Revisions, 1983-84

Academic Honesty (Page 14)

The College of the Holy Cross is committed to creating an intellectual community in which both faculty and students participate in the free and uncompromising pursuit of truth. This is possible only in an atmosphere of mutual trust where the discovery and communication of truth are marked by scrupulous, unqualified honesty. Any violation of academic integrity wounds the whole community and undermines the trust upon which the communication of knowledge and truth depend. The principal violations of academic integrity are cheating, plagiarism, and collusion.

Cheating is the use or attempted use of unauthorized aids in any exam or other academic exercise submitted for evaluation. This includes data falsification, the fabrication of data or deceitful alteration of collected data included in a report.

Plagiarism is the deliberate act of taking the words, ideas, data, illustrative material, or statements of someone else, without full and proper acknowledgment, and presenting them as one's own.

Collusion is assisting or attempting to assist another student in an act of academic dishonesty.

Faculty Responsibility. At the beginning of each course the teacher should address the students on academic integrity and how it applies to the assignments for the course. The teacher should also make every effort, through vigilance and through the nature of the assignments, to discourage and prevent dishonesty in any form.

Student Responsibility. It is the responsibility of the student, independent of the faculty member's responsibility, to familiarize himself/herself with the details of how plagiarism is to be avoided, and the proper forms for quoting, summarizing, and paraphrasing, presented in standard handbooks, for example, "Avoiding Plagiarism," The Little Brown Handbook, pages 482-486, and Harbrace College Handbook, page 372.

Enforcement. The faculty member who suspects academic dishonesty, in either an exam or other written work, should confront the student with the evidence which may include his/her observation of the student's behavior during a test, the presentation of published material on which plagiarized material is based, and/or the analysis of the style and content of the student's purported work.

The very nature of the faculty-student relationship requires both that the faculty member treat the student fairly and that the student respond to the teacher's questions concerning the integrity of his/her work.

If the teacher determines that the student is guilty of academic dishonesty he/she shall administer a zero for that assignment and report the incident in writing to the Chair of the department and to the Class Dean within a week of the occurrence or detection of the instance. This report will remain part of the student's file until graduation. The student may appeal the judgement of the individual faculty member according to the procedures for reviewing a disputed final grade described in the Statutes and the Student Handbook.

A second offense against academic honesty will result in automatic dismissal from the College. The Committee on Academic Standing shall serve as the final board of appeal for violations of academic honesty which result in the dismissal of a student from the College.

Annual Awards (Page 19)

Senior Competition

The Beethoven Prize awarded to a senior for the best historical or analytical essay on music or for an original composition.

Education (Page 55)

The following paragraph should be inserted at the end of the section:

Some students may take courses in education at Clark University as well as at Holy Cross to help prepare them as teachers of mathematics and science.

The third line of the paragraph should be replaced with the following:

... Russian Studies, Russian language (through Composition and Conversation), one course Russian...
