New England Jesuit Archives Series Description

Record Group: 11.1 Missions Offices Records

Series: New England Jesuit Foreign Missions (NEJFM) – Iraq

Dates of Collection: 1920-2011

Size of Collection: 31 boxes: 23-5” boxes + 8-2.5” boxes = 13.5 linear feet

Historical Background:

The Iraq Mission was begun in 1932 in response to a request of bishops in Iraq at the time when the country had just obtained its independence after four centuries of Turkish rule followed by fourteen years of British influence. Catholic bishops in Iraq had made a request to Pope Pius XI for American Jesuits to establish a school in Baghdad. The Pope turned to Rev. Ledochowski, the Jesuit Father General, who then contacted Rev. Edward Phillips, S.J. of the Maryland-New York Province who undertook the planning of a secondary school in Baghdad.

This mission was funded by the Presidents of eight Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States who formed an association, the Iraq-American Educational Association in Baghdad, to assist the educational work in Iraq. The eight institutions were: Boston College, the University of Detroit, Fordham University, Georgetown University, Loyola University in Chicago, Loyola University in New Orleans, St. Louis University, and the University of San Francisco. This agreement was later registered and approved by the Ministry of Interior in Baghdad. Responsibility for the mission was assigned to the New England Province. Over time, the mission consisted of two schools for the general public: Baghdad College and Al Hikma University, an Arabic House of Studies for Jesuits, and a Minor Seminary.

The initial work for the school was done by Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J. of Georgetown University in 1931. In 1932, Rev. William A. Rice, S.J. of the New England Province was named Superior of the Mission and went to Iraq with one other Jesuit, Rev. Edward F. Madaras, S.J. of the Chicago Province. Rev. J. Edward Coffey, S.J. of the New York Province, and Rev. John A. Mifsud, S.J. of the California Province followed soon after. They established Baghdad College, a high school for boys offering a six-year college preparatory science curriculum. Four years of physics, chemistry, biology and six years of mathematics were required, all taught in English, although most other subjects were taught in Arabic.

For many years the Rector of Baghdad College also served as the Superior of the Mission. In 1939, Francis B. Sarjeant, S.J. became Superior-Rector and in 1945, Edward F. Madaras, S.J. assumed the office. In 1952, Thomas Hussey, S.J. was named Superior-Rector. In 1958, Michael J. McCarthy, S.J. served in the post. The first Superior of the Mission, distinct from the Rectors of Baghdad College and Al-Hikma University, John J. Williams, S.J., was appointed in 1961 and Michael J. McCarthy, S.J. became the first Rector of Baghdad College who did not also serve as Superior. In 1965, John A. Carty, S.J. became Rector of Baghdad College and stayed in the office until the school closed in 1969. In 1967, John J. Donohue, SJ was named Mission Superior and held the office until the Jesuit mission in Iraq ended.

In 1956, a second institution named Al Hikma University was opened by the Jesuits. This institution was begun at the urging of parents who were impressed with the education at Baghdad College. In 1956 the Iraqi government granted the Jesuits 170 acres of land to house the school. Al Hikma initially offered two programs of study: business administration and civil engineering. In 1964 a liberal arts program was added.

Archives of the New England Province Society of Jesus

Al Hikma began as an all male institution and became co-educational in 1962. Of its 700 students, one-fifth were women and the enrollment kept increasing despite the fact that the institution charged admission while the University of Baghdad did not. John P. Banks, S.J. was appointed Rector in 1958 and in 1965, Richard J. McCarthy, S.J. served in the position until the Jesuits were expelled in 1968.

From 1932 until 1969, Iraq's population grew from 3.5 million to 8.5 million and the Jesuit population from four to sixty-one. Also during this time, the Jesuit schools' student population rose from 120 students in one building in 1932 to 1,100 students in ten buildings at Baghdad College and to 700 students in five buildings at Al Hikma. Most of those fifteen buildings were constructed by Leo Guay, S.J. The building projects were funded by grants received from the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, the Ford Foundation, and the Catholic Near East Welfare Association.

A Lay Apostolate program was established during the 1960s. These "lay apostles", "lay missionaries", or "lay volunteers" were mostly American college graduates who volunteered to teach while living at the institutions. Most of them were graduates of Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States. The numbers of lay apostles increased each year and by 1969, sixty lay apostles had participated in the program. They served at both Baghdad College and Al-Hikma University. (See: RG 11.1 Missions Offices Records, Personnel Series for information on the Lay Missionary / Apostolate program.)

The government in Iraq was far from stable. There were forty-one changes of government during the thirty-seven years of the Mission to Iraq; with seven coups occurring from 1937-1941. On July 14th 1958, a revolution took place, King Faisal II was assassinated, and the form of government changed from a monarchy to a republic. Two events occurred in 1967 and 1968 that led to the expulsion of the Jesuits: the Six-Day War in June, 1967 and a coup that ushered into power the Baath Socialist Party in July, 1968. "In June 1967, the Israelis took over Arab territories and displaced Arab refugees. The wave of anti-American feeling reached new intensity because of the U.S. stance in the area and it became clear that the continued presence of American Jesuits was more tenuous than ever" writes Rev. Joseph MacDonnell, S.J. in his introduction to Jesuits Along the Tigris. In July 1968, a coup took place by a moderate political group, but this government was ousted a few weeks later by the Baath Party, a socialist group. The Baath Party promised to rid Iraq of spies and Israeli aggression. In early September 1968 the new government announced that Al Hikma would be "Iraqicized", meaning that it would take over the school and run it, with no compensation given to the Jesuits. At the time, the student population of Al Hikma had a larger percentage of non-Christians than Christians. On October 30, 1968 the new government stated that eight Jesuits were to be expelled from the country immediately. In retaliation, Al Hikma faculty decided not to teach until the reasons for expulsion were forthcoming. The government responded by ordering the twenty-eight Al Hikma Jesuits to leave the country within five days. An inventory of all equipment, books, and buildings was conducted and the President of Al Hikma University, in the presence of the Apostolic Nuncio, signed the order to make it clear that this property was being taken from the Jesuits. The Al Hikma Jesuits left Baghdad in late November 1968. Nine months later, on August 29, 1969, the thirty-three Baghdad College American Jesuits received notification of dismissal from the country as well. Two Iraqi Jesuits, Clarence J. Burby, S.J. and Yusuf H.R. Seferta, S.J. remained as Prefects of the Students for Baghdad College and taught religion, choosing to leave Iraq in 1970. Fifteen of the expelled American Jesuits continued to work in the Middle East: five in Egypt and ten in Lebanon. Four went into scholarly work in Beirut; the rest of them went to other ministries in the United States and Jamaica.

During the 1970s, the former Al Hikma school buildings were used by the government as a trade school. All equipment and library materials were given to the University of Baghdad. Baghdad College remained a college preparatory school with the University of Baghdad supplying teachers. The church, the Jesuit cemetery, and the Jesuit residence were given to the care of the Chaldean Patriarch who used the residence as an orphanage.

In 2003, after the Ba'ath Party Government was overthrown and Saddam Hussein was executed, the New England Province began to work on a final property settlement regarding Baghdad College and Al-Hikma. Information about the process and settlement can be found in the records of Rev. Michael D. Linden, Assistant for International Apostolates, see Directors Records series.

Archives of the New England Province Society of Jesus

—Much of the Baghdad Mission factual information was taken from a 1974 article by Rev. Joseph MacDonnell, S.J. & from “Al Hikma University, 1968” speech by Richard J. McCarthy, S.J., Rector-President of Al Hikma University.

Scope and Content:

The NEJFM—Iraq Series is sub-divided into the following series: Alumni and Reunions, Contracts/Essential Documents, Iraq Expulsion, Finances, Historical, Places/Works—Al Hikma, Places/Works—Baghdad College, Province Planning and Superiors’ Correspondence. It covers the early 1930s to the 2000s. The bulk of the records are from the 1950s and 1960s. The Financial records are the most extensive.

The Alumni and Reunions series contains directories of alumnus, information related to reunions, Reunion Booklets and miscellaneous material. This is the most recent material in the collection.

The Contracts/Essential Documents series contains copies of initial agreements with the Iraqi government, Statutes, Constitution, Certificate of Incorporation and seizure documents. Many of the earliest documents are copies made from microfilm, also included in the collection. Also see: RG 11.2 Iraq Mission Records, Superior of Mission Records for another file of essential documents.

The Iraq Expulsion series contains reports, memos, papers, correspondence, and newspaper clippings related to the expulsion of the American Jesuits from Iraq in 1968 and 1969, as well as information on the Baghdad properties and proposals for the future of the men on the Iraq Mission.

The Finances series contains information specific to the Iraq Mission and its works. It contains records of benefactors, legacies and wills, financial reports and statements, foundations and grants sought and received, scholarships funded, and miscellaneous material. Grant oversight and administration materials from organizations include gifts from the Ford Foundation, the Gulbenkian Foundation, the Frank J. Lewis Foundation, and the Catholic Near East Welfare Association (CNEWA). Fr. Hussey’s Promotional Work for Al Hikma University, 1958-1960, is very well organized and provides a great deal of material about Al Hikma, the institution, as well as various fund raising work.

The Baldwin Trust material requires clarification. Mrs. Robert Baldwin became interested in the New England Jesuit work in Iraq in the 1950s. She donated money to the work in Baghdad then set up a trust account to continue the work. When she set up the account, half the money was to go directly to the Jesuit Missions of New England work in Baghdad, the other half to ACE, The Association for Cultural Exchange, a non-denominational, tax-exempt organization whose Board of Directors included men prominent in their fields, which fell under the auspices of AJMA, the American Jesuit Mission Association office. This ACE organization had previously been known as AID, the Agency for International Development. ACE was renamed IED, Inc., International Educational Development, Inc. in 1963. IED was created as a non-religious, secular incorporation in order to interface with the US Government as it was able to access excess government property and obtain foundation and government grants as well as US aid and US international development monies. Its primary function was to ship materials from the US to various missions, paid via the US Aid program. IED involved more than the New England Province Jesuits; it had members from various orders, dioceses, and lay organizations nationally. When the New York Times reported in the October 1, 1967 newspaper that “the United States had been swindled out of $500,000 to finance a Lebanese school that doesn’t exist” and showed that the IED organization was directly involved, Mrs. Baldwin took steps to remove her money from the Trust. The records of all of these various organizations and trusts are inexorably intertwined; therefore, the three boxes form one series.

The Historical series contains published articles about the Iraq Mission, excerpts of the diary of Rev. William A. Rice, S.J., first Rector of the Iraq Mission and Baghdad College, and a diary kept during the regency of Rev. John P. Banks, S.J. who later became the President of Al Hikma College. This series contains the house histories, although there may be others included in correspondence files. Also included are reports and accounts of various special events in the history of the mission, for example, the visit of the King of Iraq in 1957 and the visit of Fr. General Pedro Arrupe, S.J. in 1965. Information files about the country and government of Iraq and the Middle East are also in this series. Maps, publications, newspaper clippings, and materials generated by the U.S. Government are included.

The Places/Works Series is organized by school with a series for Al Hikma and another for Baghdad College. The Al Hikma series contains correspondence between Mission Superiors and the Province Offices, and files related to the establishment and growth of the school, planning and development, professor recruitment, promotional materials, statistics, relationship with the U.S. Government and miscellaneous files. The Baghdad College series consists largely of correspondence between Mission Superiors, other missionaries and the Province Missions Offices. A small amount of promotional materials and statistics are included. Because Al Hikma was originally housed at Baghdad College, information about the earliest period of Al Hikma may also be included in the Baghdad College records of the 1950s.

The Province Planning series consists of reports generated during the phase of Province Planning in the years 1968-1969. These reports contain histories, analysis, statistics and projections about the future of the Iraq Mission immediately following the Jesuit expulsion from Iraq.

The Superiors' Correspondence consists of the letters between the Mission Superior and the various Province Mission Offices from 1953-1973. When using this correspondence, remember that the Mission Superior and the Rector of Baghdad College were one and the same until 1961.

Most of the material is arranged alphabetically or chronologically. Although there were some runs of well maintained and organized files, much of this material was quite fragmented. The final arrangement is the creation of the archives.

Note: The terms Iraq Mission and Baghdad Mission are used interchangeably by the Province.
