in New York city and of their happily married life in Waterbury.

The state of Massachusetts declined to call any witnesses in support of the claim the girl should be turned over to the officials of that state. The Bay State relied on the warrant issued by Gov.
Cross.

Judge Jennings said that the courts of Massachusetts, for reas ons not stated, reopened the lar-cence charge and imposed the five year sentence on the young woman. He added there was no evidence to show she had ever been discharged from that sentence and that as far as the courts of Connecticut know she is held for the full five year period dating from May 9, 1932.

Bay State Problem
Judge Jennings said that if there was any claim she was not the same person the writ might be issued. He added said that if there was a question of illegal commission there might be a question but lacking this he felt the writ petition should be dismissed.

Judge Jennings added that if any protest is made of the technical acts of the courts of the state of Massachusetts the place to raise these objections is in the courts of that state and not in the courts of this state.

The court suggested the claims raised by Atty. Bauby might be pursued in the Bay State courts to make sure that the young woman was not being unduly punished.

The Bay State officials indicated that when Mrs. Perry returns to that state another charge might be placed against her.
A new epidemic known as head tableitus has struck Woburn. Head tables are a necessary evil at a banquet. The head table is the locus of the avalanche of oratory. After decorating the mahogany for the price of a ticket and after settling back to digest the conception of seventeen committees on a dietery conglomer, the banquet attendant at a banquet is the locus of name card for these gentlemen on, or tender listens to gems of wisdom about the "high tariff upon nutmegs" "animal life in Tasmania," or the diplomacy of a Washington, the courage of a Lincoln, the silence of a Coolidge," while the banquet attendant is silently maintaining the patience of a Job.

The only trouble with head tables is, they are not long enough or wide enough, tall enough or big enough. One afflicted with head tableitus shows early symptoms of irritability when the name of another even remotely suggested a head table possibility. The second development in this rapidly spreading malady is noticeable, when a courageous demand is made by one that unless a place is made at the head table, he will not attend the banquet, and will bring about its doom. The third and more serious stage of this infectious disease, comes when the applicant for spotlight demands to know what the guest of the evening did to warrant him taking a place at the head table.

The current epidemic of head tableitus broke out simultaneously with the announcement that there was to be a testimonial banquet tendered to Mayor Edward W. Kenney, who after a committee meeting, made arrangements discouraged the banquet and "turned thumbs down" on the affair. He was immediately and impressively apprised of the fact that his presence was only a means to an end, and outside of the incidental fact that he was to be the guest of the evening, there was to be a parade of the head table addicts on the evening of January 21st.

Governor Curley is to be present, as will be Lt. Governor Joseph J. Hurley, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Attorney General Paul A. Dever and many others high in the Councils of Democracy. If those people are ignorant of their head table geography, they will probably depart satisfied, as under the present scheme of things, this writer, who has been assigned the chairmanship on the committee on publicity, cannot find any name card for these gentlemen on either of the three head tables. There have been three committee meetings and a new head table added at each meeting.

The only solution that is available to check the spread of the head tableitus is to remove the wall of the State Armory, and if all the addicts who have applied are successful, the head table so far rests its right flank at the corner of Fowle street. Under the circumstances, a Governor probably could be squeezed in near the corner of Summer street. Such an important personage as the third vice president of the committee in charge of concessions will be planted at the corner of Green street and so on down the line to minor committee seats.

Aid. Michael T. Golden, chairman of the reception committee, which gives him the mantle of principal greater, will be equipped with roller skates so as not to slight anybody, or will insist that a round head table be pressed into service, so that they will be able to house all the head table applicants in the Armory.

The committee in charge has made big arrangements for the affair and so great have been the demands from legal and political circles outside of the city that Deputy Auditor Michael T. Kelleher, who staged the banquet for Attorney General Paul A. Dever, and many others, has responded to the request of the committee to give his services. The armory will be laid out in round tables, so that groups of six, eight and ten can be seated together.

Governor Curley said today that applications reaching him for Christmas baskets totaled 4500 and that no more would be received. He said he would personally supply 200 baskets to needy families and that contributions for others would be received by Mrs. Agnes H. Parker at Room 364, State House.

Rep. Gerald D. Jones of Amherst filed a bill in the Legislature today to require payment of an automobile excise tax before registration for the car can be issued. In another bill he asked that taxes collected on gasoline used in the rural free delivery of mail be refunded.

A bill to license steamfitters throughout the state was filed in the Senate today by Sen. James F. Mehan of Lawrence on petition of the Massachusetts Association of Steamfitters.

New Blasts on Health Fired Back at Each Other by Curley, Mansfield

By CLINTON P. ROWE
Telegraph State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—The bitter row raging between Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield of Boston, with more verbal clouts exchanged today, was headed into the Legislature tonight under a bill filed by Sen. Joseph A. Langone of Boston. The bill is, in effect, an eulogous move against Mayor Mansfield, calling for a referendum in May on the question of whether there shall be a special election for Mayor of Boston in November.

The Langone bill was filed after Governor Curley had assailcd Mansfield in another public statement, calling upon him to retire, and the Boston mayor had suggested the Governor’s retirement, with sarcastic reference to the condition of his health. Mayor Mansfield declined the Governor’s suggestion that he retire and said the Governor’s health has been impaired that he requires “five rubdowns a week.”

Beyond Langone’s statement that he “was sick of the whole situation in Boston,” there was no explanation as to why he filed the bill or the background of the procedure. In view of the control Governor Curley exercised over the 1935 Legislature, the possibilities of the legislative twist in the Curley-Mansfield feud were discussed with interest tonight.

Statement Delayed

Although Governor Curley’s statement today attacking Mansfield and his administration had been announced for publication last week, it was delayed by illness of a stenographer, and came after an equity action had been filed in the Supreme Court, with Mayor Mansfield as one of the sig-
Curley Answers Mansfield With Blistering Attack

Governor Explains Rise Of Boston's Debt Due To Relief Measures

BOSTON, Dec. 17 (P)—In a blistering attack against Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, of Boston, Governor James M. Curley replied yesterday to the former's charges that Curley, as former mayor, was responsible for the loss of 65 cents of every dollar expended by the city.

"No man in the history of Boston politics," the governor declared, "ever descended to a depth as low as the present mayor to secure election."

In renewing the bitter controversy between himself and the mayor which has flared since Curley's election as governor, Curley asserted an increase of $14,575,813 in the city's net debt during his administration was due partly to a $7,600,000 bond issue.

The bond issue, he said, was to provide for municipal and emergency relief and was the equivalent of a reduction of $2.70 upon each $1,000 of valuation for the already overburdened taxpayers.

The mayor failed Curley said, to provide for the city's net debt and for the equivalent of a reduction of $2.70 upon each $1,000 of valuation for the already overburdened taxpayers.

Mansfield had accused the governor of increasing the city's debt a greater amount than any other mayor.

"Would Mayor Mansfield favor burdening the people who were unable to meet their tax obligations or would he favor withholding the welfare aid which the needy of Boston required during this period?" the governor asked. "Or would he not have found it necessary to have followed the precise course about which he whines now, which is identically the course he had adopted?"

Curley also asserted the traffic tunnel, despite "an increase of $17,200,000 because of its construction, was a heritage for which I was not wholly responsible."

He contended the tunnel had proved its value and charged a proper system of collecting revenues and a reasonable reduction in overhead charges for its operation would make it a "paying proposition."

The mayor failed, Curley said, to "direct attention to the decrease in the net debt for county purposes representing more than three-fourths of a million dollars."

Curley then pointed to a reduction of nearly $5,000,000 he made in the school budget and declared it had increased $2,200,000 over his last year as mayor.

He then cited other departmental reductions he made as mayor.

"Mayor Mansfield repeatedly pointed to the fact there was a cash deficit of $13,617,243, and failed to inform the public unpaid taxes were some $6,000,000 in excess of what he terms a cash deficit," the governor added.

"Mayor Mansfield failed to state the cash deficit at the end of the first year of his administration was $19,260,097," the governor concluded.

The governor's attack drew an answering blast from Mayor Mansfield, who said he would go into a greater detail in a later statement.

"If anyone should resign," said the mayor, "it should be Governor Curley."

The governor, Mansfield declared, "recently admitted that the job was too much for him, that his health was being impaired, and that he needed five rub-downs a week."

"On the other hand," the mayor continued, "I am enjoying excellent health. Although my job is a difficult one, because of the burdens left me by Mr. Curley, I am facing my duties cheerfully, confident of my ability to meet all problems."
Women to Back Curley for Senate

Mrs. Catherine Sherry of Worcester, heading a delegation from that city, today requested and received permission from the Governor to organize a "Curley for Senator" Club in Worcester. The Governor said he advised Mrs. Sherry to use her "own judgment."

Curley to Speak At Inman Square

Governor James M. Curley and Congressman Richard M. Russell have both agreed to speak at the official lighting of the Inman square Christmas tree tomorrow at 8 p.m.

A deliberate attempt on the part of his political enemies to defeat him for United States senator was seen today by Governor Curley in the equity suit brought against Edmund L. Dolan, former city treasurer.

The suit, filed by Mayor Mansfield and Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley, asks that Dolan be ordered to return to the city nearly $250,000 which he is alleged to have made in alleged fraudulent bond deals while he was in office.

Governor Curley explained how the suit would be used as a "black flag" which will be waved over him at crucial times during the coming campaign.

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan," said Curley, "they are after Curley. They put the case in the Supreme Court to make it last a long time."

Dolan Suit Branded Plot "I WILL WIN," FOES WARNED

A sworn statement was received by the investigators from this man, it was said, before the bill against Dolan was drawn up.

Every bit of evidence given before the finance commission in the various probes made by that body into the affairs of the city treasurer's office when Dolan held the post is understood to have been carefully scrutinized by Foley and his assistants. Dolan was cleared in all the probes by the finance commission.

Dolan Suit

Mayor Mansfield, in refusing to comment on the suit, said it was "not the practice of lawyers to discuss their cases publicly before going into court."

Mystery Man

It was learned, however, that a "mystery man" has been found by Corporation Counsel Foley, who is alleged to have given the investigators the alleged "inside" story of the bond transactions.

The feud reached an all-time high when both officials demanded that the other resign.

New developments were awaited today by political Boston in the "war" raging between Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield.

Curley, Mansfield Bid One Another Resign

New fuel was added to the flames when Senator Joseph Langone of the North End filed a bill in the Legislature to oust Mansfield from office.

The energetic Senator declared as he filed the bill that he was "sick of the whole situation in Boston."

If the bill is passed a special recall election would be held in May, and a special election in November would be held to choose a successor.

Political circles in the city hummed with the latest attacks hurled by Curley and Mansfield, and wonder was expressed as to where it would end.

The governor, in a lengthy, scathing statement, defended his last term of office as mayor of Boston, and called upon Mansfield to resign.

After going into detail to refute the charges of the mayor that he left the city in a financial "pickle," Curley said, "There is one real service that Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor."

In answer, Mansfield declared that if anyone should resign it was Curley, who, the mayor said, had "recently admitted that the job was too much for him."

THELMA TODD

Was Booked for Week
On Keith Boston Stage

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The announcements were to read: "Thelma Todd (In Person), Keith-Boston Theater, Week of January 16." Mrs. Alice Todd, the lovely blonde's mother, did not know that her daughter had planned a surprise homecoming after the holidays... Her "personal appearance" at a Boston theater would have been Thelma's first New England engagement since she left Lawrence for Hollywood.

Governor Curley's tribute to his chief secretary, Eddie Hoey, at last night's dinner to Mr. Hoey:

"The man says 'no,' and 'yes' when he is compelled to. He does his day's work as well as it conceivably can be done." Surrounded by his friends, the governor unleashed five minutes of oratory that was a philippic — except that what he said was too funny to be inauspicious.

It was too funny, for that matter, not to be printed. But the occasion was "off the record." I am keeping my notes. Three former secretaries of the governor, Edmund L. Dolan (his first), Senator Mike Ward and Frank Kane, and young Bobbie Gallagher, assistant secretary now at the State House, were seated at one end of the table. There were no arrangements. It just happened. Mr. Gallagher, not fully recovered from an operation, begged off the sick list for an hour to be present.

When he attended "Sketch Book" at the New Amsterdam in New York last week, the brick-thatched Stanton was "spotted." With Mrs. (Sally Curley) White, the former censor sat in the first row. One of the numbers, the "bustle number" in "Sketch Book" (which Boston is not going to see at all, I understand) calls for each chorus girl in the front line to toss a garter to a customer. Stanton was pelted with five. But he carried only two out of the theater.

BOSTON AFTER DARK

(The sun went down at 4:13.)

Detective Ben Goodman of the Radical Squad split us out (this usage is acceptable; ref., Joseph Aloysius Kirby, landlord of the Arch Inn) from a character with a Moscow look in Washington street. Chagrined that the suspect was only a panhandler, OIce Goodman stood treat for a side of chicken at the Golden Roost. He paid, too.

At the Hoey dinner, the first gathering of a political hue encountered by this corner in weeks, much of the chatter was about "The Senator," the new feature in this paper which has Beacon Hill and City Hall bellowing with laughter, marvelling at its truth. The Gay Nineties Rendezvous in the Hotel Bosmore features five massive young women who are agile and comely (if you like them very, very fat). Tiny Sinclair takes the old Fannie Brice song, "I'm No Indian," and performs vocal and physical convolutions therewith which include a Tarzan cry, a war-whoop that sounds like a bass sneeze, and a Pipe-of-Pan dance that is positively implausible. The spot is different and makes for congeniality.

Governors Attend Cameramen Fete

Governors of three states and prominent state officials will attend the dinner tonight at the Copley Plaza in honor of John E. (Jake) Coolidge and Al Richards, pioneer newsreel cameramen.

Governors Curley of Massachusetts, Bridges of New Hampshire, and Brann of Maine will attend the affair, which marks the 30th anniversary of both men as cameramen.

Curley, Mansfield Bid One Another Resign

New developments were awaited today by political Boston in the "war" raging between Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield. The feud reached its all-time high when both officials demanded that the other resign.

New fuel was added to the flames when Senator Joseph Logan of the North End filed a bill in the Legislature to oust Mansfield from office.
Curley Probes Old Bed Sale

Governor Curley today directed the Finance Commission to investigate the purchase by the city of Boston of a number of 100-year-old second-hand beds from Massachusetts General Hospital for use at Long Island.

At the same time the Governor sharply criticized the Mansfield administration for the transaction and instructed the Finance Commission to take steps for the return of $225 from Massachusetts General Hospital to the city.

The governor acted following a report from N. W. Faxon, the hospital director detailing the transaction.

Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, city institutions commissioner, told of Governor Curley's characterization of the bed sale as "a most unusual transaction," called the deal "an excellent bargain for the city of Boston.

As detailed to the Finance Commission by Curley the 85 beds cost the city of Boston $225 exclusive of cartage.

They were purchased in two transactions, the first in October, when $4 a bed was paid plus $1 a piece for cartage to the wharf for transfer to Long Island. In October of this year 25 more were purchased at a quarter a piece—$2.25 each—with cartage coming to $25 for the beds for which $5.25 was the purchase price.

"It was an excellent bargain for the city. That is all I have to say in reply to Governor Curley," Dr. Washburn defended.

"The beds were built 100 years ago, they are of wrought iron, hand-forged and were used by Massachusetts General for nearly a century. They are so strong they could be thrown out of a window without damaging them—but unsuitable to the use of patients in a hospital."
the next election comes around I will still be voting according to the dictates of my mattress, and maybe for both sides at that. Take the floor, Senator.

The Senator is looking somewhat taken back when at this moment there is a sound like a loud squawk at the other end of the bar and sure enough, that is what it turns out to be, a loud squawk. A slightly seedy customer is shouting over the remnants of his beer.

"Bartender," calls the slightly seedy customer, "there is a hair in my beer."

Well, sir, at this you could have knocked everybody down with a gnat's whisker because it is more than 30 years since Timmy began meeting customers who are finding hairs in what is left of their beers, and what with Timmy's grouch this looks like no less than an invitation to mayhem. Timmy pulls a big surprise, however, and does not reach for anything except the glass of the slightly seedy customer who is making the loud squawk.

"You are sure it is not just a bit of the hair of the dog that bit you,"' Timmy asks.

"It is a hair, bartender, a disgusting hair," says the slightly seedy customer. "Look for yourself."

So Timmy looks and sure enough it is a hair and it looks like a horse hair, at that.

"My friend," says Timmy, "for a minute I am thinking you have put a hair in the beer yourself, but now I see your word is as good as your blonde and you shall have another glass of beer, free gratis. I will put this one through a strainer so your delicate senses will not be affected."

So the slightly seedy customer receives his second beer and The Senator begins to react to the old-fashioned that he is having in observance of the old-fashioned days.

"The big news," says The Senator, "is that there will be a large reduction in auto insurance rates ordered this coming year for 1937. This will make everybody but the insurance companies very grateful in general to the Democratic state administration and in particular to Frank DeCelles, the state insurance commissioner, because Professor DeCelles is the man who will bring this about.

"The Professor is in the way of becoming a very strong figure in the Democratic party and the more he can cut rates, the stronger he will be, and the best part of it is that everybody will think it is great except the insurance companies and maybe a few Republicans."

"It is possible the Professor will be so strong in this respect that he will find himself on the state ticket for lieutenant-governor."

"Anyway, the 1937 low rates will be announced about five days before the September primaries and the big reduction will be very good for Governor Jim, who appointed the Professor, and for all other Democrats who are looking for help. So I figure all the Democrats owe a vote of thanks to the Professor, who has been burning the midnight oil, as the only one who ever did anything about the rates except talk about them ..."

So Timmy looks and sure enough it is a hair and it looks like a horse hair, at that.

"How was that one?" calls Timmy. "You did not find a hair in that one, did you?"

"No, sir, bartender, thank you," says the slightly seedy customer bowing himself out.

"A satisfied customer," says Timmy to The Senator, "and proof of what I have always said. They can never spot the hair in the beer unless they put it in themselves. He had the same hair in the second beer."

CURLEY AWARDS HARVEY'S $1000

Governor Curley, in the presence of Attorney George Stanley Harvey, today distributed the $1000 fee which Harvey received as counsel fees for defending the Millen brothers, among the four widows of the Millens-Faber victims.

He handed a check for $250 each to Mrs. Helen C. Haddock of Needham, Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Needham, Mrs. Grace Sommers of Lynn and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg.

The Governor deplored the situation under which an attorney appointed by the court, who might be required to give, services as long as three years, is prevented by statute from getting more than $1,000 for his services in capital cases. He compared it with the statutes under which the mayor of Boston gets $20,000 a year while the Governor of the state gets but $10,000.
GIRL ABOUT TOWN

In the movies, newspaper men work hard, live fast and die broke. Life is kinder to them. A roster of former Boston newspaper men who have achieved success in other fields would take up the entire column ... A few may be mentioned.

Ben Ames Williams, prosperous author, used to be a rewrite man on the Boston Evening American ... Charles McArthur, playwright, once chased the elusive exclusive for the Sunday Advertiser ... Herbert Baldwin, vice-president in charge of publicity for the B. and M., was a reporter; see on the Boston Post ... Malcolm Nichols, ex-mayor, and his brother, Frank, vice-president of the First National Bank, both covered assignments in their time ... Dick Grant, member of the State Public Service Commission, was a newspaperman on papers and radio before he and Governor Curley clicked ... Judge Charles H. Donahue and Thomas J. Feeney, just retired as assistant to the president of the New England Telephone Company, were reporters.

Indeed, it's a standing joke in newspaper offices ... promenants being interviewed, usually recall that they used to be in the newspaper game themselves!

Possibly you think reading the Santa Claus mail sent blind to the postoffice by credulous children is fun to read. Ask Postmaster Peter F. Tague.

He reads those that are signed, and sends the more urgent on to charitable institutions. Letters are addressed not only to Santa, but to Kris Kringle and the Man at the North Pole. Some of them are heart-rending. Little shut-ins and cripples and blind mites write and ask. Try to read this one without winking hard:

"Good St. Nicholas: I have a doll buggy my mama gave me. She is dead now. If you will bring me a doll for the buggy, I will tell my mama to thank you on the way back with your reindeer."

Beatrice Lillie Has Brush With Josephine Baker

When Josephine Baker comes to town with the Follies, there'll be a lot of gossips waiting on her doorstep to learn the truth of that reported brush with witty Beatrice Lillie in New York.

Miss Baker is said to have been very complimentary in a most Parisienne manner about Miss Lillie's American triumphs. And Bee is reputed to have countered:

"That's mighty white of you, sugah."

Relief note for men, who merit a little consideration during the jolly Christmas season. Filene's advertises:

Dolan Suit

Branded ‘Plot’

CURLEY SEES BLOW AT HIM

A deliberate attempt on the part of his political enemies to defeat him for United States senator was seen today by Governor Curley in the equity suit brought against Edmund L. Dolan, former city treasurer.

The suit, filed by Mayor Mansfield and Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley, asks that Dolan be ordered to return to the city nearly $250,000 which he is alleged to have made in alleged defeat part of his political enemies to fraudulent bond deals while he was in office.

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan," said Curley, "they are after Curley. They put the case in the Supreme Court to make it last a long time."

Revived Again

"In April, or thereabouts, when the delegates are elected to the convention, the matter of the city of Boston bond investments will be brought before a master. "It will be revived again during the convention in June, and along about September, when the master's report is completed, it will be primary time.

"They want to wave the black flag over Curley, but I will be elected United States senator just the same."

Mayor Mansfield, in refusing to comment on the suit, said it was not the practice of lawyers to discuss their cases publicly before going into court.

It was learned, however, that a "mystery man" has been found by Corporation Counsel Foley, who is alleged to have given the investigators from this man, the alleged "inside" story of the bond transactions.

A sworn statement was received by the investigators from this man, it was said, before the bill against Dolan was drawn up.

Curley Completing List of Pardons

Governor Curley expects to complete plans for Christmas pardons today, he said. Assistant Secretary John H. Bachus, who has charge of pardon applications, has held a three-hour conference with Commissioner of Correction Arthur Lyman, and the warden of various penal institutions.

The Governor did not comment on what action he may take on appointments at the regular meeting of the executive council. He said he has been so busy on other matters that he has had no time to consider appointments.
Langone Acts After Curley's Attack on Mansfield

Senator Joseph A. Langone of the Mansfield administration has engaged in a wild orgy of expenditure for the last time, and he is never been governed by one whose incompetency is recognized by all with the exception of himself, and his paid parasites. During the campaign of 1933 the electorate had the opportunity of selecting from a group of candidates some individual who would make a good executive for the city. The choice, unfortunately, was a minority candidate, hand-picked by a majority vote of the directors of an organization known as the Good Government Association, and strange to relate, when the Good Government Association discovered the crime it had committed in foisting upon the people of Boston, Mr. Mansfield, they decided to cease functioning and therefore disbanded. The campaign conducted by Mr. Mansfield for mayor was notable for the promises made by him that he would reduce taxes through ending a system which he declared was responsible for the waste an corruption which presented the loss of 65c of every dollar expended by the city.

Curley's Attack

The Senator's demand for Mansfield's ouster followed Gov. Curley's extended attack on Mansfield in which he suggested that the mayor should resign. The Governor charged that the Mansfield administration had engaged in a wild orgy of expenditure during his two years in office. In a brief comment on the Governor's blast, Mansfield said: "If anybody should resign" Mayor Mansfield for mayor was notable for the promises made by him that he would reduce taxes through ending a system which he declared was responsible for the waste an corruption which presented the loss of 65c of every dollar expended by the city.

Curley's Attack On Mansfield

No man in the history of Boston politics ever descended to a depth as low as that to which my term to secure election. Pledges and promises impossibly of fulfillment were made to deceive the voters, and yet with all the eagerness and the infamy that characterizes his pre-election contest, from the day that he took the oath of office to the present hour he has whined and is still whining. Boston over a long period of years has been governed by mayors of various types, most of whom have been competent executives, and singular to relate, until the year 1933. The increase in the net debt was for the purpose of providing emergency relief amounting to $60,000, and the issuance of which was for the purpose of providing for the relief of the taxpayers of Boston without burdening the taxpayers with an increase in the tax rate, since the issuance of bond at the equivalent of a redemption of $2.70 upon each $100 of valuation, for the already overburdened taxpayers.

Would Mayor Mansfield, favor the people who were unable to meet their tax obligations, or would he favor withholding welfare aid which was needed by needy of Boston requiring during this period. Nor were the people of the具体 course about which the machine at the present course which is identically the course he has adopted. That a traffic tunnel was necessary between Boston and East Boston has been amply demonstrated during the past year. The important fact should not be disregarded, however, that the traffic tunnel, despite an increase of $17,200,000 because of its construction, was a heritage for which I was not wholly responsible, but as to its value and usefulness I am willing to assume full responsibility; and, provided there was a just apportionment of costs and a proper system of collecting revenue and a reasonable reduction in the overhead charges for the operation of the tunnel, it would be a paying proposition at all times.

The failure of Mayor Mansfield to direct attention to the decrease in the net debt for city purposes and for other purposes, representing more than three-fourths of a million dollars, is in keeping with the deceptive policies which he has practiced. The increase of the bond debt, which was issued, while expended for highways, parks, sewers and other municipal purposes, was largely for the completion of the hospital program which had its beginning in my second administration in 1922, and which has given Boston pre-eminence in the hospital administration, not only in Massachusetts but throughout the world.

In 1933 my last year as mayor, it had resented an expenditure of $50,000. In 1933, Mayor Mansfield, the cost of constructing the public works department is $7,444,427, an increase of $1,100,000 over 1930, during the first year of my last term as mayor the cost of conducting the police department was $4,783,425.32, and in 1933, my last year as mayor, it had been reduced to $5,321,000, a saving of nearly $1,000,000.

In 1935, under Mayor Mansfield, the cost of conducting the activities of the fire department is $7,444,427, a further and the only evidence that the public maintenance. This audacious and sly attempt at Mansfield double-entry bookkeeping is without precedent in the history of municipal finance.

In 1936, the first year of my last administration, the efforts of the fire department to conduct the activities of the fire department was $4,783,425.32, and in 1933, this had been reduced to $3,929,295, as against $4,372,901 under Mr. Mansfield, the only monuments that he has charge that 65 cents of every dollar was wasted, squandered or stolen under his predecessor. The citizen can ascertain the facts for himself by an examination of his tax bills for the years 1930, 1931, 1932, and 1933, the first and last years of my last administration, and comparing them with the tax bills for the years 1934 and 1935, under the present incompetent incumbent.

Great stress has been laid by Mr. Mansfield upon what he terms the deporable condition of the city, attempting to rob the office of its property, and he has repeatedly pointed to the fact that there is a cash deficit of $13,617,240.77, and failed to inform the public that the unpaid taxes were some six million dollars in excess of what the claims was a cash deficit.

Mayor Mansfield failed to state that the cash deficit at the end of the first year of his administration was $19,006,097, or 50 per cent greater than at the end of my administration. The inability of the taxpayers to meet their obligations was not confined to Boston; it was general in every municipality in the entire nation, but the all-important fact, when comparison is made, is the failure to state that the federal aid in the matter of PWA, ERA, CWA, and WPA, which represented an expenditure of $50,000,000 in Boston during the past two years was not available to me during my four years as mayor. Mr. Mansfield has been mayor for two years, and the only evidence that the public maintenance. I challenge Mayor Mansfield to point to a single substantial enduring public improvement created during the wild orgy of expenditures in the past two years, and I venture to state that when he retires from office, the only monuments that he will leave will be those represented by increase in taxes, increase in debt, and humiliation in the hearts of an intelligent people at the knowledge that the chief executive of Boston, during Mr. Mansfield’s term of office, was not only incompetent during his entire term, but an abject failure from beginning to end. There is one real service that Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor.

Urges Examination Of the Tax Bills

To make a complete summary of each department would consume too much space, but reductions were made in substantially every department during the four-year period from 1930 to 1933, while under the present incumbent, Mr. Mansfield, increases have been made which undeniably he wisely did, but he was due to salary restoration notwithstanding has charge that 65 cents of every dollar was wasted, squandered or stolen under his predecessor. The citizen can ascertain the facts for himself by an examination of his tax bills for the years 1930, 1931, 1932, and 1933, the first and last years of my last administration, and comparing them with the tax bills for the years 1934 and 1935, under the present incompetent incumbent. An official of the new organization—which hopes to have the support of Gov. Curley, although his predecessor, former Gov. Ely, was against a state lottery—said yesterday that the methods employed by the incorporation would be educational. She declared that if the organization, after a long and thorough campaign and testing of sentiment, was convinced that the people of the state did not desire a state lottery, the organization would abandon its efforts. It would not back every bill providing for a state lottery and even might oppose those it thought unwise.

SOCIETY GROUP FOR LOTTERIES

Starts Crusade to Legalize Them as Relief to Realty Taxation

BY RICHARD O. BOYER

A group of society women, charity workers and civic leaders yesterday incorporated the Massachusetts Council for Legalizing Lotteries, Inc., with offices at 131 State street.

Their object is the leading of "a crusade" to legalize lotteries "under the laws of the commonwealth as a direct relief to real estate taxation, as a source of revenue to the state, and an aid to worthy welfare organizations."

Led by Mrs. Oren Cheney Sanborn, president, the organization hopes to have an ultimate enrollment of 250,000. Backed by a pleasantly filled war chest and the conviction that legalized lotteries would solve many of the state’s financial problems, the group hopes to persuade the citizenry at large rather than back any specific bill in the state Legislature. A possible objective will be the calling of a state referendum to vote on the question.

The formation of this organization and the filing of several bills providing for state-operated lotteries makes it likely that the dramatic fight of last May in the Legislature may possibly be repeated in the next session.

Despite strong opposition both in and out of the Legislature, the lottery bill seemed likely to become law last May until Cardinal O’Connell raised his voice against it. At that time he characterized it as a terrific source of corruption. Legislators previously for the bill reversed their stands and two days after the cardinal’s statement, the bill was defeated.

At that time Cardinal O’Connell said "The excuse that it would raise money for the state is not a valid one because that could be said of anything." He declared that lotteries were worse than drink, that they always debauch the populace. He pointed to the Louisiana lottery, "which grew to be a flagrant scandal."

An official of the new organization—which hopes to have the support of Gov. Curley, although his predecessor, former Gov. Ely, was against a state lottery—said yesterday that the methods employed by the incorporation would be educational. She declared that if the organization, after a long and thorough campaign and testing of sentiment, was convinced that the people of the state did not desire a state lottery, the organization would abandon its efforts. It would not back every bill providing for a state lottery and even might oppose those it thought unwise.

‘AN INSTINCTIVE TRAIT’

The thesis of Mrs. Sanborn and her colleagues is founded on the premise that gambling is an instinctive inevitable and lasting trait of mankind, comparable to drinking. They argue that prohibition was a failure and that it placed liquor in the hands of racketeers. The only beneficiaries of man’s gambling instincts now, they say, are the racketeers that control numbers pools, bingo and other games of chance. Instead of giving criminals vast profits, they urge that the legalization of lotteries would bring Massachusetts hospitals which will be forever with us, will be protected by honestly administered state lotteries. "We should keep American dollars at home," said Mrs. Sanborn. "I’m not against the Irish Sweepstakes and the Canadian sweepstakes. We go for the cash and the benefit. But Massachusetts hospitals are sorely pressed for money. Real estate owners are over-taxed. Millions of dollars are being wasted and hands will continue to. We should face facts. This is a realistic world and while we don’t approach man as a machine, we know that he will remain here and we will try to systematize and control it under government operation. The first thing we want to do is provide the public with all available information as to the tax problems of lotteries under legalized authority."
MRS. OREM CHENEY SANBORN
Society leader who is president of the newly formed Massachusetts Council for Legalizing Lotteries, Inc., with offices at 131 State street.

Mrs. Sanborn, who was a leader in the women's suffrage movement, is an active hospital worker. She has for several years been chairman of the Winchester horse show, which entirely supports the operating department of the Winchester hospital. In addition she was chairman of the finance committee of the Massachusetts peace party.

The organization will soon release, it was said, the names of 30 sponsors who are prominent in the state's civic and social life. Other officials of the organization include Mrs. Marion Lawrence Higgins, Mrs. Helen S. Rails, Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa, and Mrs. Harry O. Mayo.

In his drive against the unauthorized practice of law, the attorney-general turned his energies yesterday to undertakers who have allegedly been practicing law without authorization when terminating wills, deeds and other probate matters. Loss of their permits or prosecution will follow substantiation of his charges, he declared yesterday.

Certified as eligible for the permanent post of Everett superintendent of streets yesterday were Hugh T. Bend, John K. Collins, and John J. Mitchell, all of Everett. Mitchell, who is at present provisional superintendent, failed eligibility when the list was made known Aug. 7. He appealed the markings, passed the educational test in December, took the physical test, and was certified by the civil service commission along with Bend and Collins. The salary is $2400 a year.

John E. Corcoran of Newton Lower Falls, Daniel J. Herlihy of Newtonville and Bernard F. Neville of West Newton head the eligible list for appointment as capitain in the Newton fire department. The examination was held Nov. 8, and all seven who took it qualified.

DOOMED MURDERER APPEALS TO CURLEY
A petition for a hearing by Gov. Curley on possible commutation of the death sentence passed on Miller F. Clark, slayer of Ethel Zuckerman, was submitted to the Governor yesterday by George A. Douglas, Clark's counsel. The condemned man is scheduled to die the week of Jan. 12.

Douglas requested the hearing on the grounds that doubt exists as to Clark's guilt, and that he was not sane at the time of the crime.
DEFENDS AID TO STUDENTS

National Youth Head Denies that Rotch Is Being Investigated

By EDWARD ALLEN

Aubrey Williams, NYA director and second in command to Harry Hopkins in the works relief program, in an interview and address in Boston last night warmly defended the NRA. He strongly hinted at the need of constitutional reform if laws cannot otherwise be enforced to restore 30,000,000 persons to a self-respecting way of living.

He denounced fascism and communism as evils worse than anything the country has endured. He warned of a drift away from "equality of opportunity" for poor boys to earn their way through college.

G. Rotch, state WPA administrator, declaring the 23,000,000 young people in the country from 16 to 25 years old were on the whole as well off as their elders, and much better off than men and women in the 45-55-year-old group, he warned of the perils of propaganda and demagoguery facing 8,000,000 young persons who are looking for jobs, in an address before the Ford Hall Youth Forum last night.

He said his contacts with hundreds of thousands of young persons in the last three years had convinced him they were loyal to their families, their homes, and their country. In spite of the claims of loud-voiced agitators and alarmists, but he said they would not say what would happen if a Townsend, a Talmadge, or a man Huey Long came along with a creed.

Asked by a communist whether the system which he defended also included an American Liberty League, vigilantes, the Ku Klux Klan, and William Randolph Hearst, Williams described them as an "ugly aspect" of civilization which was a price the country paid for freedom of speech and free press, but declared their right to exist and speak freely was more to be desired than suppression of any point of view.

NO YOUTH MOVEMENT

He pledged the New Deal under no circumstances to turn the youth administration into a "youth movement" or any other organization seeking to maintain morale by inspirational methods which might later make it the easy prey of fascism and demagogues. He said the NYA was a "relief arrangement" seeking to help one-sixth of the 8,000,000 jobless young people of the country.

Of the 8,000,000 young youth whose families are on relief, the administration definitely knows that 460,000 have never had any kind of employment since quitting high school or college, he said. More than 250,000 have married and are trying to establish families, although without jobs. About 700,000 have failed to finish the high school course. More than 1,100,000 live on farms. Fewer than 100,000 have had an opportunity to acquire a skilled trade.

In warning against extremists who promise "short, quick schemes" to end depression, he said he held in as much abhorrence persons proposing to scamp democracy for complete regimentation of the economic structure on the left as he abhorred the views of those who felt a few persons should own everything and be left alone to govern industry.

"From all I have seen of those schemes, I have nothing but horror of them," he said. The greatest problem the young people face is choosing to work out our difficulties in the way and by the means by which we have gotten where we are today. I have no confidence in those things which would warp and change our traditionally American way of living. All the things we need can come within the framework of the great plebiscite of which we are a part.

An alarming drop in the number of poor students in American colleges, due to decreased opportuni ties for part-time work, has greatly diminished the representation of the "great 70 per cent." of the population in higher education, declared Williams, in an interview.

An increase in attendance at American colleges by wealthy students and the sons and daughters of the moderately well-to-do, "dividend-earning 30 per cent," has offset the loss of the poor students and prevented big drops in school enrollments. However, this does not compensate for the deprivation of education to worthy scholars to whom depression and unemployment have barred the way, he declared.

Declining to discuss the possibility of paying WPA workers every week instead of every two weeks, he said the pay check system was being arranged for the greater convenience of the relief workers. He pointed out that a change to weekly pay checks would require an additional force in the department of the treasury to handle 7,000,000 more checks each month.

"We think Arthur Rotch a very fine person and have absolute confidence in him," he said. "It is not true that we are investigating him. He has a hard job."

He said the pay check system was being arranged for the greater convenience of the relief workers.
"We're pretty much on top of this thing. We've got a task, getting the checks to them. We are doing away with some of the steps. I'm not critical of the old-time departments (the procurement and disbursement divisions of the department of the treasury), but over the years they have developed structures and work within them. But things are moving much swifter. New York has put all of the new system into effect and it will be simplified here in five or six days."

Roughly, one out of six of the young persons in the group he described as hurt by continued unemployment in getting an education was being helped directly or indirectly by the NYA, he said. About 370,000 are being helped directly in education and 120,000 more with jobs. An additional 300,000 is being assisted in job placement group arrangements. He would not say how many hundred thousand were being given recreational and educational activities in group activities which took them off the streets. "I don't know how effective these activities are as yet," he said. Funds for the present program will be exhausted June 30, he said.

BANQUET IN HONOR OF GOV CURLEY'S SECRETARY

Edmund J. Hoy, secretary to Gov Curley, was the guest of honor at a banquet given at the Parker House last night and attended by more than 100 of his former associates at City Hall, his present associates at the State House and friends.

Among those at the head tables were Gov Curley, who paid a tribute to his secretary who was with him at City Hall; Adjt Gen William H. Rose, Postmaster Peter F. Tague, Judge Daniel J. Adair, and Insurance Commissioner Francis De Celles.

An entertainment followed the banquet.

FOUR WIDOWS OF MILLEN-FABER GANG VICTIMS GIVEN CHECKS

In handing out the checks, Gov Curley commented that attorney Harvey's heart "is as large as the building we are in today." Gov Curley scored the statute which fixes a maximum of $1000 for the fee the state pays court-appointed attorneys in capital cases. He compared it to the law which fixes the salary of the Mayor of Boston at $20,000 and that of the Governor of the Commonwealth at only $10,000.

The Millen's lawyer was present to witness the moving ceremony in the Governor's office and expressed his deep feeling of sympathy for the four bereaved women.

"By accepting these tokens of my sympathy for you," the attorney said, "you have helped me to do my duty as a lawyer and citizen of the Commonwealth."
WILLIAMS LAUDS WORK OF ROTCH

Hearty indorsement of State W. P. A. Administrator Arthur G. Rotch and his conduct of the work relief program in Massachusetts, was given last night by Aubrey Williams, assistant national administrator of W. P. A., and director of the National Youth Administration, who discounted criticism of Rotch by Gov Curley.

Williams, who came to Boston to address a meeting of the Ford Hall Youth Forum last evening, denied charges of Gov Curley that Rotch is incompetent, that Federal authorities are investigating Rotch's administration and that the W. P. A. program here "has reached a state of complete disorganization."

"Investigating Arthur Rotch!" Williams exclaimed. "I should say not. We think he is a very fine and competent person and that he is doing a great job here in Massachusetts."

Blames Delay on "System"

The delay in meeting payrolls which caused thousands of needy W. P. A. workers in Massachusetts to wait from 10 days to three weeks for their wages, Williams attributed to the "system," which he said prevailed throughout the country and to which state directors had to conform or else act extra-legal.

Charges of Gov Curley that adequate materials and equipment have not been provided on many construction projects in the state were admitted by Williams, who said the delay is caused by the necessity of obtaining everything through the procurement division of the United States Treasury.

The two divisions of the Treasury through which pay checks pass and from which materials and equipment are obtained, were called "old line governmental de-partments," by Williams, who said he did not want to criticize them.

Ray Branion, New England regional director of the W. P. A., who also came here from Washington, yesterday, defended Rotch and declared some delays in the program were not delays at all, but the result of premature announcements from the State House that projects were underway.

Overdue Checks Distributed

Extra paymasters were distributing hundreds of overdue W. P. A. checks yesterday. Payrolls were cleared over Sunday in many instances and in Essex County 10 extra paymasters were distributing 2,500 checks yesterday.

Clifton Sawyer, disbursement director of the W. P. A., said yesterday all overdue checks should be paid up within the next two days and that payrolls will be met on time from now on. With the confusion resulting from transfer of E. R. A. to W. P. A. over, and the load distributed through a two-week period, there should be no delays after this pay period is over, he said.

Officials are still trying to get the rule changed so workers can be paid weekly instead of bi-monthly.

Williams, who is direct assistant to national W. P. A. administrator Harry L. Hopkins, said last night a more simplified system of making out payrolls and disbursing paychecks is being prepared at Washington and installation of the new plan will insure prompt payment of workers from now on.

Strongly Defends N. R. A.

In a strong defense of the N. R. A. delivered during his address at Ford Hall, Williams declared that the trend toward a more equitable distribution of wealth came in with this program and began to slip away again after its demise.

"Up to three years ago more and more of the wealth of the nation was being concentrated in the hands of a smaller and smaller number of persons," he said. "It got to such a stage that two percent of the people owned 50 percent of the wealth. The spread became noticeably more equitable during the existence of N. R. A., but it has not been so good since the passing of that program.

"We can't go back to that stage where 70 percent of the people earned less than a living wage. I know the process can be stopped, and under our present form of Government," he declared, "then said 90 percent of the businessmen of the country want to run their businesses on the theory of 'live and let live' and only 10 percent want to crush and ruin everybody in competition."

The N. R. A. gave labor its greatest advance in memory and the benefits derived are not being forgotten. Strongly Defends N. R. A.

Discusses N. Y. A. Aid

More young people from families in the dividend receiving class are now in college than ever before, Williams said, in discussing the college program of the National Youth Administration. He emphasized that there would have been a great decrease in college enrollment if the youth program had not been given aid to that great segment which would ordinarily earn part of its way through school.
Williams Defends N. Y. A.

Discussing the youth situation in America during an interview, Williams declared the National Youth Administration is in no sense of the word "a youth movement." The thought that it might be used to combat an uprisingleadership when the program was formed, Williams said in answer to a direct question as to whether this was so.

He said he was amazed that American youth, with little chance of economic improvement through the depression years, had remained so fundamentally loyal to the ideals of home, family, environment and American Government.

"Of course there are loud voices to be heard here and there, but I have found opposition to Americanism in only isolated cases," he said.

Youth is naturally more responsive to new things than older people, he said, but he feared he had found few young people giving credence to persons like Dr Townsend, Gov Townsend and the late Huey Long, whom Williams termed as against the American tradition.

"Don't forget that our program is a part of the W. P. A. and is a relief organization," he emphasized.

Curley Presents Atty Harvey's Fee to Women Whose Husbands Were Murdered by Millens-Faber

Four women in widow's weeds stood on the verge of tears in the office of Gov. Curley today to receive checks of $200 each from the hands of the Commonwealth's Chief Executive.

The husbands of all four were murdered by the Millen-Faber gang. Today the four women, Mrs Helen Haddock and Mrs Mary McLeod of Needham, Mrs Grace Summer of Lynn, and Mrs Marion Clark of Fitchburg, were given equal shares in the fee that attorney George Stanley Harvey received from the state for defending Murton and Irving Millen against the charge of murder.

In handing out the checks, Gov. Curley commented that attorney Harvey's heart is as large as the building we are in today.

Gov. Curley scored the statute which fixes a maximum of $1000 for the fee the state pays court-appointed attorneys in capital cases. He compared it to the law which fixes the salary of the Mayor of Boston at $20,000 and that of the Governor of the Commonwealth at only $10,000.

The Millens' lawyer was present to witness the moving ceremony in the Governor's office and expressed his deep feeling of sympathy for the four bereaved women.

"By accepting these tokens of my sympathy for you," the attorney said, "you have helped me to do my duty as a lawyer and citizen of the Commonwealth."

"I cannot say how deeply I feel for you, but after all, these tragedies come to all of us. We are all soldiers and we must each of us do his part."

Attorney Harvey last week returned the $1000 fee he received from the Commonwealth as state-appointed counsel for the Millen brothers to Gov. Curley to be distributed among the widows of the four men slain by the Millen-Faber gang.

Ernest Clark, sporting goods store manager in Fitchburg, was shot while the gang was trying to get the keys to the store from him. Fred S. Summer was shot down in the lobby of the Lynn Paramount Theatre during a holdup there, while Forbes McLeod and Frank Haddock were machine gunned to death during the Needham Trust Company holdup.

TELEPHONE CO EMPLOYES TO HELP NEEDY CHILDREN

Telephone company employees will hold Christmas parties this week for 1000 children, selected from the rolls of 12 Boston welfare institutions. Each child attending will be given a substantial meal and will be supplied with a complete outfit of Winter clothing.

The first of these parties will be held tonight by the employees of the Central District, Bowdoin Square, when 300 youngsters will be fed and entertained by Santa Claus who will be helped in his work by two clowns.

Tomorrow night at the headquarters building, 300 more children will be similarly entertained and provided for and on Thursday night the employees of the State-st offices will hold a Christmas party with 300 little ones as their guests.

Similar parties are being held by telephone employees all over New England, plans having been made to entertain and clothe 9000 underprivileged children. Leon W. Weir, general plant employment supervisor, is directing the work.

Gov. Curley, Lieut Gov. Hurley, Mayor Mansfield and other prominent citizens have been invited to attend the parties.

Governor and Mansfield Bid Each Other Resign

Langone Files Bill for New Mayoral Election

The Mansfield-Curley controversy, which has been growing in intensity since early Summer, reached a high point yesterday when each official suggested that the other retire from office. Senator Joseph A. Langone added his bit to the row by filing a bill in the Legislature which would provide a special election for Mayor of Boston.

"There is one real service that Mr Mansfield can render the people of Boston and that is to announce his retirement as Mayor," said Gov Curley. The Governor pointed out that the Mayor's claim that he added $33,638,488.33 to the city debt is not accurate, as $14,575,613.11 of this increase was due in part to the issue of bonds for municipal and emergency relief, and the remainder of the increase in loans issued, the Governor said, was for the completion of a hospital program "which has brought Boston prominence in municipal hospital administration throughout the world."

Explains Cash Deficit

"Great stress," continued Gov Curley, "has been laid by Mr Mansfield upon what he terms the deplorable conditions surrounding him when he assumed the office of Mayor, and he repeatedly pointed to the fact that there was a cash deficit of $12,617,240.77. He failed to inform the public that the unpaid taxes were some $6,000,000 in excess of what he claims was the cash deficit. Mayor Mansfield failed to state that the cash deficit at the end of the first year of his administration was $19,260,097, or 50 percent greater than at the end of my administration."

In making comparisons, the Governor said, "the all-important fact is the failure to state that Federal aid, which represented an expenditure of $50,000,000 in Boston during the past two years, was not available to me during my four years as Mayor."

The Governor criticized the Mayor for failing to "direct attention to the decrease in the net debt for county purposes and for water purposes representing more than three-fourths of a million dollars" as being "in keeping with the deceptive policy which he has practiced since he first began whining as Mayor of Boston."

GOVERNOR ASKS INQUIRY ON SLAYER'S PETITION

Gov James M. Curley today announced that he has referred to Atty Gen Paul A. Dever for investigation and report, the petition of attorney George A. Douglas requesting the chief executive to commute to life imprisonment the sentence of Miller F. Clark, condemned to die in the electric chair the week of Jan 12 for the murder of Ethel Zimmerman in a South End bakery shop.

The Governor said he would take no action until he has received a report from the attorney general on the case.

PROGRESS MADE ON B. R. B. & L. DISPUTE

Belief Wage and Hour Issues Will Be Settled

Progress towards reaching a satisfactory solution of the differences between the management of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad and the employees who are members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes was made at the opening meeting of road and union officials held at the company offices at Rowe's Wharf yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was arranged after a demand by Gov Curley last week that both sides get together and straighten out the differences over wages and working conditions and thereby prevent a strike.

While the question of wage increases must be settled by the directors of the company, the meeting yesterday agreed on a number of points, as to working hours and it is believed that this question can be settled in conference. Each side could see justice in proposals of the other side.

The company was represented at the meeting by Pres Walter P. Simonds; Nelson M. Powell, general manager, and Supt John R. Sullivan. The union delegation consisted of nine men with P. J. O'Brien of Springfield, vice president of the international union, as chairman; Eugene Mitchell, president of the Lynn division; Edward P. McNeil, a conductor, and Capt Charles Anderson of the ferry service among the others.

The results of the discussion yesterday will be reported to the directors by Mr Powell sometime this week and it is expected that the two committees will get together soon after this meeting.

In the demands presented by the union committees requests for the practical restoration of wage cuts which would raise wages from 61 and 65 cents to 80 cents an hour and the arranging for work so that the men would get in eight hours' work, an elapsed day of 10 hours instead of over the elapsed time of 12 to 14 hours now practiced.
Governor Asks Inquiry on Buying Hospital Beds

Gov. Curley initiated another attack on the Mansfield administration in Boston's City Hall, today, when he asked the Boston Finance Commission to investigate the purchases of "condemned beds" from the Massachusetts General Hospital by Mayor Mansfield's institutions commission, Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, for use on Long Island.

"Apparently nothing is too bad for the poorest of the poor," Gov. Curley said, when he was informed today that in October, 1934, the Institutions Department had purchased 60 iron beds from the Massachusetts General Hospital for $4 a bed and in October of this year had purchased 25 more beds, "apparently the same kind," according to the Governor, at 25 cents each.

Although Gov. Curley said that the purchase of "beds that should have been scrapped," for the poor in the city's care was "highly reprehensible," he termed the "worst feature of the transaction" the purchase of beds for $4, when apparently they were worth, in the words of the Governor, "only a quarter each.

In a letter to chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Finance Commission, the Governor asked the Finance Commission to demand that the hospital refund immediately to the city the difference between $4 per bed and 25 cents a bed.

Institutions Commissioner Washburn is a former official of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The "communication" which prompted the Governor's note to the Finance Commission today was a letter received today by Asst Sec Frank L. Kane from Dr. W. Faxon, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The letter said:

"In reply to your telephone request of this afternoon, I would advise that in October, 1934, we sold to the city of Boston, department of supplies, 60 iron beds at $4 each, we also arranged for the cartage of these beds to the wharf at a charge of $1 each.

"In October, 1935, we sold 25 more of these iron beds at 25 cents each, to the city of Boston, institutions department. Transportation for these beds was arranged by the city of Boston."

What prompted the telephone call by Secretary Kane to Director Faxon was not disclosed.

KENTUCKY COLONEL HOST TO KENTUCKY GENERAL

Col. William E. Smith was host last evening at an old-fashioned Kentucky reception and dinner to Gen. Jack Connolly, former Boston newspaperman and present motion picture executive, at the Hotel Kenmore. Twenty Kentucky colonels were among the guests. Col. F. Dobson was toastmaster. Gov. James M. Curley was represented by Col. James Hancock. Telegrams were read from Cabinet members, Senators, Congressmen and Governors throughout the United States who are Kentucky colonels.

Mr. Connolly is the only General on the staff of Gov. Laffoon of Kentucky.

Congressman-Mayor Richard M. Russell and a large number of city officials will attend. A group of Cambridge High and Latin and Rindge students will sing carols under the direction of Benedict Fitzgerald, director of music in the Cambridge schools.

CURLEY PLANS CONFERENCE ON CHRISTMAS PARDONS

Gov. Curley said that he would confer with Asst Secretary John H. Backus this afternoon regarding the list of Christmas pardons that he intends to submit to the Executive Council.

"Until I talk with Backus, who has been handling the pardons," the Governor said, "I shall be unable to make any statement about the Christmas pardons list."

Uzcudun Game to End
Tiger Coaches Smile
Danno Still Tarries

By Victor O. Jones

DAILY BOOST
To the Game of Golf, which, according to Buddy Myer's own story, helped make him the American League batting champ for 1935.

THIS AND THAT—Spain is a second rate power now and most of her old glories have vanished. . . . But the Spaniard is a proud man and a brave man and the prize ring has produced few gayer sights than old Paulino Uzcudun stalking to Joe Louis' corner on crumbling legs and motioning him to continue the slaughter after the referee had already raised the Negro's hand. . . . I give you that as a contrast to the way Max Baer lost his fight to Louis, resting on one knee, his head clear enough so that he could easily tell the difference between "nine" and "10." . . . Baseball boasts plenty of umps who used to be ball players themselves, but Fred Marberry must be about the only ball player who used to be an ump himself. . . . Looks as though Thos Yawkey had utterly ruined Clark Griffith's sense of proportion. . . . He told the Yanks they could have Buddy Myer for $500,000. . . .

THESE AND THOSE—Walter Merrill, the Globe's Princeton correspondent, who is in very close to the Tiger coaching staff, says Fritz Crielier and his aids are getting a big laugh out of the All American selections. . . . The Princeton coaches rank the tackles in this order: Stoess, Ritter and Toll, but the All Americans rank them Ritter, Toll and Stoess. . . . Also Jack White is named to several All Americans while the Tiger coaches rank him definitely behind Gerry LeVoy. . . . and while Weller is being named to most All American teams and Montgomery is never mentioned, Montgomery was considered the best lineman at Princeton, definitely better than Weller . . . Bob Zuppke of Illinois is still chortling over his team's defense against Michigan. . . . "Their total yardage gained for the day was 10 yards, most of it made in inches. Our defense fell asleep only once and they got away for a long open field run of four yards."

IN AND OUT—Danno hasn't sailed for Ireland yet and so if you had bet $2 even money the first time that Danno's handlers said he'll sail, and had let your winnings ride each subsequent time, you'd now have $4036. . . . Now R. C. T. Roe, secretary of the British Pro Golf Association, says that the Britons lost the Ryder Cup to the Americans this year because the American food upset the visitors. . . . Well, we didn't serve our guests blood pudding anyway. . . . Now they've discovered that Johnny Gottselig of the Hawks, is Jewish. . . . That makes three Jewish boys in major league hockey, the others being Alex (Mine Boy) Levinsky and Max Kaminsky. . . . The odds on the Louis-Uzcudun fight were 15 to 1. . . . Was there ever a major heavyweight fight where the odds were that long.
ROUND AND ABOUT—It seems that I was all wet about the James M. Curley trophy in the Commercial Hockey League coming to roost on the Milton mantel-piece of the Shawmut Bank Saltonstalls. . . Barney Begley of the First National team says a special niche has already been reserved in the Milk-st fortress for the mug. . . That sensational kid line that Lester Patrick is hatching for the Rangers down on the Philly club of the Canam League is good as a unit. . . but if you peddled the three players to three different clubs, I don't know for sure that you'd find a star . . . After all, playing together that long helps a lot. . . The official stenographer at the recent A. A. U. convention says that 60,000 words were spilled on the Nazi question on that occasion. . . And what, if anything, did they accomplish? . . .

YEAH AND NEA—Rip Valenti is still in there swinging and trying to get a financial draw out of Boston's professional boxing. . . The Shucco-McCoy thing ought to be a real fight, too. . . Looks like Yvon Robert against Danno at the Garden, Dec 27. . . Some headliners in the lighter weights have fought fights in Havana, the Pearl of the West Indies, but Joe Louis is the first prominent heavyweight to show his wares there since the terrible affair between Jess Willard and Jack Johnson. . . And in case you didn't know, the Cubans are fielding last year, but could he have caught some of those Pearl of the West Indies, but Joe Louis is the first of the Red Sox, led the first basemen in mathematical to his chief secretary. AIM SUIT AT HIM, CURLEY CLAIMS

Dolan Case Being Used to Cripple Senate Aspirations, He Says---
In Verbal Fight With Mayor

Declaring that the charges brought by Mayor Mansfield in the Supreme Court in the suit against Edmund L. Dolan are not directed at the former Boston city treasurer, but at him, Governor Curley last night asserted that the case would be dragged out for a year to provide ammunition in a political fight against his Senatorial aspirations.

"THEY ARE AFTER CURLEY"

"They don't want to get Eddie Dolan," said Governor Curley. "They are after Curley. They put the case into the Supreme Court to make it last a long time and April, when the delegates are elected to the convention, the matter of the city of Boston bond investments will be brought before a master, and it will be revived again during the convention in June and along about September, when the master's report Is completed, it will be primary time. They want to widen the war flag over Curley, but I will be elected United States Senator just the same."

Farnum Studies Testimony

This was the concluding broadside of a day of withering exchanges of personalities between Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield, during which the two executives advised one another to resign immediately for the good of the city and State. But, while the Governor and the Mayor were exchanging wrangling compliments George R. Farnum, special assistant to Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley, was poring over the testimony of Edward Donovan, John J. McGinnis, George S. Clarkson, Robert L. Emerson and Mr. Dolan, all given at various times before the Boston Finance Commission, and checking their statements against a statement secured from a man whose identity is a carefully guarded secret.

Go Through Bank Records

A staff of investigators headed by Sidney Sullivan spent the day going through the bank records of the Legal Securities Corporation and R. L. Emerson & Co., and also through the files of two companies that were included in the records of the case before the Finance Commission. These were being checked with the recorded dates of bond purchases made by the city and against the bond quotations of record at the date that the sales to the city of the bonds by Legal Securities Corporation and R. L. Emerson & Co. were recorded.

Curley's Blast at Mansfield

Governor Curley opened the day of statement and counter-statement with an assertion that "no man in the history of Boston politics ever descended to a depth so low as the present Mayor to secure election." He asserted that during the two years of the Mansfield administration "there were "represented in an increased tax rate, an increased debt, an increased inefficiency. I challenge Mr. Mansfield to point to a single substantial, enduring public improvement created during the wild orgy of expenditures of the past two years—and I venture to state that when he retires from office the only monuments that he will leave will be those represented by increase in taxes, increase in debt and humiliation in the hearts of an intelligent people at the knowledge that the chief executive of Boston, during Mr. Mansfield's term of office, was not only incompetent during his entire term, but an abject whiner from beginning to end. There is one real service that Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as Mayor."

Mayor in Fiery Come-Back

To which Mayor Mansfield retorted: "If anybody should resign, it should be Governor Curley. He recently admitted the job was too much for him, and that his health was being impaired and that he needed five rundown.s a week. "On the other hand, I am in excellent health. Although my job is a difficult one because of the debt burden left by Mr. Curley, I face my duties cheerfully."

Recall of Mansfield From Office as Mayor Would Result From Bill Filed in Legislature

The bitter controversy of the past few months between Governor Curley and Mayor Mansfield, which again raged yesterday, had as its final definite move the filing by Senator Joseph A. Langone of a bill which would force the recall of the Mayor.

At the dinner to Governor's Secretary Edmond Hoy at the Parker House last night, Governor Curley again returned to the attack. He asserted that his embarrassment in his present job came as a result of his inability to satisfy the demands made upon him by the unemployed. He said, however, that he could not be blamed for that. The trouble, he said, was that the federal WPA administration has fallen down on the紀錄.

Senator Langone, formerly a close friend of Mayor Mansfield, with whom he had a falling out after the last municipal election, is now a warm admirer of the Governor.

Senator Langone's bill provides for a special referendum to the voters of Boston on the first Monday in May of 1936. The referendum reads: "Shall there be an election for Mayor on the first Tuesday in November in the current year?" If a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon vote in the affirmative, there shall be a special election for Mayor on Jan. 1, 1937. If a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon vote in the negative, there shall be no special election for Mayor on Jan. 1, 1937.
Council Would Cancel Contracts of Coal and Oil Firms

After charges that poor families on Boston's relief rolls are being forced to wait as long as two weeks for delivery of fuel and in some cases are being victimized by concerns holding city contracts to supply coal and oil, the City Council yesterday demanded that Mayor Mansfield break existing contracts with two of the companies.

COUNCILLOR NORTON URGED his fellow members to stand together on the matter, to demand that the present contracts be broken and to hold up important appropriations until such action is taken. He said that he was personally acquainted with the proprietor of the oil concern mentioned, and backed up the contentions of Councillor Wilson.

An order introduced by Councillor James E. Agnew of Brighton, asking Mayor Mansfield to request federal officials to pay WPA workers in Boston weekly rather than twice a month, also was passed by the body.

In an attack on WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch, Councillor Dowd urged that Mayor Mansfield mobilize the Massachusetts Congressmen and Senators in order to have Mr. Rotch replaced by Governor Curley as the State administrator.

CITING SPECIFIC CASES

Councillor Robert G. Wilson, who started the protests against the treatment accorded Boston welfare recipients by the concerns handling fuel contracts, declared that "no attempt is made to check up on the kind of contractor furnishing oil and coal."

Councillor John F. Dowd of Roxbury, contended that an oil company bid extremely low for the right to supply welfare oil and is now "evidently trying to get the people."

He said that in one case an employee of the oil concern persuaded a woman to sign for 50 gallons of oil and then went away without leaving any oil at her home. Another woman, he stated, received her order for oil from the welfare department on Nov. 26, and is still waiting to obtain delivery.

Councillor Wilson drew a picture of a mother and father and six small children waiting in a cold home for two full weeks for the contractor to deliver coal or oil, despite the fact that they had received their fuel order slips from the city welfare department.

Call for Drastic Action

"These contractors act as if they were delivering this coal or oil on a charity basis when actually they are guaranteed payment by the taxpayers of Boston at the price stipulated in their contracts," said Wilson who introduced the order asking that the contracts be cancelled.

Councillor Norton urged his fellow members to stand together on the matter, to demand that the present contracts be broken and to hold up...
GOVERNOR ASKS
SUPER HIGHWAY
One From Canada to Cape Horn Suggested

A great highway 2000 feet wide from Canada to Cape Horn, was Governor Curley's suggestion to help both road builders and international relations along.

The Governor entered late to address the New England Road Builders Association at their 14th annual dinner last night at the Hotel Statler, and he suggested wider and finer highways to help eliminate automobile accidents.

Then warping into his subject he suggested a super-American highway along which Canadians and Americans and South Americans might travel in comfort and to the benefit of inter-racial amity.

GOVERNOR, MAYOR ASK OTHER RESIGN

The Curley-Mansfield controversy burst wide open yesterday with the Beacon Hill and School St. administrations bombarding each other with charges and countercharges, demands and counter demands.

Branding Mayor Mansfield as a "whiner" and guilty of a "wild orgy of city spending," the Governor called on the mayor to resign. In a counterblast, the mayor declared that if anyone ought to resign, it should be the governor himself.

There is only one real service that Mr. Mansfield can render the people of Boston, and that is to announce his retirement as mayor," Gov. Curley declared in a prepared statement.

"If anyone should retire," Mayor Mansfield retorted, "ought to be the governor, who recently admitted that the job was too much for him, that his health is impaired and that he requires five rub-downs a week."

Challenging the mayor to point out a single substantial improvement during the "wild orgy of city spending," the Governor predicted that the only monuments the mayor would leave would be increases in taxes and the city debt.

"On the other hand," Mayor Mansfield countered, "I am enjoying excellent health and although the job is a difficult one, I am confident of my ability to meet the problems.

Replying to the Mansfield charges of extravagance, the Governor declared that the Curley mayorality administration had none of the $50,000,000 of federal funds for welfare relief, but had built the East Boston vehicular tunnel and the Kenmore sq. subway extension to relieve unemployment.

While the controversy was raging, State Senator Joseph A. Langone filed a bill seeking to oust Mayor Mansfield anud providing for a special election for a mayorality successor.

CURLEY AND MAYOR EACH SAY "QUIT"

Gov. Curley was asked yesterday to commute the sentence of Miller F. Clark, condemned to die in the electric chair in the week of Jan. 12 for the murder of Ethel Zuckerman, to life imprisonment. Atty. George A. Douglas, who filed the petition, said there is no doubt of Clark's guilt, but believes he was insane at the time. No date has been set for the hearing.

"I shall gladly personally contribute the cost of 200 Christmas baskets," the Governor said, "but I feel in justice to myself and to the families who are writing in and who are looking forward to a Christmas dinner that it is impossible for me to accept any requests after this day."

He urged any person who desires to help to send $3 for each basket to Mrs. Agnes H. Parker, former president of the Women's Relief Corps of the G. A. R., Room 304, State, whom he has designated to have charge of receipts and distribution of Christmas baskets.

The Governor said Joseph Tomsello has agreed to take care of 10 families, and Patrick Coleman will look after the needs of 50 South End families.

The main thing now, assuming that the cumbersome federal machinery is functioning properly, is to keep it running so that the WPA worker need not go hungry when he has money due him.

Calls on Finance Commission to Investigate Purchase from Mass. Gen. Hospital

Governor James M. Curley today requested E. Mark Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, to investigate the purchase by the city of Boston, of second-hand beds from the Massachusetts General Hospital, and to take steps to obtain a refund of $225 to the city from the hospital.

"I beg to forward herewith a communication received this day with reference to a most unusual transaction by the former head of the Massachusetts General Hospital," the governor wrote to the Finance Commission chairman. "The departure from the established custom of buying new material and the purchasing, in his case, of second-hand material that evidently had been condemned, I presume on the theory that anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor, should not be countenanced. The real reprehensible feature, outside of the unloading of material that should have been scrapped, upon the institutions of the city of Boston, lies in the fact that a charge of $4 was made per bed, or a total of $246, for the same character of beds that were later sold for twenty-five cents to the institutions department.

"It is clearly the duty of the Finance Commission to require a refund be made to the city of Boston of $225, which represents the difference in the charge for the beds that were sold upon two different occasions, and it is likewise, in my opinion, the duty of the Finance Commission not to demand a refund but to investigate the condition surrounding the entire transaction."

The governor sent his letter to Chairman Sullivan after he had received information from Dr. N. W. Faxon, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital, advising him that, in October, 1934, the hospital sold to the supply department of the city, sixty iron beds at $4 each, and arranged for the cartage of the beds at a charge of $1 each. In October, 1935, the hospital reported, twenty-five additional beds were sold to the city institutions at twenty-five cents each.

Fee of Millens' Counsel Goes to Widows

Governor Presents Checks of $250 Each

George Stanley Harvey, Attorney for Irving and Murton Millen, Who Were Electrocuted Last Spring, Presented His Fee to Widows of the Victims Who Were Killed by the Gang of the Millen and Their Cohort, Abraham Faber. Left to Right: Governor James M. Curley, Mr. Harvey, Mrs. Mary McLeod, Mrs. Helen Haddock, Mrs. Grace Sumner and Mrs. Marion Clark.

The $1000 fee allowed by the State to George Stanley Harvey for his services in defense of the Millen brothers was divided equally today by Governor Curley among the widows of the four men slain by the Millen-Faber gang.

Mr. Harvey contributed the sum last week, with the request that the governor distribute it among the families of the victims. The governor presented $250 each to Mrs. Helen C. Haddock and Mrs. Margaret McLeod, both of Needham; Mrs. Grace Summer of Lynn and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg.

In presenting the money, the governor said: "Attorney Harvey is not a well-to-do man, but he has a heart as big as the building in which we are now assembled. To bring a little happiness into the hearts of those who have been abandoned, he has turned over this check to you, to relieve your suffering."

The governor took occasion to criticize the law which establishes $1000 as the maximum fee for a lawyer appointed to represent a defendant in a capital case in this State, and compared it to the law which fixes a compensation of the governor at $10,000 a year as compared with $20,000 for the mayor of Boston. Harvey, who was present during the presentation of the fund, expressed his deepest sympathy to the four women.

The staff of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, under Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, approved the project to bring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for three concerts in Hanna Farm, Stockbridge, Mass., next August. The acceptance was based on the enthusiastic response expressed in many new memberships in the Festival Association, to the first announcement a few weeks ago. The acceptance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, already tentative, was made formal with the receipt of a letter from Dr. Koussevitzky, who will conduct all three concerts.

This will constitute his first professional appearance in America during the summer since he was first engaged as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the season of 1924-25. Hitherto he has regularly spent his summers in Europe. Dr. Koussevitzky has just applied for the American citizenship papers and intends to reside here permanently.

At the same time the trustees wired Governor James M. Curley of Massachusetts, reminding him of his desire, expressed at the opening of last summer's Stockbridge Festival, to have the Commonwealth underwrite the festival to the extent of $9,000.

In Boston it was impossible to reach Governor曲ley's office for a statement at press time.

Dr. Koussevitzky's statement follows:

"It will not surprise me if the old habit will change and many Europeans will come here instead.

The Massachusetts Chapter of Kentucky Colonels was organized last night in London, in honor of General Jack Connolly, chief of staff of the governor of Kentucky, who has been named by the members of this group on his staff of aids. Connolly, former Boston newspaper man and now editor of the Pulpe News Weekly, has just returned from the European war zone.

There were twenty-five colonels present last night to enjoy a dinner of Blue Grass dishes flown here by airplane preparation by a colored mammy. The menu included jack salmon, ham, steak, that had been parboiled in Kentucky, and its cooking completed here, candied sweet potatoes, fried apples, fried hominy sticks and corn pone.

Governor James M. Curley and Adjutant General William I. Rose were guests. Officers elected for the new chapter are: Colonel Neil O'Hara, president; Colonel C. P. Dodson, vice president; Colonel J. E. H. Hunkin, secretary; Colonel William H. Carter, treasurer; Colonel Lester Bottomley, chairman of the executive committee; Colonel Dustin Lussier, chairman of publicity. Colonel William E. Smith was elected honorary president.

Governor James M. Curley has appeared to the younger generation. She will speak on "Modern Girls" at Springfield Thursday or Friday at 6 P.M. Governor Curley gave Miss Blonden a letter to Governor Lehman of New York.
SOCIETY GROUP FOR LOTTERIES

Starts Crusade to Legalize Them as Relief to Realty Taxation

A group of society women, charity workers and civic leaders yesterday incorporated the Massachusetts Council for Legalizing Lotteries, Inc., with offices at 131 State Street. Their object is the leading of a "crusade" to legalize lotteries "under the laws of the Commonwealth as a direct relief to real estate taxation, as a source of revenue to the state, and as an aid to worthy welfare organizations."

Led by Mrs. Oren Cheney Sanborn, president, the organization hopes to have an ultimate enrollment of 250,000. Backed by a pleasantly filled war chest and the conviction that legalized lotteries would solve many of the state's financial problems, the group hopes to persuade the citizenry at large rather than back any specific bill in the state Legislature. A possible objective will be the calling of a state referendum to vote on the question.

The formation of this organization and the filing of several bills providing for state-operated lotteries makes it likely that the dramatic fight of last May in the Legislature may possibly be repeated in the next session.

Despite strong opposition both in and out of the Legislature, the lottery bill seemed likely to become law last May until Cardinal O'Connell raised his voice against it. At that time he characterized it as a terrible source of corruption. Legislators previously for the bill reversed their stands and two days after the cardinal's statement, the bill was defeated.

At that time Cardinal O'Connell said "The excuse that it would raise money for the state is not a valid one because that could be said of anything." He declared that lotteries were worse than drink, that the facts always debunk the populace. He pointed to the Louisiana lottery, "which grew to be a flagrant scandal." He said "The excuse that it would raise money for the state is not a valid one because that could be said of anything." He declared that lotteries were worse than drink, that the facts always debunk the populace. He pointed to the Louisiana lottery, "which grew to be a flagrant scandal."

AN INSTINCTIVE TRAIT

The thesis of Mrs. Sanborn and her colleagues is founded on the premise that gambling is an instinctive inevitable and lasting trait of mankind, comparable to drinking. They argue that prohibition was a farce and that it placed liquor in the hands of racketeers. The only beneficiaries of man's gambling instinct now, they say, are the racketeers who control number pools, beano and other games of chance. Instead of giving criminals vast profits, they urge that the money should be turned to useful ends, declaring that such legalized lotteries would bring Massachusetts charities about $7,000,000 a year, and the state a like sum. In addition, they assert, the vast gambling public, which will be forever with us, will be protected by honestly administered state lotteries.

"We should keep American dollars at home," said Mrs. Sanborn. "I'm not against the Irish Sweepstakes and the Canadian sweepstakes. They go for fine charitable causes. But Massachusetts hospitals are sorely pressed for money. Real estate owners are over-taxed. Millions of dollars are leaving hands and will continue to. We should face facts. This is a realistic world and while we don't approve of gambling we know that it will remain here and we will try to systematize and control it under government operation."

"If anybody should resign," Mansfield said, "it should be Mr. Curley. He recently admitted that the job was too much for him and that his health was impaired and that he had to have five rub-downs a week.

"On the other hand, I am enjoying excellent health, and although my post is a difficult one due to the burdens left me by Mr. Curley, I am carrying out the duties of my office cheerfully and with confidence in my ability to cope with the problems."
Gov. Curley asked the Boston finance commission today to investigate the purchase by the institutions department of the city of Boston from the Massachusetts General Hospital of second-hand beds for use at Long Island.

The Governor criticized the purchase of beds "that evidently had been condemned," asked that a refund be demanded because of the difference in price of two lots of beds purchased, and demanded that the commission "investigate the conditions surrounding the entire transaction." Sixty beds were purchased at $4 each and 25 more at 25 cents each.

The Governor made public a letter which Frank L. Kane, one of his secretaries, had received from N. W. Faxon, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital. This letter read:

"In reply to your telephone request of this afternoon, I would advise you that in October, 1934, we sold to the city of Boston, department of supplies, 60 iron beds at $4 each. We also arranged for the cartage of these beds to the wharf at a charge of $1 each.

The Governor's letter to Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the finance commission read:

"I beg to forward herewith communication received this day with reference to a most unusual transaction by the former head of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The departure from the established custom of buying new materials and the purchasing in this case of second hand materials that evidently had been condemned, I presume on the theory that anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor, should not be countena..."
Curley Reappoints Smith, Council Rejects; Names Reardon, Oath Supporter

Boston, Dec. 18—(AP)—In a surprise move, the executive council on a straight party vote rejected the reappointment of Dr. Payson Smith as commissioner of education, and then confirmed James G. Reardon, Adams school superintendent, for the post.

Reardon's name was submitted by Governor James M. Curley after the six Democratic councillors voted against Smith's reappointment.

Paul G. Kirk, 31-year-old commissioner of public safety, was confirmed unanimously for reappointment by the council. Both confirmations were returned under suspension of rules.

The governor also reappointed Henry F. Long as commissioner of corporations and taxation for a three-year term.

The other terms are for five years.

Reardon, a Legionnaire and avowed staunch advocate of the Massachusetts Teachers' oath law, was endorsed last night by a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' federation for the position.

The new education commissioner is 36 years old and is a Boston college graduate. He served as superintendent of schools in East Bridgewater for 11 years prior to going to Adams.

Reardon also announced he favored a method of certifying all teachers in the state to insure qualified persons being employed in the schools.

Dr. Smith had served as commissioner of education since 1916 when he was elected head of the department by the state board of education.

Haigis Denounces Curley Spending In Orange Speech

'Most Inefficient In History'

'Discard Economy'

100 Sign Pledge of Support

The present state administration is "the most extravagant and inefficient in the history of Massachusetts" declared John W. Haigis of Greenfield in a stirring appeal for all Republicans to meet their challenge, given at the re-organization meeting of the Orange Young Men's Republican club last night.

More than 200 attended the meeting, held in the Universalist church vestry, preceded by a chicken pie supper. After the meeting 100 pledge cards were filled out by those present.

'Not Public Service'

"Political expediency and not public service" is the main objective of the present administration, declared Haigis, who listed its major faults:

"Liberal spending of the taxpayers' money is the order of the day; an increasing cost for the upkeep of every department of government; business methods and economy are being discarded; more and more names are being added to the state payrolls; salary increases are given whether deserved or not; more unnecessary room is being provided for state departments, with more rent to pay for the taxpayer."

"The morale in our state departments is at a low ebb; never has it been so difficult for the average man or woman, unless he also had political pull, to obtain employment; never in my memory has politics been more injected into state departments."

The speaker demanded a reorganization of the Republicans to meet its challenges and obligation. He sees in the present state of affairs an opportunity for the party, under leadership of younger men, to pull Massachusetts through a serious economic and political crisis.

'Thinking Real Issue'

"The real issue," he asserted, "is between straight and crooked thinking, between workable and unworkable policies."

Ernest Peterson, president of the new club, served as toastmaster, introducing Wallace Stearns of Boston, president of the New England Council of Young Republicans. Stearns foresaw a return to power for Republicans next year if only they will get started immediately to organize.

Everett W. French, secretary of the club, pointed out that the Republican turnout in "Democratic" Boston last year was better than in this section, which shows the need of concerted efforts.

Ralph Mahar introduced Mr. Haigis.

(Special to the Transcript)

Boston, Dec. 18.—James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams was confirmed as state commissioner of education this afternoon by the executive council, on a strictly party vote, after the council, acting by a strictly party vote, had rejected Gov. Curley's reappointment of Dr. Payson Smith to the post which pays $9,000 per year. Dr. Smith has served since 1916. Before submitting Dr. Smith's name, Gov. Curley had announced that if Smith was rejected he would nominate Reardon, which he immediately did. Before the council went into session, Gov. Curley was in conference for an hour and a half with the Democratic members.

Kiley Confirmed

The council unanimously approved Gov. Curley's nomination of Attorney Daniel E. Kiley as clerk of the District Court in Adams to succeed Edwin K. McPeck, who has served for the past 15 years.

The council also unaninously approved the reappointment by the governor of Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation, and Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of public safety. Long's salary is $7500 and Kirk's $6000.

Voting against Dr. Smith and for Bupt. Reardon, were the six Democratic directors. Lient. Gov. Joseph L. Burley, William G. Hennessey, James J. Brennan, Philip J. Russell, Morton H. Burdick, and Daniel H. Conkle.

For Dr. Smith and against Reardan, were the three Republican members, Frank A. Brooks, Joseph B. Grossman and Winfield A. Schuster. Councilor Russell, a Democrat, was named by Curley after Councilor Cote, a Republican, had resigned to accept Curley's appointment to the more lucrative post of chairman of the Fall River Finance Board. On the vote on Russell's nomination, former Councilor J. Arthur Baker of Pittsfield, a Republican, abstained from voting, thus permitting confirmation and giving the Democratic control of the council for the first time in the history of the state. Later Baker was given a $12,000 year post as justice of the Superior Court and Curley afterwards named Burdick, another Democrat, to succeed him as councilor.

Bitter Controversy

The nomination and confirmation of Reardon as commissioner of education is the culmination of a bitter controversy which reached its hottest points last night and today.

Last night, at a special meeting of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' federation, Reardon was endorsed by a vote of 12 to 10.

The minority issued a statement in which it expressed the belief that the federation was being exploited and that the vast majority of its 21,000 members are against such exploitation. Today Reardon was attacked in a statement issued in behalf of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor for his stand on the teachers' oath, which he strongly supports.

Smith Previously Commended

The meeting last night was called after the board had split into two camps after Mrs. Woodbury and Secretary Hugh Nixon admittedly interpreted a resolution of condemnation and appeal of Dr. Smith's work as commissioner, which was passed by the board on Nov. 16, as an indorsement of Dr. Smith for reappointment.

Members of the board who sought the indorsement of Reardon objected when Mrs. Woodbury publicly placed the federation in favor of Dr. Smith. Fourteen of them, they stated last night, sent personal letters to the Governor urging the appointment of Reardon and objecting to the reappointment of Dr. Smith.

On Dec. 14, five members — Martin F. O'Connor, Martin H. Casey, John...
L. Davaren, Miss Cutler and Miss McDonald — requested a special meeting of the board for the expressed purpose of nominating a candidate for the office of commissioner. This special meeting was called for last night.

Test of Resolution

After an hour and a half of bitter arguments the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, the members of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation purporting to represent 21,000 teachers recently endorsed the resignation of Payson Smith as Commissioner of Education, and

"Whereas, the teachers of the Commonwealth are vitally interested in the appointment of a Commissioner who will best serve the interest of education in this state, therefore be it

"Resolved, that this board of directors record itself as recommending the appointment of James G. Reardan of Adams, Mass., as the Commissioner of Education.

"And that, a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary without delay to His Excellency, James M. Curley, Governor of the Commonwealth."

Mr. Reardan's Statement

The minority report, signed by Grace I. Woodbury, Annie C. Woodard, William J. Saunders, N. Elliott, Willis, John C. Davis, Arthur F. Irving, Lillian M. McLeod, Russell Marshall, Joseph R. Burgess and Ruth D. Marr, was issued immediately after the meeting. It read:

"To all groups affiliated with the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation:

"The undersigned believing that the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation is being exploited and believing that the vast majority of the 21,000 teachers in Massachusetts are against such exploitation, hereby submit the following facts to be designated as a minority report.

"On Nov. 16, 1933, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, in meeting assembled, adopted a resolution which expressed commendation and appreciation of Dr. Payson Smith's services as Commissioner of Education, that resolution was presented to Gov. Curley personally by a committee made up of Mrs. Woodbury, Marilyn F. O'Connor, Anne C. Woodard and Harry A. Boyle, Miss McDonald and Dwight S. Davis.

"On Dec. 1 a request in writing was received signed by five members, calling for a special meeting of the Board of Directors for the purpose of taking action on the endorsement of James G. Reardan for the office of Commissioner of Education. This request was signed by Martin F. O'Connor, Martin H. Carey, John L. Davaren, Miss Cutler and Miss McDonald.

"As a result of this meeting and as a result of electioneering on the part of certain members of the board, James J. Reardon was endorsed.

"We, the undersigned, do not wish the members of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation to believe that we have stooped to such unethical methods as to induce a person for a position that is not already vacant. We did not wish to induce James J. Reardon for the office of commissioner of education and regret exceedingly that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board."

Labor Opposes Reardon

Later, Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor, voted opposition to Reardon.

"If Mr. Reardon is quoted correctly in saying that he is 100 per cent for the teachers' oath," Watt said, "that statement alone should disqualify him as commissioner of education in Massachusetts."

"Massachusetts was the birthplace of American liberty and it should not be made its graveyard."

"People who believe in the teachers' oath are believers in the democratic method of teaching, which is regimenting of school children by the regimentation of their school teachers."

"If a man who believes in this form of teaching is appointed, the walls of Farnell Hall will begin to tumble in."

James G. Reardon

James G. Reardon, who is 35 years old and a native of Medway, was appointed superintendent of schools in Adams on June 15 for a three-year term. He succeeded Henry L. Cecil, who had resigned about a month before.

Mr. Reardon, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Reardon of Medway, was graduated from Boston college with the class of 1923 and while there was an honor student and a member of the varsity football team. He has degrees of A. B. and A. M., and has done graduate work at Boston college, Boston university and Harvard university. He is a veteran of the World war.

"After receiving his bachelor's degree at Boston college in 1923 he taught in Greek at that institution for a time and then became assistant principal of East Bridgewater high school. Later he was made principal of that school and subsequently became superintendent at East Bridgewater. Just before he was selected for the Adams position was voted another three years' term in East Bridgewater as officials there attempted to persuade him to remain."

Mr. Reardon, who has been in Adams highly recommended by educators and educational associations in all parts of New England. Two years ago when Mr. Reardon was elected superintendent, Mr. Reardon was second choice. His selection this year was by a two to one vote of the board.

While teaching in East Bridgewater, Mr. Reardon was married to the former Anita Thorndike, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Thorndike of East Bridgewater. They have three children, Cynthia, 7, James, G. Jr., 5, and Susan Thorndike, 3, and Rosemary, 1.

The Reardans live on B street, Adams.

Mr. Reardon is a member of St. Thomas church, Adams, and of the American Legion and Knights of Columbus. He holds membership in Pi Gamma Mu, national honor society, and is a past president of the Plymouth County Teachers' association. He is a member of the New England Superintendents' Association, the Massachusetts Superintendents' Association, the National Science and National Mathematics groups, the University club, South Shore Schoolman's club, and the Hibernians and Emma club.

He served as director of the public health nursing association in Bridgewater and was also chairman of the Christmas seals committee, the transportation and school nurse committees and the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in that town and was also chairman of the SPCC society at Brockton.

Since moving to Adams, Mr. Reardon has made a host of friends and is especially highly regarded by the teachers under his jurisdiction and by members of the various Parent-Teacher associations in the town. He has been in constant demand as a speaker at public gatherings not only in Adams but throughout the county and on last Sunday night was the guest speaker at the annual memorial services of Adams lodge of Elks. During his short service as superintendent in Adams, Mr. Reardon has effected numerous changes which appear to have worked to the advantage of the teachers and pupils. He has a likeable disposition and makes friends easily.

Mr. Reardon has shown a marked interest in the athletic program in the schools.

Since it first became known that he was considered a candidate for the commissionership, Mr. Reardon has received hundreds of unsolicited endorsements from educators and educational groups, public officials and private citizens in all parts of the state and especially from the East Bridgewater section. His appointment will be warmly received in Adams, despite the fact that the school officials and townsmen feel that they are losing an able administrator.

Attorney Kiley

Attorney Daniel Kiley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Kiley, Sr., and was born in North Adams, but has lived practically all of his life in Adams. He was graduated from Liberty street grammar school in 1910 and Adams high school in 1918. He was a star football and baseball player in high school.

Mr. Kiley graduated from St. Michael's college for two years and then transferred to Georgetown, graduating from the college and then the Law school, in 1934.

Mr. Kiley was admitted to the District of Columbia bar the week after graduation and practiced law in the office of Attorney William Legh, a former teacher at Williamstown high school, who is considered one of the outstanding lawyers in Washington.

He returned to Adams several years later and then studied in the office of Attorney Thomas F. Cassidy at Pittsfield, one of Governor Curley's close friends and a member of the state race commission. He was appointed accountant in the ERA office at Adams on Oct. 4, 1934 and held that position until last Thursday when the office was disbanded through the transfer to WPA.

Mr. Kiley was one of the first men in Adams to declare for Governor Curley and beside having an active personal in forming the Curley club in Adams, of which he was secretary, too, also organized a Curley club in Savoy. He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative in the Second Berkshire District, composed of the towns of...
Liquor, racing, petty gambling and probably Sunday sports may come out of what appears to be a definite move on the part of religious and reformer groups to return Massachusetts to the column of puritanical conduct.

Liquor, more than any one item is slated for bitter battle, as local option again looms throughout the Commonwealth, with prohibition units moving unhampered toward their goal for restoration of the Baby Volstead act.

In 1932 with the frenzy of "tax producing legislation" racing bewildered voters, the city of Beverly went wet—but today the expression of sentiment throughout the state is that of universal disapproval of current conditions.

No doubt exists in the minds of early legislative visitors to the state capitol but what the trend of the coming vote on local option will find many towns and several cities reverting to the dry column.

Horse and dog racing under the pari-mutuel system of betting has already been under fire, and more can be expected in the coming convention of the legislature.

Figures submitted to the Governor by the State Racing commission for the past season, while showing that the state received in taxes $1,000,000 over and above the half million estimate, shows conclusively that for every attendant at Massachusetts race tracks, the loss was 83.

Merchants and tradesmen have reportedly suffered a loss through the operation of Bay State race tracks and the movement inaugurated by the Puritan League is gaining in popularity," the Governor said.

More than likely it will be the reference of the matter to the voters which will wipe out the racing in most counties except Suffolk.

The Suffolk Downs management may compliment themselves on locating in the most liberal county in the state, thus protecting their investment to a degree.

Beano, bingo and other chance games will be under heavy fire in the coming battle on the Hill.

Churches while sponsoring these games, in a minority of cases, appear to overlook the widespread growth of these games which will wipe out the racing in most counties except Suffolk. The Suffolk Downs management may compliment themselves on locating in the most liberal county in the state, thus protecting their investment to a degree.

MORAL ISSUES TO FIGURE IN 1936 SESSION
Liquor, Racing and Sunday Sports to Come Before the Legislature

STATE HOUSE, Boston, Dec. 18.

The tempo of the times indicate that the 1936 session of the legislature may be torn between moral issues, and the weighty discussion of a revision in state politics governing unchecked expenditures.
The irony of it is that the real issue at the next presidential election may be Townsend Plan vs. New Deal.

So it's a "mild" winter, is it? Well, in case the fact has slipped from your mind, autumn is still at the mike, winter standing by awaiting the word, "Take it away."

This, as the fellow said, is the season of peace on earth to men of goodwill—so Gov. Curley and Mayor Mansfield of Boston invite each other to resign. And maybe a lot of people would believe in Santa Claus more firmly if they did.

They were Commissioner Payson Smith, education; Paul G. Kirk, public safety, and Henry F. Long, corporations and taxation. Their terms expired Dec. 1.

The governor said he would submit their names to the executive council for confirmation at today’s session.

James G. Reardon, superintendent of Adams schools for the past year and staunch supporter of the teacher's oath law, had been endorsed last night by the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for appointment as state commissioner of education.

A minority report, however, favored retention of Dr. Smith.

Teachers' Federation Endorsed Reardon

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (A.P.)—A staunch supporter of the teachers' oath bill today had the endorsement of a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for appointment as state commissioner of education.

He is James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams and formerly at East Bridgewater.

A minority report favored retention of Dr. Payson Smith in the position.

The vote of the directors on Reardon's endorsement was 12 to 10 and came after a long and controversial struggle last night. The Reardon forces were led by John L. Davenport of Milford, while Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury of Melrose, president of the board, fought for a vote advocating retention of Dr. Smith.

The federation claims a membership of 21,000 teachers.

The minority issued a statement terming the vote for Reardon "exploitation of the federation." The group called the Reardon vote "stooping to unethical methods to endorse a person for a position not already vacant."

The governor declined to comment on the federation's endorsement other than to term it "extremely interesting."

Reardon is 36, a Boston college graduate and a Legionnaire. He was graduated from Boston college in 1923, received his master's degree a year later, and studied at Harvard and Boston universities.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of the oath bill," Reardon said today.

The teachers' oath measure, passed by the recent Legislature, requires all Massachusetts educators to swear allegiance to state and federal constitutions. It was passed over the objections of many of the state's teachers and has been a subject of much controversy since its enactment.
Reardon Made State Education Head
Smith Disapproved By Executive Body

James G. Reardon, Superintendent of Schools in Adams, today was appointed State Commissioner of Education by Governor Curley. The appointment was confirmed by the Executive Council on a straight party vote of six to three.

Previously, the Governor went through the formality of submitting the name of Payson Smith for reappointment, and confirmation was refused, 5 to 4.

Lieutenant Governor Hurley led the Democrats in approving Mr. Reardon's appointment. Those who voted with him were Councillors Russell, Hennessey, Coakley, Brennan and Burdick. The three Republicans who voted to confirm Mr. Smith's reappointment and reject the selection of Mr. Reardon were Councillors Grossman, Brooks, and Schuster. Former Mayor Hurley voted with the Republicans to confirm Mr. Smith's reappointment.

Belisle Not Mentioned
The name of Superintendent of Schools Belisle of this city was not considered, despite reports last week that he was to be given the $9,000-a-year position by the Governor.

Before the Council meeting, Mr. Curley announced he would reappoint State Commissioner of Education Smith, State Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk and State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long. The latter two were confirmed.

He gave an inkling of what was to occur when he announced that in the event Mr. Smith's appointment was not confirmed, he would submit the name of Mr. Reardon.

The majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Federation of Teachers last night endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Reardon, although the minority remained firm in its support of Mr. Smith.

On Nov. 16, the same group was reported to have endorsed the reappointment of Commissioner Payson Smith.

Curley's Comment
Governor Curley's only comment on the Reardon endorsement was that it "was very interesting." Last week, when asked about the possibility of Mr. Belisle being named, he remarked that 50,000 Frenchmen can't be wrong."

Teacher Ranks Split
The ranks of the Massachusetts Federation of Teachers are split because of the action taken by the directors last night.

Some political observers had expressed the belief that the battle between the factions might help the cause of Superintendent Belisle, who has not been embroiled in it, but it failed to do so.

The local man has remained noncommittal on the entire affair.

Charge Pressure Used
Supporters of Mr. Reardon charged pressure had been brought by school superintendents in an effort to force endorsement of Mr. Smith. The Superintendents' association announced support of Mr. Smith some time ago.

The minority countered with charges that the movement to endorse Mr. Reardon, a Boston College graduate and former superintendent at East Bridgewater, was dictated by Governor Curley.

The vote supporting Mr. Reardon was 12 to 8. John L. Davoren, president of the Teachers' Civic League of Massachusetts, led the fight for Reardon, while opposition was headed by Mrs. Grace L. Woodbury of Melrose, federation president. The federation membership numbers 21,600.
Rumor on Judges Denied by Curley

Denial that he contemplates removing or requesting the resignations of three Supreme Court justices has been made by Governor Curley.

Sitting at rest reports that he would force the retirement of elderly members of the court to make some political appointments, the Governor said:

"I have heard nothing of any such move. I have not asked, directly or indirectly, for the resignation of any justices of the Supreme Court, and I do not contemplate any action looking to their retirement."

Seek Evidence on Dolan At Closed Boston Banks

BOSTON, Dec. 18, (UP)—City of Boston investigators today scanned records of two closed banks in an effort to obtain evidence against former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan and six others accused of irregularities involving $250,000 in bond transactions.

The records are from the Exchange Trust Company and the Federal National Bank. A request for information has been made at the bond department of a third bank.

Meanwhile, all was quiet on the Curley-Mansfield front. Neither Governor Curley, who as mayor appointed Dolan, nor Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, instigator of the suit, commented further.

Special Corporation Counsel George R. Farnum announced he would ask the State Supreme court to expedite a hearing before a master on the bill of equity filed by the city Saturday in an effort to recover allegedly illegal profits said to have been made by Dolan and his associates while Dolan was treasurer.

Curley May Recommend Pardons For Christmas

(Special to The Herald News)

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, Dec. 18—Governor Curley, despite the recent attempted jail delivery at State Prison, will undoubtedly recommend Christmas pardons to the executive council at the session to be held the day before Christmas.

The chief executive has had Assistant Secretary John Backus working on Christmas pardon cases. The number to be granted has not been indicated.

Named to Pilot Berth

(Special to The Herald News)

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, Dec. 18—The Executive Council today confirmed Gov. Curley’s appointment of John Sullivan of 28 Barnaby Street, Fall River, as Deputy Pilot Commissioner, District No. 4. He succeeds D. Gardner O’Keefe.

Smith Scheduled For Re-Appointment

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Gov. Curley announced he would reappoint three department heads today. They were Commissioner Payson Smith, education; Paul G. Kirk, public safety and Henry F. Long, corporations and taxation. Their terms expired Dec. 1.

For the last several weeks Governor Curley and some of his assistant governors have been loud and continuous in their attacks on Arthur G. Rotch, state WPA administrator. They charge that everything wrong with the WPA is because of his poor administration, which must lift a load from the shoulders of officialdom in Washington. It was announced not long ago by the manager of the governor’s last campaign that Rotch’s successor had been named and that Rotch was out of a job.

But Aubrey Williams, assistant national administrator of WPA, was in Boston Monday to speak at a meeting and denied emphatically that the national administration was in any way dissatisfied with the conduct of its affairs in this state. In fact, he said plainly, that considerable of the reason for the criticism was due to premature announcements from the State House that projects were underway.

Mr. Williams admitted that there had been delays in procurement of materials and said it was due, as was the delay in pay checks, to the necessity of obtaining them through “old line governmental departments.” Mr. Williams, we judge, would have some matters of detail slightly different.

But the fact remains that the effort of the governor and his assistant broadcasters to lay the blame for the failure of his “work and wages” program on the shoulders of Mr. Rotch, has not yet been approved at national headquarters.
Haigis Promises Fight On Curley Regime Next Year

ORANGE, Dec. 18—John W. Haigis of Greenfield, leading G. O. P. aspirant for the governorship in 1936, blasted away at the Curley administration in a speech at a dinner attended by 200 members of the Young Men's Republican club last night in the Universalist church parish house. Mr. Haigis declared that the Republican party challenges the present administration and is ready to fight in 1936, to prevent the disintegration of government.

Other speakers were Wallace Stearns of Boston, president of the Massachusetts Council of Young Men's Republican clubs, Rep. James A. Gunn of Turners Falls, Olaf Hann, state committeeman from Turners Falls, George Schryver of Williamstown, Atty. George Rosebery of Erving, Harry Hackett of New Salem and Charles H. Stevens of Orange.

Walter Peterson, president of the club, was toastmaster at the dinner. Everett French, secretary, spoke on the work of the club, pointing out that 85 per cent of the Orange voters went to the polls in 1934 as against an average of 76 per cent for Western Massachusetts, creditting the activity of young Republicans for the interest in better government. Mr. Haigis was introduced by Ralph Mahar.

Six Seek Office As P. O. Head

Greenfield Democrats Circulating Papers for Federal Post

Slocomb's Term Expires Jan. 27

All Candidates Are Active in Local Democratic Ranks

The names of six local Democrats, certified by the U. S. civil service commission for the position of postmaster here, have been circulated among several local firms and individuals to secure confidential information. Those who have qualified are Clifford J. Akey, Frank L. Aldrich, Carl H. Atwood, Frank C. Keegan, James B. Kennedy and Carroll J. Lawler.

Postmaster Charles H. Slocomb's four-year term expires Jan. 27, 1936. Slocomb has been postmaster since 1923, having served many more years as a career man in the department. He is a Republican.

Of the six who have qualified, James B. Kennedy, now selectman, has polled the largest vote of any local Democratic candidate for office in recent years. He has long been a party leader here, is now chairman of the Democratic town committee and is regarded as on particularly good terms with the Walsh-Ely party faction in the state. He is a plumbing contractor.

Clifford J. Akey, an insurance agent, is a young Dartmouth graduate who has also taken an important place in party councils of the town. Following the Ely-Curley split of the party, in the last state election, he has been commonly regarded as Curley's chief reliance for information of this section and job seekers have often been referred to Akey.

Formerly the United States senators, when of the party of the administration, have been regarded as controlling postmastership appointments but Gov. Curley, it has been generally reported, has disputed this privilege of Sen. Walsh because of his own early stand for President Roosevelt.

Frank C. Keegan is an accountant who was county disbursing officer under the FERA. It was recently announced he was associated with the Franklin Savings Institution in its real estate department.

Carroll J. Lawler, theatre manager, is of a long-prominent Democratic family, his uncle having served as chairman of the town committee while he himself has several times been a candidate for town office. His father, Nicholas J. Lawler, was succeeded by Slocomb as postmaster.

Carl H. Atwood, twice elected assessor, has more recently become prominent in local Democratic ranks.

Frank L. Aldrich, an insurance and civil engineer, has several times been a Democratic candidate for public office, most recently for water commissioner.

Teachers Split On Reardon Appointment

BOSTON—By a vote of 12 to 8, last night, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, representing 21,000 teachers in the state, recommended to Gov. Curley the appointment of James G. Reardon, 36, superintendent of schools of Adams, as commissioner of education to succeed Dr. Payson Smith.

John L. Davoren of Milford, who introduced the resolution favoring Reardon's appointment, took the other directors that Gov. Curley "expected" their endorsement of him.

A minority report, signed by 10 of the directors, was given out along with the announcement of the resolution. In it these members expressed regret that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board.

That the session was a hectic one was evidenced by the shouting heard in the corridors outside the meeting room in the Ford Hall building at 15 Ashburton place.
Smith, Long, Kirk Reappointed by Gov. Curley Today

BOSTON.—A staunch supporter of the teachers' oath bill today had the endorsement of a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' federation for appointment as state commissioner of education.

He is James O. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams and formerly at East Bridgewater.

A minority report favored retention of Dr. Payson Smith in the position.

Appointment of a new commissioner was expected in State House circles within a few days, Dr. Smith's term having recently expired. Gov. James M. Curley has said, however, he had no particular candidate in mind.

The vote of the directors on Reardon's endorsement was 12 to 10 and came after loud and long controversy last night. The Reardon forces were led by John L. Daveren of Milford, while Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury of Melrose, president of the board, fought for a vote advocating retention of Dr. Smith.

The federation claims a membership of 21,000 teachers. The minority issued a statement terming the vote for Reardon "exploitation of the federation." The group called the Reardon vote "stealing to unethical methods to endorse a person for a position not already vacant."

The Governor declined to comment on the federation's endorsement other than to term it "extremely interesting."

Reardon is 36, a Boston college graduate and a Legionnaire. He was graduated from Boston college in 1923, received his master's degree a year later, and studied at Harvard and Boston university.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of the oath bill," Reardon said today.

The teachers' oath measure, passed by the recent Legislature, requires all Massachusetts educators to swear allegiance to state and federal constitutions. It was passed over the objections of many of the state's leading educators and has been a subject of much controversy since its enactment.

According to an announcement made yesterday, Frank W. Osborn, of the Fall River finance board, has been named as director of research of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers’ Associations and will assume his new post at the start of the new year. He is a Harvard College graduate and a former member of the Legislature.

Police Commissioner Eugene M. Sweeney, of Boston, wants a freer hand in the appointment of his police captains and as the Civil Service Commission has not yet rendered a ruling on his request for such, he made a “social call,” as he designated it, yesterday, on Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Green. Neither would say what was accomplished, and laid stress on the nature of the call, but observers believed it had to do with the awaited ruling.

Gov. Curley has received a petition for the commutation of the sentence of Miller F. Clark, who has been condemned to die the week of Jan. 12 for the murder of Ethel Zukerman and has referred it to Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever. The Governor said: “There will be nothing done until he has made a complete investigation and reports.”

Mrs. Anna Sharry, of Worcester and representing the Worcester Curley Club, called on Gov. Curley yesterday and he told her to “Use your own judgment” when she sought authorization for the establishment of a Curley-for-Senator club in Worcester.

Sen. Charles P. Daly, of Medford, yesterday filed a bill with the clerk of the House asking for the construction of a dam across the Mystic river between Somerville and Everett, near the Boston & Maine Railroad Co. bridge, and Sen. Charles, of Haverhill, is seeking to have the state widen the state highway from Salisbury Beach Center to the New Hampshire line.

Joseph Di Primo, tavern keeper of Cambridge has appealed to the State Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission for relief, after his liquor license was revoked by the Cambridge authorities on the grounds that the premises were not properly conducted. The state board has taken the appeal under consideration.

The legislative program of the Massachusetts Selectmen’s Association will be discussed at the annual two-day meeting of the association to be held in Gardner auditorium of the State House, Jan. 3 and 4, according to an announcement made by its president, John W. Heselton, yesterday.

REARDON IS CONFIRMED BY THE GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL: SMITH OUT
Strict Party Vote
Of 6 to 3 Chooses
Educational Head

Executive Council Unanimously Confirms Reappointment of Paul G. Kirk, Commissioner of State Police.

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (UP).—The Executive Council today rejected Governor Curley's reappointment of State Education Commissioner Payson Smith.

Immediately afterward the governor named James G.
Reardon, Adams superintendent of schools, as Smith's successor, and this appointment was confirmed. Smith was rejected by a straight-party vote of six to three, and Reardon was confirmed by the same margin. The Republicans who dissented from both actions were councillors Grossman of Quincy, Schuster of East Douglas and Brooks of Watertown.

of State Police Commissioner Paul G. Kirk.

Action of the council in rejecting Smith and confirming Reardon was not unexpected.

For an hour and a half prior to the session, the governor had conferred with the Democratic councilors. And though Curley announced that he would reappoint Smith, he hailed to explain that "if, by chance, the council should reject this," he stood ready to appoint Reardon as Smith's successor.

Smith is serving his 20th year as commissioner, having been first elected by the State Board of Education in 1916 and reappointed every governor except Curley.

Reardon had been endorsed by a majority of the directors of the State Teachers Federation and had been opposed by the State Federation of Labor, whose secretary-treasurer, Robert J. Watt, said Reardon should be disqualified because he was 100 per cent for the teachers' oath.

The new commissioner is a native of Medway, he graduated from Boston College in 1928 and has done graduate work there. He is 86 years old and father of four children.

Other appointments confirmed by the council included:

Henry F. Long, state tax commissioner (reappointment).

John Sullivan, Fall River, deputy pilot commissioner, District No. 4, succeeding D. Gardiner O'Keefe.

James S. McQuade, New Bedford, deputy pilot commissioner, District
No. 5, succeeding Manuel P. Marshall.

Daniel E. Kiley, Adams, clerk of the 4th District court of Berkshire, succeeding Edwin K. McPeck.

Bates Tells County Assessors Huge State Bond Issue Would Better Be Used for Relief

Mayor George J. Bates made a severe indictment of Gov. Curley's political expenditures, the $13,000,000 bond issue in particular, while addressing the Essex County Association of Assessors in Salem, yesterday, Alfred L. Poor, Lynn assessor, and now past president, presiding.

The Salem mayor said that municipalities would be better off if the money had been granted to them for direct relief purposes, and condemned constant borrowing for current expenditures.

Mayor Bates continued that cities and towns must work together and avoid such political expenditures as the $13,000,000 bond issue, warning that if they did not municipalities would find themselves in far worse condition than they are today.

Henry F. Long, tax commissioner, painted a bleak future for relief from the tax burden. The problem, he said, grew increasingly difficult, and while the cities and towns might ultimately increase revenues the greater capacity to pay would be offset by the greater capacity to absorb.

The following were unanimously chosen, officers of the association during the coming year: President, Clarence B. Humphreys of Swampscott; vice-president, Frank A. Rogers, Gloucester; secretary, David H. Roach of Lynn; treasurer, Herbert Ballard, Marblehead; executive board, John J. Murphy, Lawrence; John H. Dennis, Rockport; Caleb M. Cogswell, Essex; Harry L. Cole, Beverly; Fred L. Bennett, Haverhill; and Leverett Davis, Middleton.

MEDWAY NATIVE IS APPOINTED EDUCATION COM.

By International News Service

Boston, Dec. 18—The reappointment by Gov. James M. Curley of Dr. Payson Smith, state commissioner of education, was rejected by the executive council this afternoon by a vote of six to three. The governor promptly appointed James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, as commissioner and he was confirmed by the same six to three vote.

James G. Reardon, native of Medway, was endorsed by a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation last night for the post of State commissioner of education to replace Dr. Payson Smith.

Mr. Reardon was born in Medway, where his parents still reside. He was educated in the Medway schools and later attended Boston college, where he attained honor ranking as a student and also played on the varsity football squad. He taught in East Bridgewater, serving on the High school faculty and later serving as superintendent of schools for eight years. For the past year he has been superintendent of schools at Adams.

Last night at a meeting in Boston eight of the 12 directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation passed a resolution favoring the appointment of Mr. Reardon to succeed Dr. Payson Smith, the present commissioner of Education. The resolution was introduced by Principal John L. Davoren of the George E. Stacy school, who is second vice president of the federation. The Federation represents 21,000 teachers in the state.

Reardon—Council Confirms Him as School Head

In a dramatic behind-the-scenes political move James G. Reardon was today appointed Massachusetts Commissioner of Education. He succeeds Dr. Payson Smith, who had served in the post since 1917.

Names of Dr. Smith, Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation, and Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of public safety, were submitted to the Executive Council for reappointment by Governor Curley this afternoon.

But it was said that the investigation on school supply contract selling concerned the same two "bagmen" who were said to have been mixed up with the attempted sale of jobs to substitute school teachers. It was disclosed that these two persons approached two dealers in the school supply business and told them that they controlled the necessary number of school committee votes and could get certain contracts.

Mr. Kirk and Mr. Long were approved unanimously. Today's high-speed developments climaxed several months of growing intensity over the school commissionership.

Dr. Smith's term expired Dec. 2. His reappointment had been urged by several educational groups.

Appointment of Mr. Reardon was made in the face of objections voiced today by organized labor. His stand in favor of the teachers' oath law was cited by Robert J. Watt, secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, as indicating unfitness for the office.

"If Mr. Reardon is quoted correctly," Mr. Watt declared, "in saying that he is 1000 per cent for the teachers' oath, that statement alone should disqualify him."

Charging that those who believe in the teachers' oath are believers in the communistic method of teaching, Mr. Watt said that if a man who believes in this type of teaching is appointed, "the walls of Faneuil Hall will begin to tumble in."

Last night the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation voted 12 to 8 in endorsing Mr. Reardon, who is superintendent of schools in Adams.

It was noted today that the Federation of Teachers was one of the most active foes of the teachers' oath when it was before the Legislature last session. Its action in approving a man favoring the oath was regarded as being a paradox.

Schools—Foley Strikes At Alleged Contract Sales

The school committee job-selling investigation iron was still sizzling today as District Attorney J. Foley struck out at a new charge of graft—the alleged selling of contracts for the purchase of school supplies.

District Attorney Foley called upon Alexander Sullivan school purchasing agent and a number of other witnesses to his office during the day as the investigation continued to grow with the speed of a snowball rolling down hill. Where the snowball will ultimately land, nobody could hazard today.

But it was said that the investigation on school supply contract selling concerned the same two "bagmen" who were said to have been mixed up with the attempted sale of jobs to substitute school teachers. It was disclosed that these two persons approached two dealers in the school supply business and told them that they controlled the necessary number of school committee votes and could get certain contracts.

Jeffrey M. Reardon's name was submitted by Governor James M. Curley after the six Democratic councilors voted against Smith's reappointment.

Paul G. Kirk, 51-year old commissioner of public safety, was confirmed unanimously for reappointment by the council. Both confirmations were returned under suspension of rules.

The governor also reappointed Henry F. Long as commissioner of corporations and taxation for a three-year term.

Reardon Had Been Endorsed by Teachers' Group for Smith's Post

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Governor James M. Curley announced he would reappoint three state department heads at today's executive council meeting.

They were Commissioner Payson Smith, education; Paul G. Kirk, public safety; and Henry F. Long, corporations and taxation. Their terms expired Dec. 1.

The governor said he would submit their names to the executive committee for confirmation at today's session.

James G. Reardon, superintendent of Adams schools for the past year and a staunch supporter of the teachers' oath law, had been endorsed last night by the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for appointment as state Commissioner of Education.

Watt Opposes Reardon

Later, Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor, voiced opposition to Reardon.

"If Mr. Reardon is quoted correctly in saying that he is 100 per cent for the teachers' oath," Mr. Watt said, "that statement alone should disqualify him as commissioner of education in Massachusetts.

"Massachusetts was the birthplace of American liberty and it should not be made graveyard.

"People who believe in the teachers' oath are believers in the Communist method of teaching, which is regimentation of school children through the regimentation of their school teachers.

"If a man who believes in this form of teaching is appointed, the walls of Faneuil Hall will begin to tumble in."

SUPERINTENDENT OF ADAMS SCHOOLS IS COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION FOR STATE

Curley Reappoints Smith But Council Refuses Confirmation—Reardon Then Named and With Great Speed He Is Confirmed—A. F. of L. Executive Says Walls of Fanueil Hall Will Crumble, Although Teachers Endorse Appointment

(Special to the EAGLE)

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—James B. Reardon, Superintendent of Schools of Adams, was made State Commissioner of Education this afternoon by the Governor's Council. The vote for Reardon was on a strict party basis, six to three, with the Democrats endorsing the Adams man and the Republicans opposing.

Before submitting the near of Reardon Governor James M. Curley nominated Payson Smith, present commissioner. This appointment was rejected three to six, again on party lines, the Republicans, Shuster, Grossman and Brooks voting for Smith, while the Democrats knocked the appointment down.

Breaks All Records

The Council broke all records today in confirming all nominees sent in by Governor Curley, including that of Daniel Kiley of Adams to be Clerk of the District Court of Adams. Henry F. Long was also reappointed Commissioner of Taxation and Paul G. Kirk, Commissioner of Public Safety.

The appointment of Reardon was expected for the Federation of Teachers endorsed him last night, although today Robert J. Watt, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, in discussing the appointment of Reardon said:

Reardon Attacked

"If Mr. Reardon is quoted correctly as saying he is one thousand per cent for the teachers' oath, that statement alone should disqualify him as Commissioner of Education of Massachusetts. Massachusetts was the birthplace of American liberty and it should not be made its graveyard.

People who believe in the teachers' oath are believers in the communistic method of teaching which is regimenting of school children by the regimentation of their school teachers.

"If a man who believes in this form of teaching is appointed, the walls of Fanueil Hall will begin to tumble in."

Teacher's Federation Supports Reardon

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—A staunch supporter of the teachers' oath bill today had the endorsement of a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for appointment as State Commissioner of Education.

He is James G. Reardon, Superintendent of Schools of Adams and formerly at East Bridgewater.

A minority report favored retention of Dr. Payson Smith in the position.

Appointment of a new commissioner was expected in State House circles within a few days. Dr. Smith's term having recently expired. Governor James M. Curley has said, however, he had no particular candidate in mind.

The vote of the directors on Reardon's endorsement was 12 to 10 and came after loud and long controversy last night. The Reardon forces were led by John L. Daveren of Milford, while Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury of Melrose, president of the board, fought for a vote advocating retention of Dr. Smith.

The federation claims a membership of 21,000 teachers.

The minority issued a statement terming the vote for Reardon's appointment a "graveyard of the federation." A group called the Reardon vote "stooping to unethical methods to endorse a person for a position not already vacant."

The Governor declined to comment on the federation's endorsement other than to term it "extremely interesting."

Reardon is 36, a Boston College graduate and a Legionnaire. He was graduated from Boston College in 1923, received his master's degree a year later, and studied at Harvard and Boston University.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of the oath bill," Reardon said today. The teachers' oath measure, passed by the recent Legislature, requires all Massachusetts educators to swear allegiance to State and Federal constitutions. It was passed over the objections of many of the State's leading educators and has been a subject of much controversy since its enactment.
KILEY NAMED CLERK AT ADAMS

Succeeds Edward K. McPeck in District Court Position

(Boston, Dec. 18)—Daniel J. Kiley of Adams was today nominated and declared clerk of the Adams District Court. Mr. Kiley who was appointed by Governor Curley and confirmed by the Council will succeed Edward K. McPeck.

The Governor sent to his Council these three important reappointments: Paul G. Kirz, Commissioner of Public Safety, Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Taxation; Payson L. Smith, Commissioner of Education. The Governor stated that if his Council is unwilling to confirm the reappointment of Commissioner Smith he will name James J. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams, to the commissionership. The Governor announced the Commissioner of Correction Arthur P. Lyman had authorized the release of 200 inmates from the State Farm for Christmas. Twenty women now at the Women’s Reformatory at Sherburne will also be released. The State Board of Parole, the Governor said, will release 15 first offenders before Jan. 1. The Governor announced further that late today he will ask his Council to extend clemency to five other prisoners, two of whom are lifers, commuting their sentences which would ordinarily make them eligible for parole.

Action on Governor’s appointment of Howard Haines Murphy of Osterville as State Commissioner of Agriculture was again postponed for another week.

Brady Is “Pensive and Not A Little Pleased” Is Report

Eugene T. Brady, young Democrat who recently issued a statement from Washington where he is employed in the Federal Housing Administration office, demanding that the Governor quit the United States Senate race and withdraw from politics, is getting ready to release another blast. Reports from Washington state that he is returning to Pittsfield Saturday for the Christmas holiday and when he arrives he will have something to say that will “burn them up.”

Brady, the reports state, had promised Washington newspapermen another statement but changed his mind. Instead he was “pensive and not a little pleased at the stir he caused.” Whether Brady will remain in the city long enough to attend the meeting of the Berkshire County League of Young Democrats at the Wendell Hotel, Jan. 8, has not been learned. At that time it is planned to reorganize the league and elect a new president in Brady’s place.

Teachers Endorse Reardon After a Stormy Session

Directors of the State Federation Representing 21,000 Teachers, Recommend He Succeed Dr. Smith

Boston, Dec. 18—By a vote of 12 to 8 last night, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation, representing 21,000 teachers in the state, recommended to Gov. Curley the appointment of James J. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, as commissioner of education to succeed Dr. Payson Smith.

John L. Davoren of Milford, who introduced the resolution favoring Reardon’s appointment, told the other directors that Gov. Curley “expected” their endorsement of him.

A minority report, signed by 10 of the directors, was given out along with the announcement of the resolution. In it these members expressed regret that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board.

That the session was a hectic one was evidenced by the shouting heard in the corridors outside the meeting room in the Ford hall building at 18 Ashburton place.

Davoren charged afterwards that the minority attempted to adjourn the meeting on the minute it was scheduled to convene, but that he and seven others quickly rushed in to defeat it by the narrow margin of eight to seven. Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury, a member of the minority, is president of the board.

Twenty-one of the 26 members of the board were present. In the polling for the resolution one vote was thrown out, making a vote of 12 to 8 in favor of Reardon. The other eight exhibited telegrams after the meeting from two absent directors, who expressed disapproval of Reardon’s appointment, stating that they were the only ones, of his plans concerning the three department chiefs.
Topsfield—May Soon Release Town's Allotment of $16,000 From Governor's Bond Issue for Roads; School Notes

Topsfield, Dec. 18—Topsfield’s allotment of about $16,000 from Gov. Curley’s bond issue for the improvement of farm-to-market roads may be released shortly, according to an announcement from the selectmen. The town fathers have received the project forms back from the state department of public works and expect the work to begin immediately.

The selectmen have drawn up a list of more than a dozen highways most of them little-used, dirt streets which are to be gravelled, straightened, scraped and levelled. Among the roads to undergo the treatment are the old Coppermine Road, Rowley Bridge street, East street, Bare Hill road, North street, Cross street and Hill street.

A number of residents are questioning the wisdom of spending so much money on the back streets, but the town officials point out that the work will provide employment and may induce some householders to build on the sparsely settled ways. Critics of the program answer the argument with the observation that once improved the streets will have to be kept up and that will cost the town a few more thousands annually.

If no more money is spent to maintain roads than in the past, what is the use of repairing them at all? they ask. The improvements contemplated are of a temporary nature and if the highways are not given attention each year they will soon be as bad as they are now,” one taxpayer asserted last night.

The selectmen see in the projects the solution of the town’s employment problem for the winter. With I. P. G. Balentine’s 2000-foot trench excavation to carry a water pipe line to the new state police barracks nearly finished, 15 or 20 men are soon going to be looking for jobs.

When Curley Offers Smith's
Name, Adding Rejection

By Donal F. MacPhiee

BOSTON, Dec. 18--James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Bays, is the new State Commissioner of Education. He became such in a straight party vote of the Executive Council after Gov. Curley's reappointment of Dr. Payson Smith had been rejected, also on a straight party vote.

The three Republican members of the Council, Schuster, Grossman, and Brooks, voted to retain Dr. Smith and also voted against the confirmation of Reardon. Six Democrats voted.
Conference Before Meeting

Prior to the voting on this matter, two odd things occurred. The Governor announced in advance that if his reappointment of Dr. Smith was rejected by the Executive Council, he would name Reardon to succeed him. Prior to the convening of the Council the Democratic members were called into the Governor's office for a secret conference which lasted one and one-half hours.

After disposing of the education appointment, the Executive Council voted unanimously to confirm the Governor's reappointment of Don St. Paul G. Kirk as State Commissioner of Public Safety. Kirk was an Ely appointee and it is understood that the Governor himself and one of his aides preferred to remove him as he has removed all the Ely appointees but that he was faced with terrific pressure from within his own party. Ely, a Coolidge regime. He had been secretary to Gov. Coolidge.

A number of other appointments submitted were confirmed unanimously. The only one affecting the western part of the state was that of Daniel J. Kelly of Adams as clerk of the Adams District Court succeeding Edwin K. McVeck.

School organizations, Parent-Teacher Associations and others that have met here and there throughout the state and discussed the situation had flooded the Governor's office with petitions urging the retention of Dr. Smith. Part Reardon, had also been highly endorsed as the successor to Dr. Smith and it is known that Gov. Curley has been highly impressed with the Adams qualifications. The Governor's declaration that he would appoint Reardon if Smith's appointment failed of approval was considered significant.

The cool session was delayed more than an hour and a half while the Governor had a secret conference with the Democratic members of his advisory body.

The three reappointments were the only major nominations submitted to the Executive Council this afternoon.

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—A staunch supporter of the teachers' oath bill turned down by the House was a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for appointment as State Commissioner of Education.

He is James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams for the past year and before that superintendent at East Bridgewater for 11 years.

Majority Report

A minority report favored retention of Dr. Payson Smith in the position.

Appointment of a new commissioner was expected in State House circles within a few days. Dr. Smith's term having recently expired, Gov. Curley had read, however, had no particular candidate in mind.

The vote of the director on Reardon's indorsement was 12 to 10 and came after loud and long controversy last night. The Reardon forces were led by James D. Laveran of Mifflin, wife of Mrs. George H. Woodbury of Melrose, president of the board, fought for a vote advocating retention of Dr. Smith.

The Federation claims a membership of 31,000 teachers.

The minority issued a statement deeming the vote for Reardon "exploitation of the Federation." The group called the Reardon vote "stooping to unethical methods to induce a person for a position not already vacant."

The governor declined to comment on the Federation's indorsement other than to term it "extremely interesting."

Watt Opposes Reardon

Later, Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor, voted against the Reardon indorsement, saying that Mr. Reardon is quoted correctly in saying that he is 100 per cent for the teachers' oath. Watt said: "That statement alone should disqualify him as Commissioner of Education in Massachusetts."

"Massachusetts was born a place of American Liberty and it should not be made Its graveyard."

"People who believe in the teachers' oath are believers in the Communist method of teaching which is regimenting of school children by the regimentation of their teachers."

"If a man who believes in this form of teaching is appointed the walls of Paneuli Hall will begin to tumble in."

Indorsement now held by Dr. Smith. Pressure has been brought to bear on teachers all over the State to indorse Dr. Smith. and counter charges that Gov. Curley had dictated the move to indorse Mr. Reardon.

The question of Christmas pardons was taken up by Gov. Curley this afternoon with his assistant secretary, John B. Harkins, who handles all the pardons applications. Until he has gone over the last thoroughly, there will be no statement as to the number who will be granted clemency.

APPOINTMENTS NOT ANNOUNCED BY CURLEY

From Our Special Reporter.

Boston, Dec. 17—Gov. Curley declined this afternoon to indicate what appointments, if any, he would submit to the governor's council at its regular weekly meeting tomorrow.

"I haven't had time to consider appointments, with the rush of other work," he explained.

As to Christmas pardon recommendations, the governor said he would complete his consideration of them late today but until then he would have no statement to make as to the number of acts of clemency he would suggest.

GRAND JURY WILL HEAR ABOUT JOB SELLING RACKET

District Attorney Says He Has Considerable Evidence Against Two Men in Boston Case.

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—A grand jury will hear the results of an investigation into a job-selling racket among Boston school teachers. Dist. Atty. William J. Foley said today.

A group of young women substitute teachers were questioned by Foley and his assistants yesterday, and while he declined to discuss the results of the interrogation, Foley said he had "considerable evidence against two men."

The two, Foley said, had been associated with a school committee member during a recent campaign for office.

The substitute teachers questioned by the district attorney had been asked to contribute money on the pretexts they would be given permanent jobs, Foley said.

The district attorney criticized the school committee for giving him information of the "somebody told somebody that something happened type," but indicated he was satisfied with the results of his investigation and said he had enough evidence to go before a grand jury.

The school committee has been investigating the purported scheme for more than a week.

Gov. James M. Curley said he had not planned any official action in the case.

"I have five fights on my hands now," the Governor said jokingly, "and that's enough!"
Common sense should tell any thinking person that in the case of such a highly specialized subject, the legislators should or should not be done. It is possible, nothing less, to note how childish and absurd some legislators can be over certain subjects about which they know nothing. They wish to create the impression of knowing it all but succeed in making themselves a laughing stock.

Massachusetts, too, might well have had an extra few weeks of grouse shooting this fall, had the Division of Fisheries and Game authority to order it.

It is like some disgruntled Hampshire County sportsmen who have written Gov. Curley asking that he remove Director Kenney from office just because the latter had the temerity to remove the warden from that district in order to get better efficiency with the personnel. Both Kenney and Chief Warden Carl Bates have given adequate and sensible explanations of this action and such criticism is decidedly misguided and petty.

Motorist asks INSURANCE

William Brissette of Feeding Hills has filed in superior Court an application for an order to the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company to reinstate insurance for a motor vehicle owned by him which was cancelled. A hearing was given by the Board of Appeal on Motor Vehicle Liability Policies and Bonds, on Nov. 25 and this board ordered that the cancellation be affirmed as of Dec. 15. Atty. Jacob Richmond appears for the appellant.

Sensible and adequate explanations of the malady will spread to the younger does has been expressed. However, deer affected by this trouble are not unfit to eat or order it.

In presenting the checks, Gov. Curley scored the law which fixes a maximum of $1000 as the fee for defending men and women in capital cases, comparing it to the salary of the mayor of Boston, which is $20,000.

"Atty Harvey is not a well-to-do man," the governor said, "but he has a heart as big as the building in which we are now assembled. To bring a little happiness into the hearts of those who have been saddened he has turned over this check to you to relieve your suffering."

"I feel deeply for all of you," Atty Harvey said, after the checks had been presented. "It has helped me in turning over this fee to attempt to perform my duty as a lawyer and a citizen of the commonwealth. Tragedies come to all of us, but we all must be soldiers. And I want you to know that each of you have my deepest sympathy."

Teachers Are Astonished By Federation Vote

Wakefield teachers, and probably many others in the state read with astonishment, this morning, that the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation Board of Directors, by a vote of 12 to 8, recommended to Gov. Curley the appointment of James G. Reardon as commissioner of education to succeed Dr. Payson E. Smith. Mr. Reardon is superintendent of schools in Adams.

A minority report signed by ten of the directors expressed "regret that the 21,000 teachers in Massachusetts had been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of the majority of the board."

The following is a copy of a letter sent to Gov. Curley in behalf of Commissioner Payson E. Smith by the Wakefield Teachers' Club and follows a similar appeal by the Wakefield School Committee voted unanimously two weeks ago:

December 18, 1935.

Hon. James M. Curley
Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Boston, Massachusetts
Honorable and dear sir:

You have by your acts and speeches during your remarkable political career endorsed public school education. You have been emphatic in your denunciation of those who would impair our great educational structure.

Won't you believe that the educators of this state have only the welfare of our children at heart when they plead with you to retain our Commissioner of Education in office?

Won't you believe us when we insist that a political appointment now, even though you may consider such an appointment justifiable, will provoke serious repercussions that will inevitably threaten the stability of our whole educational system?

The Wakefield Teachers' Club have gone on record as favoring the retention of Dr. Payson Smith as Commissioner of Education, believing in his leadership, and sincerely hope that you will re-appoint him to that office.

Very respectfully yours,

Wakefield Teachers' Club

HAS NO PLAN TO RETIRE JUDGES

Governor Curley definitely set at rest last night rumors which have been in circulation for the past few weeks to the effect that he intended to seek the retirement of three of the older justices of the Supreme Court.

The story in circulation indicated that unless the justices tendered their resignations he would ask the executive council to vote to continue their removal under a provision of the constitution which some legal lights have interpreted as giving him the authority to force retirement.

"I have heard nothing of any such move," said the Governor. "I have not asked, directly or indirectly, for the resignations of any justice of the Supreme Court, and I do not contemplate any action looking to their retirement."

Very respectfully yours,

Curley Moves to Pardon “Firebug”

Gardner of Worcester, of 10 to 12 years in State Prison for the burning of All Saints’ Church, Worcester, in 1932, be commuted to four to 12 years, which would make Gardner immediately eligible for parole.

Gardner was sentenced to from 10 to 12 years in State Prison for three counts of incendiarism, one of them them burning of All Saints’ Church, Worcester where there was fire loss of four hundred thousand dollars. Gardner had no other criminal record.

Gardner’s case came up before the Governor today with clemency petitions of five persons, recommended to the Governor’s Council this afternoon by Governor Curley.

During the time that Gardner was at large, Worcester was terrorized with thoughts of impending fires, following the All Saints’ Church fire on Jan. 20, 1932. He was apprehended on Jan. 25.

Six counts of burning or attempted burning were brought against Gardner. He was found guilty on five of them, the attempted burnings at two dwellings in the Pleasant street area near the church, and fires at the Pleasant Street Baptist Church, All Saints’ Church and the All Saints’ vestry. For these crimes he was sentenced to from 10 to 12 years in State Prison by Judge Raoul H. Boudreau in Superior Court, on Feb. 27, 1932.

In addition to this the Governor said that two hundred inmates will be released from Bridgewater State Farm, twenty women from Sherborn Reformatory and fifteen first offenders from the Concord Reformatory.

The recommendation of the Governor for commutation of several sentences to make prisoners eligible for parole were referred to the Pardons Committee of the Council.

The following recommendations are made by the Governor on lifers, with the commutations recommended making them eligible for parole.

Samuel Powers, of Westfield, life sentence in Hampden Superior Court, Feb. 20, 1911, for wife murder—commutation to 20-year sentence.

Joel intersecto, of Salem, life sentence in Essex Superior Court for murder of Mary Alvoie, sentenced April 20, 1920—Commutation to 20 years recommended with understanding the man will be deported to Poland.

William Hooper of Lynn, six to seven-year sentence in Essex Superior Court, March 24, 1923—Recommendation that sentence be commuted to from three to seven years.

The Governor said that the release of 200 inmates of the State Farm had been authorized by Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman and that practically all the men were there for drunkenness. The commissioner also authorized the Sherborn releases.

Those at Concord were ordered by the State Board of Parole, the Governor said, with 14 more first offenders due for release before Jan. 31.
LOCAL FIREBUG MAY BE FREED
Curley to Ask Commutation of Gardner's Term

Firebug Had Been Convicted of Setting Fire to All Saints Church and to a Number of Other Buildings

(Special to The Post)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, Dec. 18.—Gov. James M. Curley announced today that he will recommend to the Executive Council a commutation of sentence for Henry A. Gardner of Worcester, who was sentenced in 1932 to serve from 10 to 12 years in state prison for arson.

Gardner was convicted for setting fire to All Saints Church, Worcester, and to a number of apartment buildings in the Pleasant, West and Fruit Street sections of that city.

His conviction followed about a week of trial before a jury. The case was one of the most sensational tried in several years. Gardner kept Worcester terrorized because of the numerous fires he was convicted to be responsible for several weeks.

Many of the fires were early morning blazes and they were generally kindled in back hallways, in cellars or under front porches.

Gardner's acts at setting fires were particularly aimed, it seemed, to put apartment dwellers in a frenzy.

The sentence was imposed by Judge Raoul Beaudreu of Marlboro.

Gardner's home was at 3 West Street and police claimed that he confessed to dodging into some of the places that he fired as he was about to go to his home to go to bed. Most of the fires were close to the West Street address, and when the blazes were discovered, it was felt by police that Gardner, from a vantage point in his home, would watch the apparatus pass, and then go out himself to witness the firemen put out the fires.

Tried on Five Counts

He was tried on five counts. These charged that he set fire not only to All Saints Church, but to Pleasant Street Baptist Church, where it was claimed he gained entrance through a window before setting the blaze; the home of James Carroll, in Fruit Street, where a fire was set on a board walk near two range oil drums, and the home of the Rev. Joseph Rogers at 13 Ashland Street. The Rev. Mr. Rogers was assistant rector at All Saints.

Gardner was questioned the whole of one night by the detectives. Finally he is alleged to have confessed.

Gardner told the police that he set many of the fires while he was drinking heavily. He said that just before the All Saints Church fire he had been drinking heavily for two weeks.

Gardner was prosecuted by Edwin G. Norman, then district attorney. Defense counsel were the late Charles F. Campbell and Miss Catherine W. O'Connor.

When the jury, on a Saturday afternoon, returned the verdict of guilty, the presiding judge set bail at $25,000 for Gardner to await sentence which was pronounced the following Saturday, Feb. 27.

It is a coincidence that at about the time Gardner, who was 29 years old, when he was arrested, is to be released the All Saints Church which has been built to replace the one Gardner fired is just being completed.
Lieut. Gov. Hurley Joins Republicans Again in Ballot on Reappointment Proposed by Governor

COL. KIRK AND LONG RETURNED TO OFFICES

By CLINTON P. ROWE, Gazette State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education since 1916, was ousted this afternoon, but not until after Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River had broken for a second time with Governor Curley on the confirmation of a major appointment in the sweeping shakeup the Governor has made in important jobs under his appointive power and Council control. James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams, was then appointed and confirmed as Dr. Smith's successor.

The Smith reappointment, submitted by the Governor with every indication that he anticipated its rejection, was turned down by a five to four vote. The Lieutenant Governor, who recently voted to retain Civil Service Comr. James M. Hurley of Marlboro, voted with the three Republicans to confirm the Smith appointment.

With the Smith reappointment rejected, the Governor, as he had said he would in event of rejection, sent in the name of Reardon.

The Reardon appointment was confirmed on a straight 6 to 3 party vote, with the Lieutenant Governor this time voting for the Governor's appointment.

The Governor reappointed and the Council confirmed by unanimous vote Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk and Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long.
The action of the Lieutenant Governor, the second time he bucked his party chief, was regarded as significant in view of the fact that he is an avowed candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, having made his announcement shortly after Governor Curley said he would be a candidate for the United States senatorial nomination.

Ends Long Fight

The commissioner of education appointment has been a wrestling match for weeks, with the Massachusetts school superintendent hotly protesting Smith's replacement and making a state-wide campaign against it. Officials of the Massachusetts Federation of Teachers last night endorsed Reardon. Today Governor Curley spent fifteen minutes with Supt. Patrick T. Campbell of the Boston School Department in what he said was a social call. This was prior to the council meeting. Campbell had been mentioned as a candidate for the position.

James G. Reardon Is Confirmed as Education Head

Surprise Action Follows Rejection of Dr. Payson Smith for Post

OTHERS CONFIRMED

Paul G. Kirk and Henry F. Long Also Given Council O. K.

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (P)—In a surprise move, the Executive Council on a straight party vote rejected the re-appointment of Dr. Payson Smith as commissioner of education, and then confirmed James G. Reardon, Adams school superintendent, for the post.

Reardon's name was submitted by Gov. James M. Curley after the six Democratic councillors voted against Smith's reappointment.

Paul G. Kirk, 31-year-old commissioner of public safety, was confirmed unanimously for reappointment by the council. Both confirmations were returned under suspension of rules.

The Governor also reappointed Henry F. Long as commissioner of corporations and taxation for a three-year term.

The other terms are for five years.

Reardon, a Legionnaire and staunch advocate of the Massachusetts Teachers' Oath Law, was endorsed last night by a majority of the directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation for the position.

The new education commissioner is 36 years old and is a Boston College graduate. He served as superintendent of schools in East Bridgewater for 11 years prior to going to Adams.

Reardon also announced he favored a method of certifying all teachers in the state to insure qualified persons being employed in the schools.

Dr. Smith had served as commissioner of education since 1916.

Reardon's annual salary as commissioner is $6000.

He resides in Newton.

His annual salary is $6000.

Long, a Topsfield resident who served as private secretary to the late Calvin Coolidge when he was governor, has been in public service for many years.

His position calls for a salary of $7500.

Gov. Curley also appointed Daniel J. Riley, Adams, as clerk of the Adams District Court, succeeding Edwin K. McPeck.

Patrick W. Hehir of this city or Raymond J. Kenney of Belmont, present director, are the two leading candidates.
CURLEY CLUBS IN LIMELIGHT AGAIN
O'Toole and Mrs. Sharry Both Organizing

By Telegram State House Reporter

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—The multiplicity of Curley for Governor clubs which shattered the peace of Worcester Democracy a few months ago and led to a hectic State House hearing was back in the political picture tonight. They were the same old groups, apparently. All engrossed for the moment in Christmas pardons, appointments, his scrap with Mayor Mansfield, the Governor received a call from Mrs. Anna A. Sherry of Worcester, heading a delegation. Mrs. Sherry, the Governor said, asked authority to organize a Curley for Senator club in Worcester.

"I advised her to use her own judgment," the Governor said.

Maurice V. O'Toole, now an alderman-elect in Worcester, learning of Mrs. Sherry's visit, expressed some surprise. Mr. O'Toole said that he was organizing Curley for Senator clubs and had already organized one. He was operating, he said, by authority of the Governor himself. "I am glad to see that Mrs. Sherry is following my advice and is trying to form a Curley Senatorial organization," said Mr. O'Toole, choosing his words with apparent care.

Mrs. Sherry was identified with one of the factions several months ago when the row began over use of the Curley for Governor club designation in Worcester. Mr. O'Toole was active in still another faction.

The group with which Mr. O'Toole is identified emerged incorporated as the James M. Curley S-1 Club. The other was the Curley for Governor Club and the fight over who could use the Curley name and who used it first was given a neat Solomonesque touch.

Today Mr. O'Toole said the Senatorial Club he has organized is still the James M. Curley S-1 Club. The S, he said, means Senator and has really meant Senator right along. At the time of incorporation it was supposed to represent the registration number of the Governor's official automobile.
SPORTSMEN AWAIT ACTION ON DIRECTOR
Expect Curley to Name Fish, Game Head Today

After several disappointments on recent Wednesdays because Governor James M. Curley did not send a nomination for director of the Division of Fisheries and Game to the Governor's Council, sportsmen are again hopeful today.

In this city and vicinity the choice is expected to be either P. W. Hehir of this city or the present incumbent, Raymond J. Kenney of Belmont. Mr. Hehir's stock has advanced rapidly in recent days on account of the support of sportsmen's clubs in various sections of the state to which he has been frequently invited. Enthusiastic meetings in Pittsfield and Lenox Monday night added to his candidacy.

On the other hand information came to Worcester yesterday that Director Kenney and some of his intimate friends have carried on a chain system, sending out many letters; throughout the state in which the recipient was urged not only to write to Governor Curley favoring his candidacy, but also to write to two other acquaintances asking them to write an endorsement and pass the chain along.

Governor Curley has had every candidate in his office in the last few days, according to reports which reached this city yesterday.

CURLEY URGES MOVE FOR REFUND ON BEDS
Wants Probe of Hospital Sale to Boston

By Telegram State House Reporter
BOSTON, Dec. 17.—Governor Curley today asked the Boston Finance Commission to move for a $225 refund on beds which he claimed were sold by Massachusetts General Hospital to the city and also to investigate the conditions surrounding the transaction.

It was regarded as another phase in his row with Mayor Mansfield. The Governor said the beds had evidently been condemned and asserted that the $4 paid for each bed should have been about 25 cents.

Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, former head of Massachusetts General Hospital and now Boston Institutions Commissioner, said the Long Island Hospital stood in acute need of beds and that there was a surplus at the Massachusetts General. He said the beds would have been a bargain at $15, that they will last 100 years and that the city saved money on the deal.

Curley Plans Holiday Paroles and Pardons

BOSTON, Dec. 18 (P)—Plans for Christmas and New Year paroles or pardons for 254 inmates of prisons, reformatories and the State Farm were announced by Gov. James M. Curley today. Two life term prisoners and 20 women reformatory inmates were included in the list.

Curley announced Arthur T. Lyman, commissioner of correction, had authorized the release of 200 inmates of the State Farm for Christmas. Virtually all prisoners at the State Farm were committed for drunkenness.

The correction commissioner, he said, planned similarly to release 20 women from the women's reformatory at Sherborn.

The State Board of Parole, the Governor said, would release 15 first offenders from the Concord Reformatory and he said 14 more would be released before Jan. 31.

The Governor announced he was recommending to the Executive Council clemency to five prisoners serving terms for offenses ranging from murder to arson. Two of them are lifers.

James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams, today was appointed and confirmed as state commissioner of education at the executive council after the executive council had rejected Governor Curley’s reappointment of Dr. Payson Smith.

President of Public Safety Kirk was sworn in by Gov. Curley at 3 p.m.

Henry F. Long as reappointed commissioner of taxation and corporations, and unanimously confirmed.

Notified of his appointment by the Boston Evening American Reardon at his home in Adams inquired how the vote of the council was registered. He expressed gratification when informed it was along party lines. He remarked:

"There is nothing that I can say at present except that I feel highly honored by appointment to such an important office. I am leaving for Boston at once."

SMITH NAME SENT

Governor Curley first sent Dr. Smith’s name into the council for reappointment as education commissioner, the post over which a vigorous contest has been waged, with much speculation, for many weeks.

In sending in this reappointment, the Governor announced that if the council rejected it, he would appoint Reardon, who was indorsed last night by the Massachusetts Teachers Federation.

The council rejected Dr. Smith, 5-4, Lieutenant Governor Joseph L. Hurley voting with the three Republican members to confirm. It was the second time in three weeks Hurley has broken away from the Democratic majority.

Reardon was confirmed by a 6-3 vote when the lieutenant-governor swung back with the Democrats who defeated Dr. Smith.

Reardon’s appointment is for a five-year term at $6000 a year.

VICTORY FOR OATH

The ousting of Dr. Smith and the appointment of Reardon were considered for proponents of the teachers’ oath law. Dr. Smith opposed this legislation while Reardon is an enthusiastic supporter of it.

Discussing developments after the council meeting, Governor Curley indicated he was aware what the result of Dr. Smith’s reappointment would be before submitting his name, for he said:

"The council voted on the question of Dr. Smith’s appointment and he was rejected. Mr. Reardon’s name was submitted and he was approved. They have the votes.

"I conferred with the Democratic members of the council concerning Dr. Smith’s appointment before the council session, and with the exception of the lieutenant-governor they were all opposed to Dr. Smith."

Colonel Kirk, who has been safety commissioner and head of the State police since the resignation of General Daniel Needham during the Ely administration, was reappointed for a five-year term at $6000 a year.

Theodore A. Glyn, clerk of Roxbury court, had been prominently mentioned for the post.

LONG REAPPOINTED

Commissioner Long, one-time secretary to Calvin Coolidge, was reappointed to the post of tax commissioner for three years at $7500. His reappointment was less of a surprise than the others.

No action was announced by the governor at the time with relation to Arthur T. Lyman, hold-over commissioner of correction, George J. Cronin, purchasing agent whose term has also expired and Raymond J. Kenney, hold-over fish and game commissioner.

The governor also reappointed Albert Ward of Canton, as clerk of the Stoughton court, and appointed Daniel J. Kiley, of Adams, as clerk of the Adams court to succeed Edwin E. McPeck.

The council tabled for the third successive week the appointment of Howard H. Murphy, of Osterville, to be commissioner of agriculture.

Frank H. Peterson, Medford, was reappointed pilot commissioner, as was Orville S. Pinkham of Watertown. John Sullivan, Fall River, was appointed deputy pilot commissioner in place of D. Gardner O’Keefe of Taunton, James E. McQuade, of New Bedford, was appointed deputy pilot commissioner in place of Manuel P. Marshall.

PETERSON RENAMED

Daniel Lucey, of Maiden, was appointed public administrator in place of Nicholas A. Loumos.

Andrew D. Guthrie, of Medford, was named associate medical examiner in second Middlesex, in place of F. W. Gay, of Maiden.

Arthur J. O’Neill, Quincy, was named stenographer on the governor’s staff.

All these appointments were confirmed.

The council confirmed the governor’s earlier appointment of Augustine J. Lawrence as a member of the board of registration in pharmacy, to succeed William Hardy, Fall River.

JAMES G. REARDON

APPROVE ASSESSORS

The council approved appointment by Tax Commissioner Long of three deputy income assessors, Festus M. Plaheety, of Boston, Frederick T. Openshaw, Fall River, and John F. Kelley, Medford. Openshaw is state head of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

There will be a special meeting of the council next Monday noon.

The council may act on Murphy today.

Final action on Howard Haynes Murphy as commissioner of agriculture may be taken by the council.
THE SENATOR SAYS:

‘Bill’ Foley a Bit Peeved—But Look Out If He Digs!

School Report Will Go to Grand Jury; Richardson And G. O. P. to Part

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The Senator is carrying a little black bag when he comes in, but he is too fast for Timmy when he sets it on the bar.

"No, Timmy," says The Senator. "There are no teachers' jobs in the little black bag."

The Senator says he will have a straight rye to be quickly followed by a small ale, and that no doubt the boys will have the same. It is easy to see he is very quick on the recovery today like Governor Curley on a Mansfield fumble.

"No," says The Senator. "Confidentially, and I would not want it go any further, what I have in the little black bag is one of those 100-year-old, hand-forged, wrought-iron beds which Doc Washburn has bought from the Massachusetts General to rest the weary bones of the aged poor on Long Island. The Doc says these are so strong they can be thrown out of a window without damaging them. Now, I do not know that this is being generally done on Long Island, but I am going to make the test at home."

"When do you expect to be indicted in this affair of the schoolma'ams, Senator?" asks Timmy.

"I am not guilty," says The Senator, "and if District Attorney Bill can shake any indictments out of what the school committee has handed him he is a better shaker than you are, Timmy. District Attorney Bill could not indict his own worst enemy on what the committee has tossed at him and he is not very happy about it. So, having waited a week in expectation of something that wasn't forthcoming, he will now go out and do a little digging on his own. It will not surprise me if several persons the papers will call prominent are tossed into the grand jury room in this matter, and you may see the grand jury making a public report, which is an extremely efficacious means of..."
PROBE URGED OF BED SALE

A probe by the Boston Finance Commission into the purchase of beds from the Massachusetts General Hospital by Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, city institutions commissioner, was demanded by Governor Curley.

The Governor charged that the beds were too old for use by the residents of the “poor” section of Long Island. Dr. Washburn, expressing surprise at the action by the governor, said that the beds were purchased in two lots, one at $4 each and the latest at $25 cents.

They were really extraordinary beds. They were made over a hundred years ago and are just as good today as they ever were. They are blacksmith-forged wrought iron beds made in a single piece. You could drop them out a window and not hurt them any.”

Big Money Raiser

“Well, Timmy, never mind. Maybe it is a small pixie or a little brownie, or something. I will buy myself another.”

So the Senator buys himself another and he is keeping a very steady eye on it while he continues:

“We were talking about Johnny Richardson. He is a big money raiser which counts for a lot of points when they total up the score, but there is some talk of replacing him and in this connection I have heard the name of Mayor Sinclair Weeks, of Newton.

“Sinclair had planned to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, but I guess the results of the Newton election have held this up because the Newton majority did not add anything to Sinclair’s prestige. Much to the pleasure of Tom White, Sinclair’s candidate, General Dan Needham, received a very bad pasting. And now they are saying that Sinclair may get the national committee man’s job instead of the nomination for Senator.

“Senator, interrupting Timmy.

“Yes, Timmy,” says the Senator.

“What are you doing, Senator?” asks Timmy.

“Senator,” says Timmy, “you are snatching your own drink.”

Then we all see that the Senator is setting down his empty glass very slyly, and he must have been snatching his own drinks while he was talking.

“Timmy,” says the Senator, laughing, “you are right. I wonder who would catch on. It is just a little trick I have learned which sometimes puts me one or two ahead of the boys when I am buying. Set ’em up for the boys.”

“Well,” says Timmy, “it is a very good trick and I hope you are doing it in two sections, because while you are snatching your own drink somebody has snatched your little black bag with the bed in it.”

(Perhaps the black bag didn’t contain iron beds and perhaps he’ll worry about its loss. Or, perhaps he’ll just go on in his garrulous, gossipy way. We shall see in tomorrow’s Boston Evening American.)

CURLEY PARDONED FOR 2 LIFERS

Governor Curley today recommended to the council that it commute the sentences of five inmates of state penal institutions, two of whom are lifers, that they might be eligible for parole.

The two lifers are Samuel Powers, of Westfield, sentenced to life imprisonment in 1914 for the murder of his wife; and Wojciech Biczak, sentenced to life in 1920 for attack and battery with attempt to murder Mary B. Labole.

With a spirit of optimism and confidence, Governor Curley revealed that 223 inmates of state institutions would be released for Christmas.

According to the announcement, the number includes 200 inmates of the State Farm, 20 women from Sherborn reformatory, and 12 first offenders at Concord.

Reardon's Approval Voted

ENDORSED 12-8 BY TEACHERS

Governor Curley is expected to receive the resolution, signed by a majority of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, today, favoring appointment of James G. Reardon to succeed Dr. Payson Smith as commissioner of education.

Although the governor has stated he did not anticipate appointment of a successor to Dr. Smith in the immediate future, he commented on the federation's action as "extremely interesting."

Reardon, Boston College graduate and now superintendent of schools in Adams, is a staunch supporter of the Teachers' Oath law and one who believes there has not been enough action on it to date.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of the law. I do not believe that Communism and Socialism should be spread among our school children and teachers who spread this type of propaganda should be driven from our schools," Reardon said.

Would Certify

He also favors a method of certifying all teachers in the state to assure that only qualified persons shall teach in the state schools.

He expressed pleasure at the action of the directors when informed of the resolution at his home last night.

The passage of the resolution came after one of the most hectic sessions ever held by the board.

John L. Davoren of Milford introduced the resolution favoring the appointment of Reardon.

Opponents of Reardon signed a minority report in which they regretted the fact that 21,000 teachers in Massachusetts were placed in an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board.

The resolution was passed 12-8 with 21 out of the 26 directors present. One vote was thrown out.
REARDON SUCCEEDS SMITH IN STATE EDUCATION COUNCIL REJECTS NAME OF LATTER

Kirk and Long Are Reappointed By Curley and Confirmed

James G. Reardon, 36-year-old superintendent of schools in Adams, today was confirmed as commissioner of education to succeed Dr Payson Smith, who had held the post since 1916.

Gov. Curley first submitted Smith's name to his Executive Council, and as soon as it had been rejected by the Council, he submitted Reardon's name.

Under suspension of the rules Reardon was immediately confirmed. The Council also confirmed the reappointments of Paul G. Kirk as commissioner of public safety and Henry F. Long as commissioner of corporations and taxation.

Assured of Rejection

The Governor obviously submitted Smith's name for reappointment as Commissioner of Education only after he had received assurance from the Democratic majority in the Council that the nomination would be rejected.

A lengthy Democratic caucus in the Governor's office preceded the Governor's smiling announcement just before the delayed Council meeting began that he intended to submit Smith's name for reappointment.

"If, however, the Council should not take favorable action on Dr Smith," the Governor said, still smiling, "I shall submit the name of James G. Reardon."

Vote on Party Lines

Everything turned out as the Governor had hinted. On a straight party vote, the Democrats rejected Smith's appointment. The Republican Councilors, Joseph Grossman of Quincy, Frank Brooks of Watertown, and Win. Asfield A. Schuster of East Douglas, all voted in favor of Smith. The Democratic members, Lieut. Gov. Joseph Hurley, and Councilors Coskley, Burdick, Brennan, Hennessey, and Russell all voted against confirmation. The reappointments of Paul G. Kirk as Commissioner of Public Safety was unanimously confirmed by the Council.

Endorsed by Federation

Reardon last night received the endorsement of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation to receive the post of Commissioner of Education.

Kirk, an appointee of Ex-Gov Ely, has established an excellent record for himself as head of the State Police and his appointment for a five-year term is certain to be welcome news to the men in the State Police organization.

Tax Commissioner Long was appointed to his post by Calvin Coolidge while he was Governor of the commonwealth and has been reappointed by Republican and Democratic Governors since then.

He has been in office since Dec 1, 1919, and has won a nationwide reputation as a tax expert.

The council session, scheduled for noon, was delayed more than an hour and a half while the Democratic members of the council were in conference in the Governor's office regarding the appointments to be submitted today.

Gov. Curley said he had not made up his mind with regard to the reappointment or replacement of Arthur T.
Commissioner of Education.

submitted the reappointment of Albert Ward as Clerk of the District Court of Southern Norfolk at Stoughton.

Campbell, superintendent of schools, today conferred with Gov Curley for investigation in Boston, Patrick T. Cronin as Commissioner of Correction, Raymond J. Kenney as director of the Division of Fisheries and Game, of Maj George J. Cronin as state purchasing agent. The terms of the first two expired on Dec 1 while Cronin’s term expired Dec 15.

In addition to the major appointments, Gov Curley also submitted the appointment of Daniel J. Kiley as Clerk of the Adams District Court to succeed Edwin M. McPeck. He also submitted the reappointment of Albert Ward as Clerk of the Adams District Court.

REARDON A GRADUATE OF BOSTON COLLEGE

James G. Reardon, Massachusetts’ new Commissioner of Education, was born in Medway, where his parents, Mr and Mrs William H. Reardon, are now living. He prepared at the schools there for Boston College, where he was an honor student and a member of the varsity football squad.

Reardon was graduated from Boston College in 1923, received his Master’s Degree there a year later, and has studied at Harvard and Boston University.

He has been superintendent at Adams for one year, going there after serving in the same capacity at East Bridgewater for eight years. He also taught at the high school in East Bridgewater for a year, and was principal of the school for a year.

While teaching at East Bridgewater Mr. Reardon married Anita Thordurik, daughter of the late Judge Herbert G. Thordurik. They have four children, Cynthia Ann, 7, James G. Jr, 5, Susan, 3, and Rose Mary, 1.

BOSTON SCHOOL HEAD CONFLICTS WITH CURLEY

Disclaiming the visit had anything to do with the present school investigation in Boston, Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of schools, today conferred with Gov Curley for about 15 minutes. The call was described as a social one.

There was no information forthcoming at the executive department as to whether the conference had to do with the appointment of a State Commissioner of Education.

WATT OPPOSITES REARDON FOR EDUCATION POST

Robert W. Watt, secretary and treasurer of the State Federation of Labor and member of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, issued a strong stand against the appointment of James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools in Adams, as commissioner of education today because, the latter is said to be behind the teachers’ oath law.

Mr. Watt is quoted correctly in saying that he is 100% for the oath law,” Watt said, “that statement alone should disqualify him as commissioner of education in Massachusetts.

REARDON BACKED FOR SMITH JOB

Federation Board Urges Choice of Adams Man

Curley Expected to Name B. C. Grad to Education Post

James G. Reardon, Adams superintendent of schools, who has been reported Gov Curley’s choice to succeed Dr Payson Smith as commissioner of education, was in-
Smith Previously Commended

The meeting last night was called after the board had been split into two camps, after Mrs Woodbury publicly placed the federation in favor of Dr Smith. Fourteen of them, they stated last night, sent personal letters to the Governor urging the appointment of Reardon and objecting to the reappointment of Dr Smith.

On Dec 14, five members—Martin F. O’Connor, Miss H. Casey, John L. Davern, Miss Cutler, and Miss McDonald—requested a special meeting of the board for the expressed purpose of inquiring into the position that is not already vacant.

As a result of this meeting and as a result of electioneering on the part of certain members of the board, James J. Reardon was indered.

“We, the undersigned, do protest with the members of the Massachusetts Teachers’ Federation to think that we have stopped to such unethical methods as to induce a person for a position that is not already vacant. We did not vote to inder James G. Reardon for the office of commissioner of education and regret exceedingly that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have not been placed in an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board.”

Reardon Born in Medway

Mr Reardon was born in Medway, where his parents, Mr and Mrs William H. Reardon are now living. He prepared at the schools there for Boston College, where he was an honor student and a member of the varsity football squad.

While teaching at East Bridgewater, he married Anita Thordike, daughter of the late Judge Herbert C. Thordike. They have four children, Cynthia Ann, 7, James G. Jr, 5, Susan, 3, and Rose Mary, 1.

Burgess and Ruth D. Marr, was issued immediately after the meeting. It read: “We all groups affiliated with the Massachusetts Teachers’ Federation:

‘Whereas, the president and secretary of the Massachusetts Teachers’ Federation purporting to represent 21,000 members recently indered the reappointment of Payson Smith as Commissioner of Education, and

‘Whereas, the teachers of the Commonwealth are vitally interested in the appointment of a Commissioner who will best serve the interest of education in this State, therefore be it

Resolved, that this board of directors record itself as recommending the appointment of Supt James G. Reardon of Adams, Mass, as the Commissioner of Education.

Dean Has Told Friends Idea Is “Fantastic”

Gleason L. Archer, dean of Suffolk Law School, last night issued a statement denying he is a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. He stated he experienced amusement at reports of his candidacy and had told “my friends who have urged me to enter the race” that the idea (of his being a candidate) is “fantastic.”

The statement, in part, read: “I am not a politician and have no political affiliations. To be sure, I made one radio speech for Gov Curley last year, because I regarded him as one of the ablest men in public life today.

“In order to scotch this rumor of my candidacy, let me state quite frankly that I hold political views that would be highly unpopular in the present state of demoralized Democracy.

“For instance, I believe that this nation has learned its lesson in that it is high time to abandon the alphabet and to take up a serious study of the United States Constitution, with a view to a speedy return from European policies to our former constitutional government. This idea would be a fatal handicap to any Governor on the Democratic ticket.

“Let me further harpoon my own alleged candidacy. I am strongly opposed to legalized gambling, whether of racing or lotteries, because history teaches that when a state becomes a partner with the underworld in debauching its own citizens it is headed for disaster.

“I am opposed to the Townsend Plan or any other visionary scheme for living the life of Riley without earning my living, or any other any other scheme for the deserving poor but the old-fashioned Poorhouse for those who believe that the world owes them a living whether or not they ever contributed anything but misdeeds to a long suffering society.

“I hold the more unpopular views for I am a Jeffersonian Democrat who believes that individual responsibility of the citizen and individual responsibility of sovereign states is the true basis of our national greatness.

“I am not a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts and certainly not for a mud-slinging campaign for nomination.”

HEAP BIG HELP

$5.50 Bill Now $4000, So Thanks a Lot

Prof John J. Murray of Boston University, Gov Curley brain truster and Associate Commissioner of Labor and Industries, got the Indians with him. Yesterday he received the following illuminating communication from an expatriate Oklahoma Cherokee, now residing in Massachusetts:

“Sir, When a Public officer do something good for all the poor people I can help from telling him about what good he did.

“When you start after electric trust about steps on the volt, my bill was $5.50. Now it is down to $4000. Thak to you. I am an American Indian of Cherokee tribe from there. Indians never forget that for you.

“Yours, White Eagle, Indian name.”

Boston, Mass.
Gov. James M. Curley announced today that Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman had recommended the release of 200 inmates of the State Farm as an act of Christmas clemency. Nearly all of the 200 were committed for drunkenness. The Commissioner, the Governor said, will also release 20 women inmates of Sherborn Reformatory.

The State Board of Parole, the Governor announced, will release 15 first offenders now inmates of the Concord Reformatory and 14 other first offenders will be released between Dec. 30 and Jan. 31.

The governor said he would recommend to the Executive Council today that clemency be extended to five other prisoners, two of them lifers, by commuting their sentences so as to make them eligible for parole.

Only one of the five prisoners on the Governor's Christmas list is at present an inmate of the State Prison. He is Samuel Powers of Westfield, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in Hampden Superior Court on Feb. 20, 1914, for the murder of his wife. In his case the Council will be asked to commute his sentence to 20 years, which, since he has already served more than that, will bring about his immediate release.

The other lifer to benefit by Christmas clemency is Wojciech Birusz of Salem who was sentenced in Essex Superior Court on April 20, 1920, to serve a life sentence for the murder of Mary B. Lavoie. In his case the Governor will ask the Council to commute his sentence to one of 20 years with the understanding that he will be deported to Poland as soon as he is paroled.

The other three concerned in the Governor's recommendations for clemency are:

William Hooper of Lynn, sentenced in Essex Superior Court, March 24, 1933, to serve six to seven years for manslaughter. The Governor will recommend that his sentence be commuted to one of from three to seven years.

Henry A. Gardner of Worcester, who was sentenced in Worcester Superior Court, Feb. 27, 1932, to serve 10 to 12 years for burning a building. In his case the Governor will recommend that this sentence be commuted to one of from four to 12 years.

Thomas J. Parenetta of Cambridge, who was sentenced in Middlesex Superior Court, on June 19, 1929, to serve 12 to 20 years for manslaughter. He was convicted of shooting Dominic Somerelli. In his case the Governor will recommend that the sentence be commuted to one of seven to 20 years.

Senator Charles T. Daly of Medford filed a bill in the State Senate yesterday for construction of a dam across the Mystic River between Somerville and Everett, near the Boston & Maine railroad bridge.

A bill providing for the widening of the state highway from Salisbury Beach to the New Hampshire line, along route 1A, was filed by Senator Charles A. F. McAree of Haverhill.

Representative Barnet of New Bedford filed a bill to compel insurance companies to supply property damage, extra territorial and guest coverage to persons considered good risks for compulsory auto insurance. Barnet said that it had come to his attention that such extra coverage had been refused by insurance companies after the state Board of Appeal on motor vehicle insurance had ordered them to cover applicants on compulsory policies.

A resolve filed by Representative Thomas E. Barry of East Boston, calls for a special commission to make a comprehensive plan for improvement and development of the terminal facilities and piers of Metropolitan Boston.

The commission would consist of seven persons appointed by the Governor with authority to study steamship facilities, including piers, to determine ways and means of increasing their efficiency by complete reconstruction.

Under the bill, the commission would consider the advisability of creating a commission to act as a holding company of all waterfront property rights and to regulate and control the use of property by its owners.

Robert M. Washburn in Brief Comment on Curley-Mansfield Row

Robert M. Washburn, president of the Roosevelt (Theodore) Club and unsuccessful candidate for the U. S. Senate against Senator David L. Walsh, took a fling at Gov Curley today when he gave out the following brief statement:

"The Governor has asked the Mayor of Boston to resign, and proposes, if he can, to oust him. The Governor forgets that the driver of a coal cart cannot qualify as an expert on kalsomining."

Gov Curley has received a letter of congratulation on his announcement of his candidacy for the Senate from Whitfield Tuck, prominent local Democrat and member of the Massachusetts Ballot Commission. HARVEY’S FEE DIVIDED AMONG FOUR WIDOWS

The $1000 fee paid by the state to George Stanley Harvey for defending Murton and Irving Millen, executed bank bandits and murderers, was equally divided by Gov. Curley yesterday between the widows of four men slain by the Millens.

The distribution, made at Harvey’s request, gave $250 each to Mrs. Helen C. Haddock and Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Needham, widows of the two policemen shot down during the robbery of the Needham Trust; Mrs. Grace Sumner of Lynn, widow of the billposter shot during a theatre hold-up; and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg whose husband, a sporting goods salesman, was murdered when he refused to give the Millens and Abe Faber the keys to his store.

Teachers' Body Favors J. G. Reardon For Successor to Dr. Payson Smith

Federation Board Votes 12 to 8 to Recommend Him to Curley

MINORITY MAKES WARM PROTEST

By a vote of 12 to 8, last night, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation, representing 21,000 teachers in the state recommended to Gov. Curley the appointment of James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, as commissioner of education to succeed Dr. Payson Smith.

John L. Davoren of Milford, who introduced the resolution favoring Reardon's appointment, told the other directors that Gov. Curley "expected" their endorsement of him.

A minority report, signed by 10 of the directors, was given out along with the announcement of the resolution. In it these members expressed "regret that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board."

That the session was a hectic one was evidenced by the shouting heard in the corridors outside the meeting room in the Ford Hall building at 15 Ashburton place.

Davoren charged afterwards that the minority attempted to adjourn the meeting on the minute it was scheduled to convene, but that he and seven others quickly rushed into defeat it by the narrow margin of eight to seven. Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury, a member of the minority, is president of the board.

Twenty-one of the 26 members of the board were present. In the polling for the resolution one vote was thrown out, making a vote of 12 to 1 in favor of Reardon. The other eight exhibited telegrams after the meeting from two absent directors who expressed disapproval of Reardon. A

TEXT OF RESOLUTION

The resolution adopted read:

"Whereas, the president and secretary of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation purporting to represent 21,000 members recently endorsed the re-appointment of Payson Smith as commissioner of education, and whereas the teachers of the commonwealth are vitally interested in the appointment of a commissioner who will best serve the interest of education in this state, therefore be it resolved:

"That this board of directors record itself as recommending the appointment of Supt. James G. Reardon of Adams, Massachusetts, as commissioner of education, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary without delay to his excellency, James M. Curley, Governor of the commonwealth."

The minority report was addressed to all groups affiliated with the Federation. It read:

"The undersigned, believing that the Massachusetts Teachers Federation is being exploited, and believing that the vast majority of the 21,000 teachers in Massachusetts are against such exploitation, hereby submit the following facts to be designated as a minority report.

"On Nov. 16, 1935, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation in meeting assembled adopted a resolution which expressed commendation and appreciation of Dr. Payson Smith's services as commissioner of education, which resolution was presented to Gov. Curley personally by a committee made up of Mrs. Woodbury, Martin P. O'Connor, Annie C. Woodward, Harry A. Boyle, Miss McDonald and Dwight S. Davis."

SPECIAL MEETING

"On Dec. 14 a request in writing was received, signed by five members, calling for a special meeting of the board of directors for the purpose of taking action on the endorsement of a candidate for the position of commissioner of education. This request was signed by Martin F. O'Connor, Martin H. Casey, John L. Davoren, Miss Cutler and Miss McDonald.

"As a result of this meeting and as a result of electioneering on the part of certain members of the board, James G. Reardon was endorsed."

"We, the undersigned, do not wish the members of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation to think that we have stooped to such unethical methods as to endorse a person for a position that is not already vacant. We do not vote to endorse James G. Reardon for the office of commissioner of education and regret exceedingly that the 21,000 teachers of Massachusetts have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board."

DEFFENDS CITY'S BED PURCHASES
Dr. Washburn Surprised
At Criticism by Governor Curley
BOUGHT FOR POOR AT LONG ISLAND

Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, city of Boston institutions commissioner, expressed surprise last night that Gov. Curley should criticize his purchase of 88 beds for use by indigent persons living in the "Institution" section of Long Island.

In a letter to E. Mark Sullivan, chairman of the Boston finance commission, the Governor previously had termed the purchase "reprehensible" and asked that an investigation be made into "the entire transaction."

He explained that a year ago the "Institution" at Long Island stood in acute need of beds and that having been at one time director of the Massachusetts General, he knew of the 100-year-old beds being replaced, and arranged to buy 60 of them at $4 each.

"In that instance, in October of last year," he said, "I needed the beds and they set the price. Then two months ago the hospital people approached me and said they needed the space where some more of those beds were being stored in the hospital, and they asked me what I would pay for them. I offered to take 25 at 25 cents each and they accepted my offer.

"It was an altogether different situation from the first case, where I was in the market for beds and they were in a position to set a price.
At either price, whether $4 or 25 cents, the beds were a darned good bargain for the city. New beds would cost the city $15 apiece."

Chairman Sullivan said last night that the investigation requested by Gov. Curley would begin at once.
"We'll start tomorrow," he said.

SALEM MAYOR HITS LAVISH SPENDING
Says Towns Must Shun Lead Set by Curley

SALEM, Dec. 17—If cities and towns do not work together, listen to words of advice, keep their eyes open and avoid such political expenditures as Gov. Curley's $13,000,- 000 bond issue, they will be in a worse mess than they are now, declared Mayor George J. Bates at the annual meeting of the Essex County Association of Assessors at the Hotel
Hawthorne today.

He said the municipalities would have been better off if the money had been allotted to them by direct grant for relief purposes. He condemned constant borrowing for current expenditures.

Henry F. Long, tax commissioner, painted a bleak future for relief from the tax burden. The problems, he said, grew increasingly difficult, while the cities and towns might ultimately increase revenues the greater capacity to pay would be offset by the greater capacity to absorb.

The following were unanimously chosen officers of the association:
President, Clarence B. Humphreys of Swampscott; vice-president, Frank A. Rogers of Gloucester; secretary, David H. Easch of Lynn; treasurer, Herbert Ballard of Marblehead; execu-

State House Briefs

BY HENRY EHRLICH

Abolition of capital punishment in Massachusetts will again be sought of the Legislature. The bill, which is filed each year by the Massachusetts Society for Abolition of the Death Penalty, has never met with the legislators' favor, but the Legislature almost adopted last year a measure to permit juries in first degree murder cases to render verdicts of guilty with recommendations for mercy. This will likewise be sought again this year.

Signing the petition for complete abolition were Herbert Parsons, president of the society; Miriam Van Waters, superintendent of the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn; Corn duPont of Cambridge; Gertrude L. Winslow of Newton; H. K. Estabrook of Chestnut Hill; Francis H. Russell of Arlington; Sara R. Ehrmann of Brookline; and Katherine B. Codman, Cornelius A. Parker, Frances Hayward, the Rev. Spence Burton and George S. Fiske of Boston.

The Massachusetts Safety Council has moved from 6 Beacon street to 80 Federal street, in the Boston Chamber of Commerce building, General John H. Sherburne, president, announced yesterday.

Dividend payments of $860,000 will be made, beginning today, to depositors in the closed Highland Trust Company of Somerville, the Lowell Trust Company and the Western Massachusetts Trust Company of Springfield. It was announced yesterday at the office of Henry H. Pierce, state banking commissioner. During the current month, dividends to depositors in various closed state banks will be in excess of $2,052,000.

The present dividend will complete payments to savings depositors in the Lowell bank. Depositors in the savings department of the Springfield bank and 9000 commercial depositors have already been paid in full, so that the present distribution will equal 10 per cent. of the remaining claims. A 10 per cent dividend will be paid Somerville depositors, bringing their share of receipts to date up to 70 per cent.

The annual two-day session of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association will be held Jan. 3 and 4 in the Gardner auditorium of the State House, John W. Heselton, president, announced yesterday. The association's legislative program will be under discussion.

Eugene M. McSweeney, Boston police commissioner, made a "purely social call" on Thomas H. Green, state civil service commissioner, yesterday. While both commissioners paid particular stress on the social nature of the call, it was noted that the civil service department has not yet rendered a ruling on McSweeney's request for a freer hand in the appointment of his police captains.

Gov. Curley has referred to Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever the petition for a commutation of the sentence of Miller F. Clark, who has been condemned to die the week of Jan. 12 for the murder of Ethel Zuckerman. "There will be nothing done," the Governor said, "until he has made a complete investigation and report."

Mrs. Anna Sharry, representing the Worcester Curley Club, called on the Governor yesterday for authorization to establish in Worcester a Curley-for-Senator Club. The Governor asked Mrs. Sharry to "use your own judgment."

Gov. Curley left the State House early yesterday in the company of his assistant secretary, John H. Backus. Ostensibly the purpose of the conference with Backus centered on Christmas party applications, which will be submitted to the council today. "With the rush of other work," the Governor said before he left, "I have had no time to think of appointments."

The state alcoholic beverage control commission has taken under consideration the appeal of Joseph DiPrimo, Cambridge tavern owner, whose liquor license was revoked by the superior court on the ground that the premises were improperly conducted.

Frank W. Osborne, former advisor to the Fall River finance board, has been named director of research of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations. It was announced yesterday. Osborne will assume his duties at the first of the year. A Harvard graduate, he has studied at Oxford and is a former member of the Legislature.

Bills and petitions are still crowding in. Senator Charles F. Daly of Medford filed one yesterday calling for the construction of a dam across the Mystic river between Somerville and Everett near the Somerville and Maine railroad bridge. Senator Charles A. P. McAree of Haverhill is still anxious to have the state widen the state highway running from Salisbury Beach Center to the New Hampshire line.

Representative Thomas E. Barry of East Boston wants the creation of a special commission "to make a comprehensive plan for the improvement and development of terminal facilities and piers of Metropolitan Boston."

Representative Philip Barnet of New Bedford filed a bill to compel insurance companies to insure a complainant for property damage, extra-territorial coverage, or guest coverage after the state board of appeal on motor vehicle insurance has ordered the company to cover the complainant on compulsory automobile insurance.

NO CONSIDERATION GIVEN TO BELISLE

Organization Is Split Wide Open by Arguments

In a bitter fight that divided the ranks of the 21,000 school teachers of the State who are members of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, a majority of the board of directors of that organization last night endorsed James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, for the post of commissioner of education, now occupied by Dr. Smith, who seeks reappointment, it was claimed by the majority group.

And at the executive meeting held by the board of directors of the teachers' organization behind closed doors at Ford Hall, a dozen skirmishes between the opposing factions left the minority faction led by Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury, teacher in the Roosevelt School, at Melrose, and president of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, scattered on speaking terms with the faction led by John L. Davoren, president of the Teachers' Civic League of Massachusetts, and leader of the fight for Mr. Reardon.

According to members of the majority group, the endorsement of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation was asked by Governor Curley for Reardon, but several days prior to the meeting of the executive board Mrs. Woodbury wrote a letter to the directors stating that on Nov. 16 a resolution adopted by the directors favoring the appointment of Dr. Smith had been given to Governor Curley and that she had learned that certain of the directors had personally communicated with the Governor and expressed themselves as opposed to Dr. Smith, in contradiction of the resolution.

Try to Adjourn

A special meeting of the board of directors representing the teachers in every county in the State was called for last night. Mr. Davoren, speaking for the supporters of Reardon, charged after the meeting that the majority group had tried to forestall an endorsement of Reardon by adjourning the meeting, which started at 7 o'clock last night, an instant after it had been called to order.

When the meeting was ended, after heated debate and considerable table pounding, the majority group led by Davoren passed out a resolution endorsing Reardon, as follows: 'The president and secretary of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, purporting to represent 21,000 members, recently endorsed the reappointment of Payson Smith as Commissioner of Education. The teachers of the Commonwealth are vitally interested in the appointment of a commissioner who will best serve the interest of education. Therefore, be it resolved, that this board of directors record itself as recommending the appointment of Superintendent James G. Reardon of Adams, Mass., as the Commissioner of Education.'

A statement was immediately issued by the opposing group terning the vote for Reardon a 'plot of the Federation of Education, defending the endorsement of Dr. Smith presented to Governor Curley Nov. 16, and calling the vote for Reardon a show of 'such unseemly methods to endorse a person for a position not already vacant.'

The minority report was signed by 10 directors as to endorse a person for a position which would he merely a personal opinion, as opposed to him or in favor of some other candidate, I am mistaken. The most that I could say would be that I still think the endorsement of a great majority of our 21,000 members favors reappointment; which would be merely a personal opinion.'

GOVERNOR PLANS NO OFFICIAL ACTION

Governor Curley, when questioned about the Boston school teachers' situation last night, stated that he does not plan any official action.

"I have five fights now, that's enough," the Governor jokingly stated. He explained that the probe does not come under his jurisdiction.

BED SALES TO CITY GET CURLEYIRE

Denouncing the transaction as "reprehensible," Gov. Curley demanded yesterday an investigation by the Boston Finance Commission of a wide difference in prices of two sets of second-hand iron beds sold to the city of Boston by the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The Governor said he presumed the purchase was on the theory that "anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor," which was not to be countenanced.

He demanded that the hospital refund $225 to the city. This demand was based on the price details of the two sales. The sales were confirmed in a letter received by the Governor's office from Dr. Nathaniel Faxon, director of Massachusetts General Hospital, who was appointed to that post last February, between the two sales. Dr. Faxon's letter, written in response to telephone inquiry from the Governor's office, recited the two sales as:

Oct. 1934—Hospital sold to the Boston department of supplies 250 iron beds at $1 apiece, with a cartage-to-wharf charge of $1 on every bed.

Oct. 1935—Hospital sold to the Boston institutions department "of these beds" at 25 cents apiece, transportation being arranged by the city.

The difference in price, on 60 beds, would amount to $225, the amount the Governor says should be refunded. In his letter yesterday to Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Finance Commission the Governor wrote:

"I beg to forward herewith communication received this day (Dr. Faxon's letter) with reference to a most unusual transaction by the former head of the Mass. General Hospital.

"The departure from the established custom of buying new materials and the purchasing in this case of second-hand materials that evidently had been condemned, I presume on the theory that anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor, should not be countenanced.

"The real reprehensible feature, outside of the unloading of materials that should have been scrapped upon the institutions of the city of Boston, lies in the fact that a charge of $4 was made per bed, or a total of $340, for the same character of beds that were sold for 25 cents.

"It is clearly the duty of the Finance Commission to require a refund to the city of Boston of $225, which represents the difference in charge for beds that were sold on two different occasions, and it is likewise, in my opinion, the duty of the Finance Commission not only to demand a refund, but to investigate the conditions surrounding the entire transaction."
Gov. James M. Curley yesterday, at the State House, gave $250 each to victims' widows from the $1,000 counsel fee of Atty. George Stanley Harvey, counsel for the Millen brothers. L. to r., Gov. Curley, Atty. Harvey, Mrs. Mary McLeod, Mrs. Helen Haddock, Mrs. Grace Sumner, and Mrs. Marion Clark, whose husbands were victims of the Millen-Faber gang.

HARVEY'S FEE IS PRESENTED BY GOV. CURLEY

The four widows of the victims of the Millen brothers and Abe Faber yesterday received equal shares of the $1,000 fee paid by the State to Attorney George Stanley Harvey for defending Murton and Irving Millen.

Governor Curley distributed checks for $250 each to Mrs. Helen C. Haddock of Needham, Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Needham, Mrs. Grace Sumner of Lynn, and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg.

"Atty. Harvey," said the governor in making the presentation at the State House, "is not a well-to-do man, but he has a heart as big as the building in which we are now assembled. To bring a little happiness into the hearts of those who have been saddened, he has turned over this check to you to relieve your sufferings." He denounced the law which fixes a maximum $1000 fee for defending persons in capital cases who have no funds.

"I feel deeply for all of you," Atty. Harvey said after the check had been presented. "It has helped me in turning over this fee to attempt to perform my duty as a lawyer and a citizen of the Commonwealth. Tragedies come to all of us, but we all must be soldiers, and I want you to know that each of you have my deepest sympathy."

FILE PETITION TO SAVE CLARK

A petition asking commutation to life imprisonment of the death sentence of Miller F. Clark, condemned to die in the electric chair the week of January 12 for the murder of Ethel Zakerman, has been referred to Atty.-Gen. Paul A. Dever, Governor Curley announced yesterday.

The petition was submitted to the governor Monday by Atty. George A. Douglas, representing Clark. A complete investigation will be made by the attorney-general, it was announced.

Governor, in Rapid Fire Move, Then Submits Name of Adams Superintendent

The Governor, in a rapid fire move, today submitted the nomination of James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, for reappointment, but the council immediately rejected the nomination.

The governor then promptly submitted the nomination of Henry F. Long, superintendent of schools of Adams, and his appointment was confirmed by the council by an unanimous vote.

Following the council session it was announced by Governor Curley that Commissioner Smith's reappointment was rejected by a vote of 6 to 4, Lieutenant Governor Joseph L. Hurley voting with the three Republicans for the retention of Smith.

On confirmation of Reardon it was a straight party vote, 6 to 3.

Several weeks ago he voted for the retention of former Civil Service Commissioner James M. Hurley and voted against Governor Curley's nomination of Thomas H. Green.

The council was unanimous in confirming the reappointment of Lieutenant Colonel Paul G. Kirk as State commissioner of public safety.

The reappointment of Henry F. Long as State commissioner of corporations and taxation was also confirmed by the council by an unanimous vote.

The salary of the new commissioner of education will be $9000 a year and the term is for five years.

The salary of Commissioner Long, head of the department of Corporations and Taxation, is $7500, and his term is for three years.

Lieutenant Colonel Kirk is reappointed for a five-year term at a salary of $6000.

The Governor submitted the following nominations, which were confirmed under suspension of the rules:

- The Governor's appointment of Augustine J. Lawlor of Lawrence as a member of the State Board of Registration in Pharmacy, to succeed William Hardy of Fall River, was confirmed without a record vote.
- Dr. Smith was elected Commissioner of Education by the State Board of Education in 1916 during his term of former Governor Samuel H. McCall. When the State departments later were reorganized, the appointment of the commissioner was given to the governor and council.

Scheduled to convene at noon, the council session was delayed for more than an hour and a half while the governor conferred with Democratic councilors.

Reardon was graduated from Boston College in 1925, received his master's degree there a year later, and studied at Harvard and Boston University.

The Governor's appointment of Dr. Payson Smith was ousted today as State Commissioner of Education.

Governor Curley submitted to the Executive Council the nomination of Dr. Smith for reappointment, but the council immediately rejected the nomination.

The governor then promptly submitted the nomination of James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, and his appointment was confirmed by the council by an unanimous vote.

Following the council session it was announced by Governor Curley that Commissioner Smith's reappointment was rejected by a vote of 6 to 4, Lieutenant Governor Joseph L. Hurley voting with the three Republicans for the retention of Smith.

On confirmation of Reardon it was a straight party vote, 6 to 3.

This is the second time since the governor has taken office that the lieutenant governor has voted with the Republican members.
Hints Bagmen Ran Racket in School Books

Foley Learns of Attempt to Get Percentage on Sale by Publishers

Investigation into the reputed sale of contracts to graduates of the Boston Teachers College turned today to scrutiny of contracts said to be made with bookbinders and publishers.

At the same time it was announced that District Attorney William J. Foley would present to the grand jury in January evidence indicating that attempts were made to sell jobs to teachers on behalf of an alleged "bag-man." Spokesmen for the district attorney's office said they were certain indictments would follow the grand jury hearing.

Mr. Foley said that he had hints that the same bagmen who had allegedly attempted to swindle substitute teachers out of $50 each in return for a guarantee to "freeze" the teachers appointment list, had been making a racket of the purchase of books and supplies by the department.

Mr. Foley said he understood that bagmen obtained advice from purchasing agents of the department as to what books and supplies were needed, and the names of the firms who were to get the contracts. The bagmen then went to the firms and offered to see that contracts were awarded them, for a percentage of the profits.

Frederick T. Doyle and Garrett H. Byrne, assistant district attorneys who have been assigned to the investigation, were closeted today for more than four hours with Alexander Sullivan, purchasing agent of the school department, and J. Burke Sullivan, corporation counsel for the city of Boston.

It has been established, Mr. Foley said, that Mary Brennan, substitute teacher who was to have been the "goat" of the bagmen, refused to have anything more to do with the scheme when she found she would have to resort to criminal acts to obtain her appointment.

Dealing with his call nothing to do with the teachers, investigation, Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of Boston schools, today conferred with Governor Curley for fifteen minutes.

Many in Prison to Be Released for Christmas

Curley Authorizes Discharge of 200 from State Farm — Urges Clemency for 2 Lifers

Governor Curley announced this afternoon that Correction Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman has authorized the release for Christmas of 200 inmates of the State Farm at Bridgewater.

Practically all of the inmates were committed to the institution for drunkenness.

Commissioner Lyman also plans to release twenty women from the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn.

The State Board of Parole, the governor said, will release fifteen first offenders at the Concord Reformatory and fourteen others before January 31.

The governor said that he will ask the Executive Council today to extend clemency to five other prisoners, two of them lifers, by commuting their sentences which ordinarily would make them eligible for parole.

The lifers are Samuel Powers of Westfield, sentenced in Hampden Superior Court Feb. 20, 1934, for the murder of Emma plus; and Wojciech Birus of Salem, sentenced in Essex Superior Court April 20, 1921, for murder of Mary H. Lavoie. In the case of Powers the Council will be asked to commute his sentence to one of twenty years, and in the case of Birus the governor is asking his sentence to be commuted to twenty years, with the understanding that he will be deported to Poland, his birthplace.

The other three named in the governor's recommendation for clemency are William Hooper of Lynn, sentenced in Essex Superior Court March 24, 1933, to six to seven years for manslaughter. The governor recommends that his sentence be commuted to from three to seven years.

Henry A. Gardner of Worcester, sentenced in Worcester Superior Court, Feb. 27, 1933, to serve ten to twelve years for burning a building. The governor recommends that his sentence be commuted to from four to twelve years.

Thomas J. Panetta of Cambridge, sentenced in Middlesex Superior Court March 15, 1933, to serve twelve to twenty years for manslaughter. The governor recommends that sentence be commuted to seven to twenty years.

Curley Wants $225 Refund on Iron Beds

Calls on Finance Commission to Investigate Purchase from Mass. Gen. Hospital

Governor James M. Curley yesterday requested E. Mark Sullivan, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, to investigate the purchase by the city of Boston, of second-hand beds from the Massachusetts General Hospital, and to take steps to obtain a refund of $225 to the city from the hospital.

"I beg to forward herewith a communication received this day with reference to a most unusual transaction by the former head of the Massachusetts General Hospital," the governor wrote to the Finance Commission chairman. "The departure from the established custom of buying new material and the purchasing, in this case, of second-hand material that evidently had been condemned, I presume on the theory that anything is good enough for the poorest of the poor, should not be countenanced. The reprehensible feature, outside of the unloading of materials that should have been scrapped, upon the institutions of the city of Boston, lies in the fact that a charge of $14 was made per bed, or a total of $240, for the same character of beds that were later sold for twenty-five cents to the institutions department.

"It is clearly the duty of the Finance Commission to require a refund be made to the city of Boston of $225, which represents the difference in the charge for the beds that were sold upon two different occasions, and it is likewise, in my opinion, the duty of the Finance Commission not only to demand a refund but to investigate the condition surrounding the entire transaction."

The governor sent his letter to Chairman Sullivan after he had received information from Dr. N. W. Faxon, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital, advising him that, in October, 1934, the hospital sold to the supply department of the city, sixty iron beds at $4 each, and arranged for the carriage of the beds at a charge of $1 each. In October, 1935, the hospital officially reported, twenty-five additional beds were sold to the city institutions at twenty-five cents each.

Fee of Millens' Counsel Goes to Widows

Governor Presents Checks of $250 Each

George Stanley Harvey, Attorney for Irving and Murton Millen, Who Were Electrocuted Last Spring, Presented His Fee to Widows of the Victims Who Were Killed by the Gunfire of the Millens and Their Cohort, Abraham Faber. Left to Right: Governor James M. Curley, Mr. Harvey, Mrs. Mary McLeod, Mrs. Helen Haddock, Mrs. Grace Sumner and Mrs. Marion Clark.

The $1000 fee allowed by the State to George Stanley Harvey for his services in defense of the Millen brothers was divided equally yesterday by Governor Curley among the widows of the four men slain by the Millen-Faber gang. Mr. Harvey contributed the sum last week, with the request that the governor distribute it among the families of the victims. The governor presented $250 each to Mrs. Helen C. Haddock and Mrs. Margaret McLeod, both of Needham; Mrs. Grace Sumner of Lynn and Mrs. Marion Clark of Fitchburg.

In presenting the money, the governor said: "Attorney Harvey is not a well-to-do man, but he has a heart as big as the building in which we are now assembled. To bring a little happiness into the hearts of those who have been saddened, he has turned over this check to you, to relieve your suffering."

The governor took occasion to criticize the law which establishes $1000 as the maximum fee for a lawyer appointed to represent a defendant in a capital case in this State, and compared it to the law which fixes a compensation of the governor at $10,000 a year as compared with $20,000 for the mayor of Boston. Harvey, who was present during the presentation of the fund, expressed his deepest sympathy to the four women.
Symphony Plays in Stockbridge Next Summer

Berkshire Festival Adopts Plan for Three Concerts Under Koussevitzky

Special to the Transcript:

New York, Dec. 17.—The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, meeting here this afternoon, unanimously approved the project to bring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for three concerts in Hancock Farm, Stockbridge, Mass., next August.

Acceptance by the trustees of the plan was based on the enthusiastic response expressed in many new memberships in the Festival Association, the sale of concert tickets to date, and on the announcement of the project a few weeks ago. The acceptance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, already tentative, was made formal with the receipt of a letter from Dr. Koussevitzky, who will conduct all three concerts.

This will constitute his first professional appearance in America, during the summer since he was first engaged as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the season of 1924-25. Hitherto he has regularly spent his summers in Europe.

Dr. Koussevitzky has just applied to the New York City Board of Health for his first United States citizenship papers and intends to reside here permanently.

The festival will be held in the summer of 1925.

Dr. Koussevitzky is the conductor of the Boston Symphony, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for music, and internationally known as the leading conductor of his day.

It was a pleasure to see the possibility to realize a plan which had occurred to me many times since I came to America in 1924. I had often felt that there would be a great interest in a festival here since so many Americans have been willing to travel so far to hear good music in the summer time.

Former invitations to conduct here in the summer I have declined because there always seemed to be something which stood in the way of realizing the finest results, always there was some compromise to be made. But the Berkshire plan impressed me favorably at once. Its central location in a great scenic playground of New England, and yet not inaccessible to our own Boston or to the large neighboring cities of Springfield, Hartford, Albany, and New York, is in itself attractive; but most of all I am interested in the ideals of the Berkshire Symphonic Association and in having a program of the first order by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the reputation of which is established throughout the entire musical world.

Dr. Washburn Surprised

Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, city of Boston institutions commissioner, expressed surprise last night that Gov. Curley should criticize his purchase of 85 beds for use by indigent persons living in the “Institution” section of Long Island.

In a letter to E. Mark Sullivan, chairman of the Boston finance commission, the Governor previously had condemned the transaction, saying that he was in the market for beds and they set the price. Then he explained that a year ago the “Institution” at Long Island stood in acute need of beds and that having been at one time director of the Massachusetts General, he knew of the 100-year-old beds being replaced, and arranged to buy 60 of them at $4 each.

He explained that a year ago the “Institution” at Long Island stood in acute need of beds and that having been at one time director of the Massachusetts General, he knew of the 100-year-old beds being replaced, and arranged to buy 60 of them at $4 each.

"In that instance, in October of last year," he said, "I needed the beds and they set the price. Then I went to the hospital people and said I needed them and they asked me what I would pay for them. I offered to take 25 at 25 cents each and they accepted the offer.

“It was an altogether different situation from the first case, where I was in the market for beds and they were in a position to set a price. At either price, whether $4 or 25 cents each, the beds were a darned good bargain for the city. New beds would cost the city $15 apiece.”

DR. SMITH OUTSTED, REARDON GETS POST
BY GOV. CURLEY

Dr. Payson Smith was dropped as state commissioner of education and his place given to James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools at Adams today.

In less than 15 minutes Smith's renomination had been submitted by Gov. Curley to his council, had been rejected, 5 to 4; Reardon's nomination to succeed Smith submitted and Reardon's nomination confirmed under suspension of the rules by the lineup of 6 to 3.

The outcome was expected by the State House reporters because after a private conference lasting more than one hour with the Democratic councillors the Governor emerged and told the reporters that he would reappoint Smith—but that if Smith should be rejected he would then name Reardon.

Dr. Smith was elected commissioner of education by the state board of education in 1896 during the term of Gov. Samuel H. McCall. When the state departments were later reorganized in 1919 the appointment of the commissioner of education was given to the governor and Smith has been reappointed each time the term expired.

The Governor today nominated Henry F. Long of Topfield to be state commissioner of taxation and Lieut.-Col. Paul G. Kirk of Newton to be commissioner of public safety. Both were unanimously confirmed under suspension of the rules.

The term of the commissioner of public safety is five years and the salary $7,500 a year.

The term of the commissioner of education is three years and the salary $6,000 a year.

Action on the appointments today's session game under suspension of the rules, as ordinarily they would have to go over for seven days.

The Governor took no action on various other major appointments but he submitted a long list of minor appointments and these were all confirmed under suspension of the rules.

The council today put over for another week any action on the appointment of Howard Haines Murphy to be commissioner of agriculture. The nomination, to succeed Edgar L. Gillett, was submitted by the Governor several weeks ago.

Dr. Smith is 100 per cent. for the teachers' oath, that statement should not be made its graveyard. People who believe in the teachers' oath are believed in this community method of teaching, which is regimenting of school children by the regimentation of their school teachers. If a man who believes in that form of teaching is appointed the walls of Faneuil Hall will begin to tumble in.

The indication, meanwhile, was that an attempt would be made to get an expression from the rank and file of the teachers throughout the state on the endorsement given Reardon by the board of directors.

The vote on the board was 12 to 8 with two other members sending in dissenting votes by telegram. The resolution recommending Reardon's appointment by Gov. Curley was passed by this margin, in spite of a resolution passed by the board a month ago indorsing Dr. Smith.

The minority report also charged that Reardon's endorsement was due to "electioneering on the part of certain members of the board.

Plunkett, a Republican friendly to Gov. Curley, called on the Governor today, protested against the appointment of Reardon and urged the retention of Dr. Smith.

Secretary Watt's statement came from the endorsement of Reardon announced yesterday by the directors of the teachers' federation reverbated across the state.

"Massachusetts was the birthplace of American liberty and it should not be made its graveyard. People who believe in the teachers' oath are believed in the community method of teaching, which is regimenting of school children by the regimentation of their school teachers. If a man who believes in that form of teaching is appointed the walls of Faneuil Hall will begin to tumble in."

Mrs. Grace I. Woodbury of Melrose, president of the board, led the opposition to the resolution. Other signs of the minority report were Anice C. Woodward, William J. Sanders, N. Elliott Willis, John C. Davis, Arthur P. Irving, Lillian M. McLeod, Russell Marshall, Joseph R. Burgess and Ruth D. Marr.
The entrance of Gov. James M. Curley into the grand ball room of the Copley-Plaza while his picture and words of greeting taken only a few moments before were flashed on a screen by a newsreel cameraman, was a feature of the testimonial dinner to John E. "Jake" Coolidge, veteran New England newsreel cameraman, last night. "Al" Richard, editor of Paramount News, shared testimonial honors with Coolidge as another pioneer in the newsreel industry. Both were hailed as pioneers in their fields. The audience and speakers consisted principally of men prominent in the field of motion picture taking and producing.

Among the guests at the head table were Gov. Curley, Gov. Louis Brann of Maine, Charles F. Hurley, state treasurer; Joseph Maynard, collector of the port; Joseph A. McGrath, member of the city council and chairman of the Democratic state committee; Clinton Coolidge, William Reynolds, comptroller of the state of Maine; W. P. Montague, Jr., of New York, and Austin Keough. Linus Travers was toastmaster.

Mrs. Langone Heads Women Arranging Charity Party

Mrs. Joseph A. Langone, Jr., heads a committee of the women's division of the Democratic state committee to direct the charity turkey bridge and whist party in the Hotel Bellevue, Friday evening. Among the aids of Mrs. Langone are Miss Grace L. Flynn of Brighton, Mrs. Edward J. Devaney of West Roxbury, Mrs. G. Frank McDonald of Jamaica Plain, Mrs. William F. Madden of Roxbury, T. Charles Quinn of Dorchester, Mrs. Nicholas Argenta and Mrs. Charles Zamarro of Worcester, Mrs. Lawrence K. Kelley of Tewksbury, Mrs. Joseph Leverone of Somerville, Mrs. Louis Di Prett of Revere, Miss Mary Gallo of East Boston, Mrs. Stephen O'Meara of Jamaica Plain and Mrs. James Bacigalupo of Boston.

Gov. Curley heads the large list of prominent Democrats who have donated a turkey as a prize at the party, at which an attendance of at least 500 has been assured Mrs. Langone.
Teachers Federation at Odds Over Action on Payson Smith

Reverberations of the action of the board of directors of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation in endorsing James G. Reardon, superintendent of schools of Adams, as successor to Dr. Payson Smith as commissioner of education, resounded among members of the organization in the state this week.

By a vote of 12 to 8, with two other members voting by telephone, the directors last night passed a resolution recommending to Gov. Curley the appointment of Reardon. This was on a vote of a resolution adopted by the board last month opposing Dr. Smith.

Hugh Nixon, secretary of the organization, said today that the matter was considered as far as the association was concerned, as much as the organization is a corporation, and the directors have full power.

There were indications, however, that units of the association throughout the state might be asked by the minority to hold meetings and express their sentiments by resolution, thus testing the majority vote of the directors endorsing Reardon.

The resolution adopted last night was introduced by John L. Davoer of Milford who informed the other members of Massachusetts Teachers Federation that he had been asked why the organization was not endorsing Reardon.

In a minority report, signed by 10 directors, the dissenting members expressed regret that 21,000 members of Massachusetts Teachers Federation have not endorsed the reappointment of Payson Smith as commissioner of education and whereas the teachers of the commonwealth are vitally interested in the appointment of the commissioner who will best serve the interest of education in this state, therefore be it resolved:

That this board of directors recommend itself as recommending the appointment of Superintendent James G. Reardon, as commissioner of education, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary without delay to his excellency, James M. Curley, Governor of the commonwealth.

The minority report was addressed to all groups affiliated with the federation.

SPECIAL MEETING

"On Dec. 14 a request in writing was received, signed by five members, calling for a special meeting of the board of directors for the purpose of taking action on the endorsement of a candidate for the position of commissioner of education.

This request was signed by Martin F. O'Connell, Martin H. Casey, John L. Davoer, Miss Cutter and Miss McDonnell."

"As a result of this meeting and as a result of electioneering on the part of certain members of the organization, James G. Reardon was endorsed."

"We, the undersigned, do not wish the members of the Massachusetts Teachers Federation to think that we have stooped to such unethical methods as to incite a person for a position that is already vacant.

We do not vote to endorse James Reardon for the office of commissioner of education and exceedingly that the 21,000 teachers of the commonwealth have been placed in such an unfavorable light by the action of a majority of the board."

"It was signed by Mrs. Woodbury, Annie C. Woodward, William J. Sanders, N. Elliott Willis, John C. Davis, Arthur P. Irving, Lillian C. McBride, Russell Marshall, Joseph R. Burgess and Ruth D. Marr."
