Historical Background:

Jesuit Missions, Inc. dates back to 1927 with the founding of the magazine Jesuit Missions. This magazine came into existence "at the express wish of Very Reverend Father General and in compliance with His Paternity's general plan of having every Assistancy represented by a magazine devoted to the missions." In 1927, the Provincials of the United States and Canada decided to replace The Pilgrim, then published by the Maryland-New York Province, with a monthly mission magazine known as Jesuit Missions. It was incorporated under the law of New York as the "Jesuit Mission Press, Inc." Its purpose in particular was to advance the cause and promote the interests of the missions belonging to the Provinces of the United States and Canada by "exciting zeal for our missions by broadcasting a knowledge of them; to arouse the missionary spirit in our youth and encourage missionary vocations; to stimulate the generosity of Catholics for the support of Jesuit Missions; and last, to constitute a permanent committee for the advancement and protection of our missionary interests through its Board of Editors." In 1927, 1929, and 1931, several clauses were added to the goals: increasing the number of resident editors, authorizing the publication of books and pamphlets on the missions, and giving rules for the allocation of monies received from drives for subscriptions in parish churches and other gifts. It was soon thereafter 1931 that all North American provinces appointed a Mission Director.

Jesuit Missions Board of Directors: Each provincial mission director automatically became a member of the Jesuit Mission Board of Directors, thus forming this board with the mission director of each American province and the two Canadian provinces. From 1938 until 1943, this group was known as the Mission Procurators of the North American Provinces. From 1943 until the 1960s, the group was called AJMA, the American Jesuit Missionary Association, defined as "a cooperative organization composed of ten non-profit corporations in New York, Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, New Orleans, San Francisco, and Portland, Oregon." Its objectives included providing educational facilities on the primary, secondary, and college-university levels, and adult education; to engage in relief and welfare services; to improve housing and living conditions; and to work for the spiritual, moral, and material progress of underprivileged areas of the world. Such areas included Caroline and Marshall Islands, the Philippines, Taiwan, Japan, Korea, India, Ceylon, Nepal, Iraq, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Honduras, and Alaska.

This national group's first annual meeting was held in 1938, subsequently gathering in cities across the United States and Canada.

In 1943, the American Jesuit Missionary Association was established. Its purpose was the discussion of matters of common interest to the missions of the Assistancy. Regular annual meetings were mandated with the Editor-in-Chief of Jesuit Missions presiding ex officio. The Jesuit Missions Editor-in-Chiefs were: Rev. Ignatius W. Cox, SJ from 1927-1929; Rev. Joseph A. Gschwend, SJ, from 1929-1939; and Rev. Calvert P. Alexander, SJ, from 1939-1962 and Rev. James P. Cotter, SJ from 1962-1967, until the last issue of Jesuit Missions was published in Dec 1967.

After the Jesuit Missions magazine ceased publication, fund-raising efforts were turned over to the Provinces. Jesuit Missions was reorganized with new duties. It became a separate corporation, a research and program development agency for all the province mission offices in the United States and Canada. Jesuit Missions, Inc. represented the ten provinces of the United States Assistancy and the two Canadian provinces whose function included formulating mission policies and decisions on a national level in United States. It also focused on international issues of import. IED (International Educational Development), formerly known as Association for Cultural Exchange (ACE), was its subsidiary corporation, designed to offer special assistance to missionaries in the areas of U.S. government aid, foundation applications, and the general field of development. In the mid-1970s, Jesuit Missions, Inc. moved its headquarters to Washington, D.C. That office was staffed by an Executive Secretary: Rev. John Kelley, SJ from 1970-1975, Rev. Simon E. Smith, SJ of the New England Province from 1975-1984, Rev. James Malley, SJ also of the New England Province from 1984-1987 when Rev. Simon E. Smith, SJ resumed the post. In the early 1990s, Jesuit Missions, Inc underwent another change, this time dissolving the corporation and transforming it into another: Jesuit International Missions soon renamed Jesuit International Ministries (JIM). IED was also dissolved a bit earlier, in 1989, yet its name continues aligned with another organization. A news article about IED and its background gives the following description:

“International Educational Development, Inc. (IED) is a nonsectarian, non-governmental organization granted consultative status at the United Nations by Dag Hammarskjöld. Originally founded by Jesuit fathers to assist hospitals and schools in developing countries, in 1989 IED merged with the Los Angeles base Humanitarian Law Project and broadened its scope to advocate & promote world-wide compliance with human rights & humanitarian law.”

Jesuit Missions, Inc. was controlled by the Jesuit Missions Board of Directors and had its own directors and personnel. The Jesuit Missions Board of Directors and its central office at Jesuits Missions, Inc. was a consultative advisory board on mission matters for the Provincials of the United States and Canada.

See Brief Histories from 1974 and 1989 following for more information on Jesuit Mission, Inc.

Scope and Content:

The series contains the material from Jesuit Missions, Inc., and the Jesuit Missions Board, the Mission Procurators of North American Provinces, The American Jesuit Missionary Association, and Jesuit International Ministries. The bulk of the materials are records of Board Meetings. The records contain minutes, correspondence, financial information, project information, and statistics reflecting the work of each group. The Board Meeting records contain reports and data of fund-raising and mission activities specific to the New England Province that are not available elsewhere. The records are arranged chronologically.

JESUIT MISSIONS, INC.

GENERAL PURPOSE OF JESUIT MISSIONS, INC.

Is set forth in articles II and III of the Constitution. It is a SERVICE and COMMUNICATION center to promote the missionary effort of the Jesuits of the United States and Canada.

FUNCTIONS PERFORMED BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE (i.e. the Executive Secretary)

1. Implements the policies and decisions of the board of directors. The Jesuit Missions Board of Directors is comprised of the Mission Directors of the ten U.S. and two Canadian provinces of the Society of Jesus.
2. Represents the board of directors at national and international meetings dealing with the international apostolate and transmits to them the pertinent data gathered at such meetings.
3. Serves in a liaison role and promotes communication, dialogue and interchange among province directors, mission superiors, and the men on the missions, principally through the JM Newsletter, the booklet, Studies in the International Apostolate of Jesuits, visits to the missions, and by encouraging visits of missionaries to the national office.
4. Plans and organizes ways of promoting a theology of missions and a greater awareness of the current views in the Church regarding the missions. Also seeks to inculcate a greater sensitivity among the rank and file Jesuits to the international dimensions of the Jesuit apostolate. Some specific means used are bi-monthly meetings with a special speaker and subsequent dialogue with him, the publication of the results in the Newsletter and "Studies...", promotion of Mission Seminars, occasional talks, etc.
5. Promotes interprovincial cooperation on the national level by working closely with representatives of the Jesuit Conference and other national officers. This effort is twofold: 1) Keeping informed of their activities, 2) Keeping them informed of JM activities. Close contact is also kept with the U.S. Catholic Mission Council, Center of Concern, Latin America Bureau, CARA, Conference of Major Superiors of Men, Leadership Conference of Religious Women, etc.
6. Administers the routine functions of the national office such as correspondence, the handling of wills and bequests, the keeping of financial accounts and portfolio, consultations with lawyers and professional people when needed, providing information upon request, etc.

BRIEF OUTLINE OF JM BOARD'S ACTIVITIES & ACCOMPLISHMENTS, 1964-89

Introduction

As a background for the dialogue between the JC and JM Boards in May '89, this outline tries to give an overview of how the JM Board sees itself and its functions over the last two decades. In lieu of a bare chronology or a more discursive narrative, these activities have been simply grouped here more or less according to the "publics" or beneficiaries they aimed to serve. Editorial or evaluative comments seek no more than to highlight the significance of JM Board endeavors as we see them.

U.S. Jesuit missionaries

In 1964 a "new Jesuit Missions" was created to up-date the identity, structure, staff and overall functions of "JM Inc." which had been a national Jesuit entity since 1926, known chiefly for its publication, Jesuit Missions (1926-68) which "told the story" of U.S. Jesuit missionary exploits worldwide. The first major endeavor of this renewed JM was the 1966 Le Moyne meeting of Mission Superiors who were brought in from the field that we might listen to their needs — and then undertake to meet them. A side-effect of that Le Moyne meeting was a sense of common purpose among the Mission Superiors, despite substantial theological differences.

From 1966 to 1969 JM sponsored renewal programs for U.S. Jesuit missionaries on furlough and in 1967 set up International Educational Development to ship goods to missions with the help of USAID (IED went independent in 1972). The New York JM Inc. office (distinct from the New York Province's own mission bureau) was a significant center of hospitality, new ideas, programs, and leadership in developing missiology. By 1968 a new thrust was clearly emerging: progressive, cutting-edge, outward-reaching, globally-oriented and controversial. The publications of JM (see below under U.S. Church) served primarily U.S. Jesuit missionaries but their influence was far broader, especially in the U.S. Society and church.

Specific services to individual missionaries or their projects were left more and more to the Mission Procurators so that the JM Board could focus its energies on larger issues of policy, personnel, planning, theology, networking here and abroad, and influencing groups of similar concern.

U.S. Jesuit Provincials

A JM position paper in 1969, "An Assistancy Approach to Mission," began to alter the way U.S. Jesuit Provincials thought about their missions and their world. As the Jesuit Conference was emerging from the Jesuit National Leadership Program, the internal (somewhat ideological) differences at the JM headquarters in New York led to its restructuring and John Kelly, former Oregon Provincial, was appointed by Robert Mitchell as JM's Executive Secretary (1970); he moved the JM office to Washington the following year for the sake of smoother collaboration with the conference.

The JM Board was now made up (ideally) of full-time Province Mission Directors, distinct from Mission Procurators. They elected Si Smith as their secretary in 1975 and the JC Board appointed him to the post (re-elected and re-appointed in 1978 and 1981) to succeed Jack Kelley.

A self-education process of the Board, by which it had been inviting world renowned experts to address it on mission issues (and whose papers were the content of JM's Studies) since 1971, was put "on hold" in 1975 to devote energies to a self-study of the international apostolates of the U.S. Assistancy and to how the Board, through the Provincials, could better serve that changing reality. The results of that self-study were presented to the JC Board at a joint meeting in 1977, where the JC Board endorsed the current and planned activities of JM.

Immediately thereafter the JM Board offered the Provincials a set of guidelines for the cura personalis of third-world Jesuits living in our Assistancy and a checklist for the drawing up of contracts with missions or other Provinces; it simultaneously initiated a short-lived "International Switchboard" for placing personnel. The 1979 JC-commissioned study of "The Context of Our Ministries" profited from substantial dialogue of the writers with JM Board personnel. And in 1981, after two years of preparatory study and work, JM published its Mission Guidelines...for use by Jesuit Provincials of the American Assistancy. The next year a small consultation of JC and JM members was held in New York about Africa as an Assistancy priority.

Jim Malley was appointed to succeed Si Smith as secretary in 1984 and shortly thereafter started the process (still underway) of integrating the JM office into the JC staff as its Secretary for International Ministries. Board energies focused on communications, human rights, advocacy and strengthening the corporation. Smith was appointed to succeed Malley in 1987.

U.S. Assistancy Jesuits

JM brought together at Woodstock in 1967 some leading Jesuit theologians to explore contemporary missiology and then sought to diffuse these new ideas in a variety of ways. In 1973 the then-forming JCCF formatores met with the JM Board in Boston to search for ways of improving collaboration and keeping the international dimension integral to formation; again in Boston four years later the dialogue was continued with JCCF representatives.

Horizons for Justice was designed with JM help in 1973 (and from 1975 was directed by JM's secretary) to "conscientize" U.S. middle-aged Jesuits to the realities of the third world; it benefited over 100 U.S. Jesuits until its demise in 1983.

Just as GC XXXII was getting underway, JM sponsored a national Conference on "The International Dimensions of our Jesuit Apostolates" in August, 1974, at St. Paul.

U.S. Church

Jesuit Missions and later JM Newsletter (1968-78) were instruments of educational import which reached far beyond U.S. Jesuits. From 1971 Studies in the International Apostolate of Jesuits served both Jesuits and a much broader public, both U.S. and worldwide, for the dissemination of new ideas, both substantial and germinative.

In 1974-75 Jack Kelley was very instrumental in achieving the collegial structuring of the U.S. Catholic Mission Council which died in 1981 and was re-born from its ashes at a national Mission Congress in Baltimore two years later with JM's help.

Also in 1975 JM joined the Division of Overseas Ministries of the National Council of Churches USA and Board members continue to serve on various NCC commissions.

For the next two years JM, through its secretary who was overall coordinator, helped prepare and bring off the first joint meeting of CMSM and LCWR, which focused on faith and justice for 1000 major religious superiors.

In 1983 JM launched (and funded and closely monitored for three years) both the Jesuit International Volunteers and Jesuit Refugee Service/USA.

Jesuit Curia, Rome

In 1971 the then newly-constituted JM Board (Province Mission Directors) met with Fr. Arrupe, absorbed much of his global vision and enthusiasm, and from then on constantly felt its parameters of concern and action to be as broad as the Society. The Board submitted postulata to both GC XXXII and GC XXXIII. Again in 1975 (during its self-study) the Board met formally with Fr. Arrupe in St. Louis and later that same year provided substantial input to and participation in a meeting at the Curia, right after GC XXXII, on "Interprovincial and International Collaboration in the Society." Again in 1978 JM was asked to participate in a large Curia conference on "Fraternal Collaboration in Evangelization" which eventuated in the "twinning" arrangements now in force. This year, 1989, JM will again participate in a meeting called by Fr. Kolvenbach on "Missionary Animation of the Society Today."

Third-World Jesuits

The 1968 JM-sponsored meeting of Asian Jesuits in Hong Kong was a watershed in US/third-world Jesuit relations for it led to vigorous self-assertion by Asian Jesuits (especially Filipinos), permanently altered inter-Assistancy relationships and catalyzed the structuring of the East Asian Assistancy.

One of the stated goals of the Horizons for Justice Program (1973-83) was to create a "constituency for justice" among U.S. Jesuits for the benefit of third-world, especially Latin American, peoples.

In 1977 the Jesuits in El Salvador were threatened with death if they did not leave the country within 30 days; JM mounted a large national campaign (via USCC, CMSM, LCWR and others) of public protest and advocacy to save their lives. Another major international advocacy campaign was launched by JM in 1981 when Guatemalan Jesuit Eduardo Pellecer was abducted and "brainwashed."

The JC Board asked JM in 1978 to investigate the feasibility of a new U.S. Jesuit mission in Paraguay which led to the present New Orleans involvement there.

World Church

As part of its emerging global consciousness in the late 60s and early 70s, JM set up in 1972 a foreign disaster relief fund which was soon budgeting $30,000 annually to help in unpredictable disasters such as hurricanes, earthquakes, etc. The JC Board later set up a similar fund; both were combined in 1977 at a total of $30,000. JM also participated in funding, by small grants, numerous church-related efforts in development, advocacy, research, missiology, education — all to benefit third-world peoples.

All the above are actions of the JM Board as such. Through its secretary it also carried out a great variety of analogous activities, either mandated or endorsed by the full Board: representation to numerous organizations, associations, movements; countless talks to Jesuit novices and scholastics, both in USA and worldwide, about the Society and the church in the third world; publication of articles on mission-related topics.
